Romney Approves Summer Expansion

Increased Police Patrols At Wollaston Beach

Gov. Mitt Romney has approved a $35,000 appropriation to pay for increased State Police patrols along Wollaston Beach and Quincy Shore Drive during the summer months.

Sen. Michael Morrissey said he was pleasantly surprised to see Romney approve the appropriation because the governor has vetoed it in the past. The governor, however, has seen every veto overriden by the state Legislature.

"Every year he has vetoed it, indicating we shouldn't be telling the agency how to spend its money," said Morrissey. "Our answer is, this guarantees we get the attention we need during the summer months.

"We do give the State Police the flexibility to make their own decisions, but we want to make sure the money is there," said Morrissey.

In addition, Romney signed off on an $85,000 appropriation in Fiscal 2006 for Quincy's community policing program.

City Conducts Seminar On Terrorism Threats

Quincy's Emergency Management Agency recently held a one-day seminar dedicated to bringing public safety workers and officials up to date on the important issue of radiation detection and threats related to terrorism.

In light of the heightened state of alert in today's society, the agency invited police officers, firefighters, health department employees to learn about equipment used to detect radiation and the dangers associated with home-made bombs, according to Tom Gorman, director of the Quincy's Emergency Management Agency.

The one-day course, sponsored by the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA), informed public safety officials about the threat of radiation poisoning and improved their knowledge of radiation detection devices. The city has several such devices in its possession, according to Gorman.

All public safety employees and city officials who participated in the course were certified to use the equipment by MEMA, according to Gorman.

He also said the city's radiation detection equipment has been was re-certified for use by the state.

"We felt it was important to familiarize everyone with the threat of radiation poisoning, dirty bombs and other threats like that," said Gorman, pointing to Quincy's close proximity to Boston.

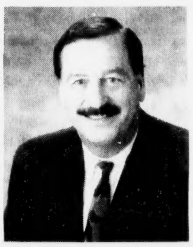
3 Open School Seats As Mariano Decides Not To Run



Veteran School Committeeman Ron Mariano will not seek a fifth term, a surprise decision that will create a third vacant seat on that board in this year's city election.

Vice Chairman Michael McFarland is running for the city councillor at-large seat Frank McCauley is stepping into retirement from.

Jo-Ann Bragg has announced she is retiring from the political scene and will not seek a fourth term.

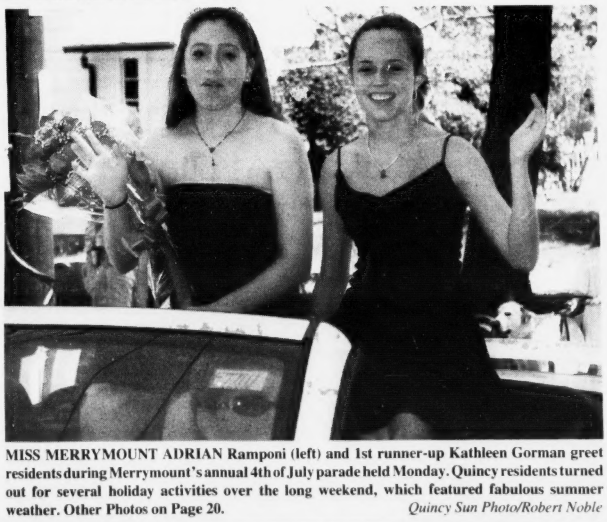
There had been speculation that Mariano might not seek re-election but his decision still came as a surprise because he had picked up nomination papers.

Eight candidates had already taken out nomination papers before Mariano's announcement Tuesday and now a scramble for the three seats is likely.

RON MARIANO

With three vacant seats — a political rarity — and a large field of contenders, the school committee race will probably take top billing on this year's ballot.

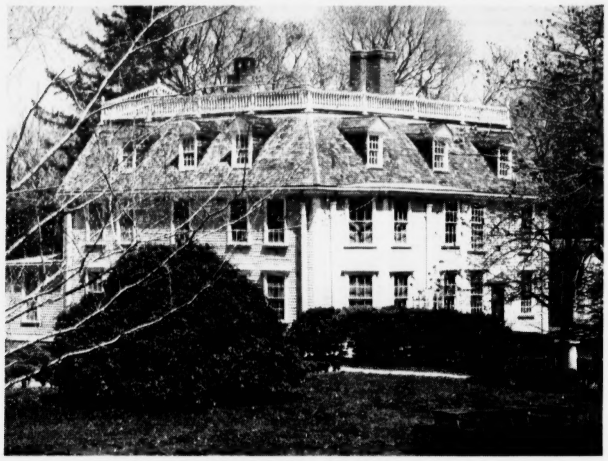
Going into this week, Mayor William Phelan has no opponent in his bid for a third term. And all is unusually quiet on the city council front.



In his announcement, Mariano, a state representative, noted "the increased demands" on him as chairman of the Joint Committee on Financial Services at the State House.

"I appreciate the confidence the people of Quincy have placed in me over the past 16 years by allowing me to represent their interests on the school committee," he said.

"Together we have accomplished much to improve the Quincy Public School System from 'content to container.'



"I have enjoyed serving the taxpayers, the students, the parents and the staff of the Quincy public schools in an effort to make our system the very best in the state.

Summer Tours Not Affected

Major Restoration Work To Dorothy Quincy Homestead

One of Quincy's historic treasures is about to receive a major facelift, as restoration work begins on the exterior of the Dorothy Quincy Homestead.

The National Historic Landmark will undergo a comprehensive restoration program, which is scheduled to be completed by the end of July. In addition to painting the Homestead's exterior, the restoration includes reglazing its 55 windows, repairing the foundation and replacing the gutters, downspouts and balustrade.

The work is scheduled to be performed by Michael Lange, a general contractor who specializes in restoring historic homes. It is being funded by the Dames, a grant from a Boston foundation and by the Commonwealth's Office of Private Public Partnerships in the Executive Office of Environmental Affairs.

"We're thrilled that this collaboration between the Colonial Dames and the Commonwealth will enable us to make some much-needed improvements to this historic treasure," said Mary Robinson, who oversees the Quincy Homestead for the Colonial Dames.

Although the Commonwealth owns the Homestead, the Colonial Dames have furnished and maintained its interior and offered tours since the early 1900s.

The restoration work will not affect tours of the home scheduled for the summer, according to Robinson. The Dorothy Quincy Homestead will be open for free tours on July 23, Aug. 30 and Sept. 10 from 1 to 4 p.m.

Quincy resident Trinh Nikki Tu Ly recently graduated from Stonehill College in Easton, Mass., the school announces.

With $2.9 Million MassDevelopment Bond

Quincy Community Action Programs Purchases Downtown Office Location

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. announces it has purchased its main office location at 1509 Hancock St. in Quincy Center.

The purchase was made possible by a $2,900,000 financing package from MassDevelopment, which utilized a combination of tax-exempt and taxable bonds, and refinancing of other QCAP properties for the purchase and renovation of the building. The financing package will enable the human services provider to remain in its home of more than 20 years with no negative impact on programs and the more than 18,000 people served each year.

"It is certainly fitting to have achieved such a milestone in the year we celebrate our 40th anniversary," said Charles J. Phelan, Jr., QCAP Board President. "The board of directors is thrilled to be an instrumental part of this historic moment. We are grateful to all our partners, MassDevelopment, the Bank of America and Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc., who made this important acquisition possible."

"We are happy to partner with Quincy Community Action Programs to support this important acquisition," said Robert L. Culver, MassDevelopment President/CEO. "This financing package showcases the power of partnership, as it involved not only MassDevelopment and QCAP, but also Bank of America and Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. Congratulations to everyone involved for securing this organization's vital role in this region for years to come."

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is a human services provider targeting low-income families and individuals in Quincy and surrounding communities.

Since 1965 QCAP has been dedicated to improving the quality of life and providing opportunities for self-sufficiency through a range of services designed to meet changing community needs. Bank of America purchased the MassDevelopment-issued bonds after the closing, and Daniel Flynn brokered the real estate transaction.

"I know I speak on behalf of our staff and clients when I say we're extremely pleased to partner with MassDevelopment, Bank of America and Mr. Flynn to make our dream of owning this building a reality," said Beth Ann Strollo, QCAP's Executive Director.

"This partnership allows our organization to continue to do good work for low-income people and the community in an accessible location. If not for the partnership and the related 100 percent financing we would have been faced with the very real possibility of relocation, and ultimately major space cost increases - both of which could have negatively impacted our client services," Strollo added.

"I would like to congratulate QCAP on their purchase of 1509 Hancock Street," said Daniel J. Flynn III. "I am delighted that QCAP was able to purchase the building and I was able to facilitate the process. This sale reaffirms their commitment to Quincy, the citizens of this fine city, and their mission to help all in need."

Quincy Community Action Programs, Inc. (QCAP) is a private, nonprofit organization that provides a variety of services to low and moderate-income people to help them improve the quality of their lives and move towards economic self-sufficiency. Established in 1965 as one of Massachusetts' 25 community action agencies (CAAs), QCAP addresses the needs of residents in Quincy, and surrounding Norfolk County and South Shore communities.

MassDevelopment, the state's finance and development authority, partners with businesses and local officials to stimulate growth across the Commonwealth. In fiscal year 2004, the agency arranged financing for or managed 201 projects statewide totaling more than $1.25 billion. These projects supported the creation of more than 5,500 jobs and 2,445 housing starts.

Officials Want All K-3 Students Enrolled By '08

School Dept. Revamping Early Literacy Program

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Quincy Public Schools (QPS) is completely revamping its early literacy program with a new plan that school officials say will improve the reading skills of elementary school students.

Beginning this fall, students in kindergarten through grade three at the Montclair, Merrymount, Snug Harbor and Bernazzani schools will enroll in a reading program that represents a marked change in direction for QPS.

The new curriculum, Harcourt's "Trophies" program, tailors reading material to students based on their progress, allows for more personal attention with reading specialists and tracks students' progress more closely, according to school officials.

In addition, the program contains greater safeguards for children who begin to fall behind. Students failing to keep up will be monitored and tutored on a one-to-one basis, officials say.

City and school officials are touting the plan as an effective way to meet federal No Child Left Behind guidelines.

According to the 2002 legislation, state and local school systems are required to improve reading instruction for K-3 students and to ensure that all children learn to read well by the end of third grade.

"This program is going to make a real difference for our school kids," said Mayor William Phelan, a strong backer of the Trophies plan. "Getting to kids early and giving them the tools necessary to be able to read at grade level will avert many of the problems that might otherwise happen if we didn't address this issue at an early stage," he said.

RICHARD DeCRISTOFARO

LINDA STICE

Last month, Phelan submitted to the city council a $270,000 supplemental funding item to pay for an expansion of the program. The city council supported the measure on a unanimous vote.

School officials researched several early literacy plans and decided to endorse the Trophies program, which is produced by Harcourt School Publishers, according to Frank Moffett, Quincy Public Schools' director of curriculum.

An integral part of the Trophies program involves "intervention" with students on a regular basis. Teachers will be trained to properly evaluate a student's reading ability and determine whether further tutoring is necessary, said Moffett.

As a result, students will often learn to read as individuals or in small groups. Students have a greater tendency to fall through the cracks in bigger groups, he said.

Special education and literacy teachers will be available to students on a one-on-one basis or in small groups, something that was not utilized to such an extent before, said Moffett.

"Every student will have his or her own reading program, with special interventions and special assessments," said School Supt. Richard DeCristofaro. "Students will get a tailor-made reading program."

School Committee member Linda Stice described the Trophies program as "the best plan out there," praising its focus of giving students more personal attention.

"Sometimes a child does need extra help," she said, "and when that child can get help early on, it can sometimes prevent the need for special education or many other problems down the line."

Nearly 50 other school departments in the Commonwealth either are using or planning to implement the

Star Of Sea To Reopen As Chapel On July 17

By TOM HENSHAW

Star of the Sea Church, the suppressed Catholic parish in Squantum, will reopen as a chapel Sunday, July 17, and remain open for one Sunday mass a week.

A spokesman for the Archdiocese of Boston said an announcement, scheduled for mid-afternoon Tuesday, would not be "finalized" until Wednesday and Thursday at the earliest.

"If it's true, that's great news for us," said Maureen Mazrimas, co-chairperson of the Friends of Star of the Sea, which has been fighting for chapel status for eight months.

""We keep hearing rumors but they never seem to materialize."

The Quincy Sun was told that, as of Tuesday, the only hurdle to reopening the church was receipt of a certificate of inspection from the city building department.

The chapel would be staffed parttime by priests from Sacred Heart Parish, which was named the welcoming parish when Star of the Sea closed after the last mass Oct. 24.

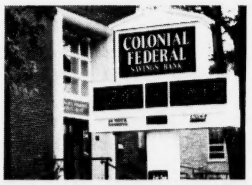
No other details of the probable reopening were available on Tuesday.

Star of the Sea was permitted to reopen for one mass on Easter Sunday, March 26, and a group from the Friends got to meet with the Meade-Eisner Committee as part of the deal.

The committee, headed by Peter Meade, executive vice president of Blue Cross Blue Shield, and Sister Janet Eisner, president of Emmanuel College, looked into possible changes in the church reconfiguration.

"If it's true that we are reopening as a chapel," said Mazrimas, "we have to thank the Meade Eisner Committee. They worked hard and made some good recommendations."

The Friends were not only seeking a pastoral presence for Sunday mass, but also a sacramental presence for weddings, funerals and baptisms.



They also sought to maintain holiday traditions on Holy Week, Easter and Christmas, as well as Catholic education programs for children.

Ironically, the original Star of the Sea Church began as a mission of Sacred Heart Parish in 1924. It became a parish in 1945. The church building was erected in 1957.

The property at 101-105 Bellevue Rd. is assessed at $1,00,100 for the church and $680,000 for the rectory and garage.

Sunbeams

Old Glory Deserves Better

(Following is a reprint of a Sunbeams column that appeared in June, 1995 regarding a proposed Constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from desecration. A new movement is underway this year. My feelings about the flag and the amendment remain the same today. Wonder how you feel).

Old Glory deserves better.

Protesters, for six years now, have had the right to burn and abuse the American flag as an expression of freedom of speech.

They were given that right by the U.S. Supreme Court in 1989 on a whisker-close 5-4 vote ruling that a Texas law against flag burning violated the First Amendment's guarantee of freedom of speech and expression.

The case involved a protester who tore an American flag down from a building and burned it in the street.

By a single vote, protesters and/or abusers actually got more than just the right to burn the flag. They can now do almost anything they want to do to it. If they get tired of burning it, they can spit on it, stomp on it, rip it to shreds, wrap garbage in it or wear a version of it on the seat of their pants.

It may be a right, but it just doesn't seem right.

We have come a long way — in the wrong direction, I think — since the days when Americans wouldn't let their flag even touch the ground out of respect.

A rebirth of respect, however, may be on the way.

A move to restore that respect through a Constitutional amendment is gathering momentum.

The amendment, proposed by The Citizens Flag Alliance, would give Congress and the states the "power to prohibit the physical desecration of the flag of the United States."

The Alliance numbers approximately 100 organizations representing over 27 million members including the American Legion, AMVETS, Elks, Congressional Medal of Honor Society, Marine Corps League, Veterans of Foreign War, Gold Star Wives, and other veterans, fraternal and law enforcement groups.

Amendment opponents, of course, are out there with the expected objections: if you take away the right to burn the flag then you are risking losing other freedoms such as religion and the right to assembly and leaving the door open for imposing other restrictions on freedom of speech, expression, and other liberties.

As a long-time newspaperman, I certainly don't want to see censorship or to lose the right to stand up and speak out on issues or the right to criticize the government and elected officials.

But I don't see giving our flag the respect it deserves a threat to freedom of speech, expression and those other liberties.

It just pains me to see someone thumbing his nose at our flag with the legal excuse that, hey pal, that's freedom of expression.

With freedom of speech and expression should come responsibility. You shouldn't have the right to go running up the aisle of a movie theater or through the lobby of a hotel yelling "Fire!" for the hell of it. Or sticking your head in a bank and yelling "Holdup!" Or standing on Hancock St. and yelling obscenities across the street.

John Adams, Samuel Adams and James Bowdoin couldn't have had flag burning in mind when here in Quincy they wrote the Massachusetts Constitution which became the model for the U.S. Constitution.

Opponents to the flag amendment might argue that we shouldn't be monkeying with the Constitution. Well, Constitutional amendments are nothing new. There have been something like 26 of them.

They might also contend that although burning the flag is a repugnant act, it really doesn't threaten our democracy.

Really?

If they can burn the flag and get away with it what else will they soon be able to do and get away with, too?

Do you really think we would perish as a democracy if people no longer had the right to put a match to Old Glory?

If destroying a mail box is a federal offense, destroying the American flag should be, too.

I can't help wondering about people who burn the flag. Are they incapable of expressing themselves in words instead? Do they like the attention? Does it make them feel important?

And I have a feeling that if some of them had to live under the flag of some other country for awhile, they would be mighty glad to come back and give Old Glory a salute.

And maybe a kiss to go with it.

Presentation On Lighthouses At Library July 11

Tour lighthouses across the country without leaving town, courtesy of a slide presentation on lighthouses to be featured Monday, July 11 at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library, 40 Washington St., Quincy Center.

Entitled "Lighthouses Far and Near," the free presentation will take viewers on a journey from Boston Light to the Great Lakes, the West Coast and back again, concluding with tales of our own lighthouses on the South Shore.

John Galluzzo, editor of "Wreck & Rescue Journal," will conduct the presentation based on his travels throughout the United States in search of tales of shipwrecks and lifesaving. Along the way, he has been treated to views of the country's lighthouses - short, tall, ornamental, utilitarian - each with its own story to tell.

The one-hour presentation is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Public Library. For more information, call 617-376-1301 or visit thomascranelibrary.org.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1950s postcard view of Wollaston Beach from near the end of Sachem Street. Although it looks pretty well used here, the beach was nearing the end of its days as a popular place to visit in Quincy. Pollution was a serious problem then but it was the sight of dirty sewage in the water that kept people out of it. Water quality measurement wasn't reported regularly if ever in those days. Hopefully, after billions of dollars have been spent over the last 20 years, the beach will once again become a popular Quincy destination. In the distance of this view, to the left of the sailboats, can be seen Moswetuset Hummock and the hangar at the old Squantum Naval Air Station that had been recently closed. Bob Keuther Set High Academic Standards At QHS

It was with great shock and disappointment that we read recently Mayor William Phelan's uncalled for comments regarding our former principal, Robert Keuther, and the dropout rate at Quincy High School.

To impugn Mr. Keuther's reputation as a principal and to name him as the single causative factor of the dropout rate for the previous four years is both irresponsible and unprofessional.

As the Quincy High School Parent Advisory Council, we believe the dropout rate for any school system is a complex, multitiered issue and the reporting of this number should be addressed as such. To assume Quincy High School and North Quincy High School are identical is all aspects and to conclude that both high schools should have identical dropout rates is a simplistic notion.

One major difference between the two schools is that Quincy High School is home to all of the non-English speaking high school students in the city. Our public schools are required to educate these students until age 22. Since it is an easy and inexpensive way to learn English, many of these students drop out once they have mastered a sufficient amount of English for them to get a job.

Although the majority of these students live in the North Quincy High School district, these students are counted in the Quincy High Schoo! total. Another example to explain this statistical discrepancy is that counted in the dropout rate are students who had recently transferred to Quincy High School from other cities and towns.

As an urban school, Quincy High's district has a decidedly transient population. Whether a student spends three years, one year, a couple of months or, as in several cases, only a few weeks at QHS before they decide to permanently leave school, they are counted in Quincy High's dropout rate.

Additionally, if a student is discovered to be a non-resident of the city, they are required to stop attending our high school and register in their new city or town. If that student chooses to not continue their education and they do not enroll at their new school, they too are counted in our high school's dropout rate.

Does any of this sound fair? We don't think so, but unfortunately, this is the way the dropout figures must be reported according to state regulations. Can one individual affect this rate? We believe it is highly unlikely.

Sadly enough, we feel there will probably always be students who choose to drop out and due to the unpredictable nature of teenagers, the dropout rate may change dramatically from year to year. To attribute Quincy High School's dropout rate solely to Bob Keuther is naive and imprudent.

For the record, we believe that under Mr. Keuther's direction the students and staff of Quincy High School thrived. Bob Keuther set high academic standards and every year challenged the students to "achieve their maximum potential."

NORTH QUINCY HIGH School student Lisa Rice (center) recently submitted a research paper on the various cities and towns called Quincy throughout the United States. Rice, an 11th grade student in Mera Kriz's history class, found 18 Quincys in the country, including Mississippi, Kentucky, Michigan and Florida. Pictured with her are classmates, from the left, Katherine Andreosatos, Maria Constantopoulos, Kevin Donovan and Emily Finn.

Lisa Rice Creates Travelogue of Quincys

NQHS Student Discovers There's No Place Like Home

After North Quincy High School student Lisa Rice learned about the various Quincys throughout the nation she came to a conclusion: there's no place like home.

Rice, a junior in teacher Mera Kriz's history class, created a travelogue based on the various cities and towns called Quincy in the United States. Rice found multiple places spread across the county and researched about a dozen in her travelogue.

For example, she discovered a Quincy in Pennsylvania. It is one of several Quincy townships in the United States. With a small population, it is quite a small place, she found.

Quincy, Kentucky is a very small town - a population of 726 - which is primarily a community made up of caucasians. Its weather is very similar to Quincy, Mass., she learned.

Quincy, Florida was named after John Quincy Adams, Rice discovered. Its economy started as a cotton center and then moved toward shade tobacco, making it one of the wealthiest towns in the states, she said.

In Illinois, Quincy was founded in 1818 by John Wood. It was officially named Quincy in 1825 when John Quincy Adams was president. This Quincy is home to station number one on an underground railroad route that traveled to Chicago. Its population is 41,150 and the second largest Quincy in America, Rice found.

Quincy, Texas was founded in 1891 but never found its footing as a community. It remains a ghost town to this day, with no population.

In Washington state, Quincy is a small town with a population of 5,165, she discovered. Tourism is a large part of the economy with the highlights being the Gorge Amphitheater and the Crescent Bar Recreation area.

"From this project I found that the Quincy I live in is definately the best and we should all be grateful we live here...." she wrote in her travelogue paper.

City Launches New Integrated Financial Management Software System

Mayor William Phelan announces the city has launched its new integrated financial management software system to streamline the city's bill payment process and create a more user-friendly and efficient system of local government.

Working with Tyler Technologies, parent company of Munis Software, the City of Quincy has transitioned its antiquated financial management software systems into the new efficient Munis system as of this week, Phelan said. Funding for the project was part of a bond initiative initiated by Phelan and approved by the City Council last year.

"I am committed to moving our city's financial management systems forward in a way that makes our government more efficient, user-friendly and transparent," Phelan said. "The new programs allow Quincy's local government to expand the services we offer residents while concurrently streamlining the way in which we provide services."

The Munis system will replace a series of patchwork programs that were need-driven by department and lacked cohesion, Phelan said.

Phelan singled out Chief Information Officer Ron Donovan for his work in implementing the system across the city's many financial management departments.

"I want to thank Ron Donovan for his outstanding work in organizing such a broad-reaching change in how our city operates," Phelan said. "He has advocated for and implemented a system that will better serve the residents of our city. The conveniences and efficiencies that the new system provides will aid all of our department's efforts to provide efficient city services."

City personnel have been attending training sessions and workshops in anticipation of a full implementation of Financials as of July 1. The Treasurer/Collector Department was the first implementation, going live with Tax Collections and Tax Billing on the system as of last week. Utility Billing is slated for a go live as of October 2005 and the Personnel and Payroll applications are slated for a go live as of Jan. 1, 2006.

"I want to thank the Mayor and the City Council for their support of this project," Donovan said. "It is important that we have 21st century capabilities to match the needs and expectations of our taxpayers."

ARCHBISHOP WILLIAMS HIGH School members of the National Honor Society from Quincy join Principal Mary Louise Sadowski to commemorate the school's collection of $2,427 for tsunami relief in South Asia. Students raised funds for about six weeks daily in the cafeteria and through the purchase of a non-dress code day. Funds were sent to Catholic Relief Services. Quincy's First Fourth Generation Funeral Director

Francis Sweeney Sworn In As Licensed Embalmer, Funeral Director

Francis M. Sweeney, 24, of Quincy, was recently sworn in as a licensed embalmer and funeral director at ceremonies conducted at the Boston offices of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts State Board of Embalming and Funeral Directing.

The oath was administered by the board's chairman, Kathy Cartmell-Sirrico of Plymouth.

Sweeney is the City of Quincy's first fourth generation embalmer and funeral director. He is the son of Ornella M.L. (DiCenso) and Richard T. Sweeney Jr. of Quincy.

Sweeney is a 1999 graduate of Archbishop Williams High School and a 2003 graduate of Boston College, where he received his degree with a double major in political science and theology.

FRANCIS SWEENEY

His professional education and degree in funeral service, with highest honors, was received from Mount Ida College in May 2004. After completing his two-year apprenticeship and passing the required national and state examinations, he was awarded his licenses this spring.

Sweeney comes from a family long dedicated to funeral service in Quincy and the South Shore. His great-grandfather was the late Dennis S. Sweeney and his grandfather was the late Richard T. Sweeney, who co-founded the Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals, Inc., of 1 Independence Ave. in 1949 with his late grand-uncle and namesake, Francis M. Sweeney, and currently his father, Richard T. Sweeney Jr.

He joins his father, Richard, and Funeral Director Eric J. McLaughlin of Quincy and staff at Sweeney Brothers Home for Funerals in continuing their tradition of 56 years of dedicated and personal service to families in need.

Trophies program, said Moffett.

Nationwide, more than two million students are using Harcourt's Trophies in more than 2,000 districts.

In 2002, the school department applied for and received a "Reading First" federal grant to comply with the No Child Left Behind legislation. The funds received were used to start up the early literacy program at the Lincoln Hancock School in West Quincy.

The pilot program proved to be so successful that school officials and Phelan pushed for its expansion at the Snug Harbor School. A state grant will allow the school department to implement the program there this fall, according to school officials.

The recent $270,000 appropriation will go toward implementing the program at Montclair, Merrymount and Bernazzani.

School officials and faculty this summer are gearing up for the program, learning the new curriculum through seminars and workshops.

Moffett said funds will go toward training the school staff, purchasing curriculum and reading materials and expanding the number of literacy specialists.

"We will have to change the way we teach," said Moffett. "Change is hard, but we are confident this will be ready to go in the fall."

Students will continue to learn in groups, but a good portion of their time will be spent in small groups or on a one-on-one basis with teachers and literacy specialists, he said. Currently, students in kindergarten through grade three spend about 90 minutes per day in a reading program. A good portion of that time slot will be spent on the Trophies curriculum, he said.

If all goes according to plan, every public elementary school in Quincy will be using the early literacy curriculum by 2008, said Phelan. A three-year plan has been drafted to implement the program throughout the elementary schools, he said.

The mayor said funding for the program has dried up at the federal level, but despite this obstacle he is prepared to increase municipal spending for schools each year to implement the program city-wide.

"We are not waiting around for the state and federal government," said Phelan. "One of the myths of the No Child Left Behind legislation is that the government is paying for it, but the funding is what got left behind."

Phelan said he wants the program to be phased-in over a three-year period to enable the school department to properly train teachers and purchase reading materials for the program.

QPS conducts several programs throughout the summer to complement the early literacy curriculum.

Last year, about 16 third-grade students did not meet MCAS reading standards, according to Moffett. Those students were given the opportunity to attend a three-week summer program aimed at improving their reading skills.

QPS is offering a similar program for at-risk students this summer, he said.

If students continue to fall behind in the fourth grade they are tracked and given additional tutoring throughout the school year, according to Moffett.

Phelan said all these initiatives combined will help to give young students a leg up as they move through school.

"Quincy is truly in the forefront of educational standards," said Phelan. "We are not going to stop until we have the best early literacy program in the state," he said.

Gorman stressed that the decision to host the seminar should not serve as a sign that Quincy is under any immediate threat.

"There is no need to get into panic mode," said Gorman. "This was just a good idea to ensure that Quincy is up to speed on any future threats."

Gorman said the agency will conduct its own seminar each year to refresh skills and bring public safety employees up to date on anti-terrorism activities.

'America In Bloom' Judges Visit Quincy

Judges from "America in Bloom" were in Quincy June 17-19 to evaluate the city's beautification efforts sprung by Mayor William Phelan's "Planting Pride in Quincy" campaign.

Matt Rosen of Des Moines, Iowa, and Loretta Hodyss of St. Augustine, Fla., were assigned to Quincy to judge the city based on eight criteria including tidiness, heritage conservation, floral displays, environmental effort, turf and groundcover, urban forestry, landscaped areas and community involvement.

Rosen, the horticulture manager for the City of Des Moines, and Hodyss, retired director of the St. John's County Cooperative Extension program, were guided around the city by members of the mayor's appointed Planting Pride committee. Sites on their tour included the Adams National Park, Quarry Hills Recreational Facility, athletic complexes, "pocket" parks and various neighborhood gardens that residents agreed to showcase.

Tom Koch, executive director of the Park, Forestry and Cemetery Departments, said he was pleased to showcase some of the latest park improvements, both completed and in the process of being completed, with judges to highlight the city's revitalization efforts.

"I think it's important to remember the revitalization portion of our efforts," Koch said. "This evaluation measures not just beautification but revitalization as well and I feel our department has made great strides in that area, with projects ranging from Adams Field to the forthcoming Adams Walk."

America in Bloom's competition structure pits comparable cities in categories based on population. Quincy fell in the 50,000 to 100,000 bracket and was matched up against Encinitas, Calif.; Haverhill, Mass.; Kettering, Ohio; and Boilingbrook, Ill.

America in Bloom will have the evaluations prepared for distribution at the awards symposium held in September in Columbus, Ohio. For more information on America in Bloom, visit www.americainbloom.org.

For more information on the city's ongoing beautification efforts, contact the Quincy Park Department at 617-376-1251.

How To Turn Your Home Into A Healthier Haven

(NAPS) — If your house looks, smells and feels like nothing has changed in more than three decades, now may be the time to create a healthier and more comfortable living space.

Lennox, a leading provider of integrated home comfort systems is giving homeowners across North America a chance to turn their headache of a home into a healthier haven by entering the second annual "Lennox Home Comfort Makeover Contest."

As part of the contest, the company is teaming up with environmental interior design expert Victoria Schomer to search for the most uncomfortable home in North America. Once the grand-prize winner is selected, Schomer and a team of home comfort specialists will implement an eco-friendly home comfort and interior design makeover valued at up to $60,000. Homeowners can enter the contest by visiting www.lennox.com before Aug. 31.

According to Schomer, going from drab to fab isn't as easy as swapping out the old recliner. She says home comfort is just as much about what you can't see as what you can see.

"While peeling wallpaper and outdated furniture can contribute to domestic discomfort, there are many other invisible conditions, such as musty odors and poor air quality, which can have a significant impact on one's overall sense of well-being," said Schomer. "It's important for homeowners to look at home comfort from the inside out by making sure the types of furniture, paint and carpet they use in their homes are environmentally friendly and won't contribute to poor indoor air quality."

Schomer also offers the following tips for creating a healthier, more comfortable home:

• Add Some Color: Changing wall color is one of the easiest ways to make an impact on a room. Schomer recommends using paints with few or no volatile organic compounds to help reduce potentially harmful gases, especially in rooms frequented by children or the elderly. if you decide to use wall coverings, look for wallpaper material that is permeable. Avoid vinyl wall coverings.

• Watch Where You Walk: Since carpet collects dust, people with allergies may want to install tile or wood floors. If you do purchase new wall-to-wall carpeting, be sure the installer airs out the carpet rolls for at least 24 hours before installation to decrease the amount of potentially toxic vapors that some new carpets can emit. You may also want to leave your windows open for a day or two after the carpeting is installed.

• Keep It Simple: Keep window treatments simple and appropriate for the room. In addition, consider installing window coverings to help prevent hot and cold spots inside the home and provide better insulation in the winter and summer months. Certain manufacturers even offer coverings with film that can reduce UV ray exposure.

• Tackle The Toxins: Pollutants inside the home, such as pet dander, smoke, mold and dust, can affect your health, comfort and safety. To identify potential issues, Schomer recommends having the air inside your home tested. For example, the Lennox Healthy Advantage Program is a simple, cost-effective air-quality monitoring service that measures the most common indoor air-quality factors — temperature, humidity, carbon monoxide, odors, chemical vapors and airborne particles — and helps homeowners identify solutions for clearing the air.

A Brief History of Paint

Q: Can you settle a bet? How long ago was house paint invented? My friend says it wasn't created until the mid-1800s. I'm fairly certain people were painting their houses long before then, but he won't budge. Do you have an answer for us? — Martin J., Columbia, Md.

A: Your friend may be thinking of the date that pre-mixed paints became widely available commercially. This happened in 1880, when after several years of experimentation, the Sherwin-Williams Company developed a formula that suspended finely ground paint particles in linseed oil.

Why was this important? Before this suspension (initially called "oil-bound distemper," rather than paint) was created, prepping the paint for houses, furniture, art — you name it — was a time-consuming and often expensive process. A limited range of colors was available, created from certain minerals, glass and natural dyes, and getting each color to adhere to a surface was often an art in itself.

The introduction of stable, pre-mixed paint colors allowed both professionals and do-it-yourselfers to paint houses quickly and affordably.

You're also right in thinking that house painting has existed much longer than 1880. Excluding cave paintings made tens of thousands of years ago, civilizations in ancient Egypt and China were known to decorate walls with colors made from iron oxides (umbers, ochres and black) and soil pigments (yellow, orange and red).

Until 1880, creating paint for various uses was a painstaking art. The pigments had to be mixed with a binder to keep them from separating and streaking, and then thinned out so they could be easily applied. Painters had to know the properties of each color, as well as the properties of the surface to which they would be applied. For example, the color India Yellow — created by mixing cow's urine with mud and extracting the resulting pigment — had to be covered with a varnish after painting to keep it from fading.

These mixed pigments weren't the only way to protect and beautify a home. Farmhouse kitchens and barn interiors in the U.S. were typically coated with a mixture of calcium hydroxide and chalk, commonly called whitewash. While not as durable as paint, whitewash helped protect the walls from weather. The calcium hydroxide also killed bacteria lingering on the walls, an added health benefit.

Hope this settles the bet!

A Hands-On Approach To Home Safety

(NAPS) — What you may not know about home safety could pose a potential risk to you or your family.

In fact, research conducted by the Home Safety Council, a non-profit organization dedicated to reducing the risk of home injuries, found home injuries cause nearly 20,000 deaths and 21 million medical visits each year.

Slips and falls, poisonings, and fires and burns are some of the most common injuries sustained in and around the home. When it comes to avoiding these injuries, a new national survey conducted by the Home Safety Council found 60 percent of parents know there are actions they can take to increase the safety of their homes. Most cited either lack of time or not knowing what to do as the primary reasons for not taking steps to find and fix potential home dangers.

"Families can easily take a hands-on approach to increasing the safety of their homes by completing some very simple steps," said Home Safety Council president Meri-K Appy. "Actions such as locking away poisons, testing your smoke alarm or keeping hallways clear of clutter do not take much time and can make a significant difference in the health and safety of families nationwide."

Simple Ways To Become Hands-On Home Safety

Despite 71 percent of parents claiming they are confident their home provides a safe family environment, Home Safety Council research shows many are not taking some basic precautions.

To make a difference in your home address, follow these three easy steps:

• Know the number 1-800-222-1222: Nearly 75 percent of families do not have the Poison Control Center toll-free number posted next to every phone. The hotline will connect callers to their local Poison Control Center.

• Lower the water heater temperature: Nearly four out of five parents do not know the proper hot-water heater setting. Help prevent scalds by checking the setting of your water heater and making sure it's set no higher than 120 degrees F.

• Brighten the lights: Falls are the most common home injury and a hazard that is easily overlooked. Use bright lights at the top and bottom of stairs and make sure hallways and dark areas in the home are well lit at night with night lights.

Maintaining Your Walk-Behind Lawn Mower

(NAPS) — The grass can be greener on your side of the fence if you make sure that when you're ready to cut the lawn, your mower is good to go.

It all boils down to inspecting and replacing the air filter, which is the No. 1 cause of a "no start" condition, say experts at Murray.

The first thing to do when working on your mower is to disconnect the spark plug to prevent accidents.

A Thorough Cleaning

Step one is a thorough cleaning: Removing dirt and grime makes it easier to find problems such as a worn fuel line or a chafed electrical cable.

After you have checked the blade for excess wear and cracks, sharpen it on a grinder or with a file. If it needs more than a light sharpening, make sure it's balanced before remounting it.

Drain The Fuel System

Manufacturers generally recommend one of two options. The first is to drain the fuel system before each mowing season. Another alternative is to add a stabilizer to the fuel to help prevent the fuel from going bad.

To help prevent corrosion on the piston and cylinder walls, some manufacturers suggest removing the spark plug and squirting motor or fogging oil into the spark plug hole. Although this won't do any harm, it probably is not necessary.

Change The Oil

If you haven't changed the oil recently, do it now. In fact, it's a good idea to change the oil at the beginning of each mowing season. Also check the air filter and clean it if necessary.

Noonan Urges Passage Of Senior Safety Rules

The chairman of the Council on Aging had endorsed and urged passage of a home rule petition to permit Quincy to establish safety zones in the vicinity of seniors living and health care facilities.

John D. Noonan in a letter to the Quincy legislative delegation called attention to the problems surrounding Phase One of the Quincy Center Concourse. He is a member of the Citizens Advisory Committee.

"Our committee recorded six senior citizen pedestrian fatalities during seven years of planning safety designs for this new roadway through the city," he said.

The COA, he said "unanimously endorses the home rule petition submitted by City Councillor Kevin Coughlin to authorize Quincy to establish new safety zones nearby senior housing, nursing, health care and assisted living facilities.

JOHN NOONAN

"As a member of the Quincy COA since 1971 I have seen the elder population increase to become the fastest growing population of any city of comparable size in Massachusetts.

"In addition, there are more than 6,000 state and federally subsidized housing units located in all parts of the city.

"We respectfully request your support of Councillor Coughlin's home rule petition allowing Quincy to provide these needed safety zones to protect our seniors."

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Open Burning Is Not Allowed

We get frequent calls, particularly during the warmer months, regarding open burning within the city.

The fact is open burning of leaves, vegetation, wood, paper products and any combustible for that matter is not allowed. Considering the close proximity of houses to each other, the nuisance factor of smoke and the perceived threat of a fire to abutters, it is in my opinion a sound policy.

We have recently seen an increase in tiki torch use as well. Their use on a combustible deck is not recommended by this department, while doing so 10 feet away from a building, securely placed within the ground while not left unattended is. Care must be taken to make certain they are a safe distance from dry, combustible vegetation. Keep in mind, however, that, as previously mentioned, the proximity of houses to each other can be a consideration and our judgment is determined by the factors at a specific location.

While there is no open burning allowed in Quincy, candles do not typically fall within this category while torches of this type fall somewhere in between. If an officer in charge is called to an address and determines their use poses a hazard, he will order them to be extinguished.

Portable outdoor fireplaces and chimneys are surfacing while we clearly place them within the open burning category and therefore their use is prohibited. We will receive an occasional call asking for our opinion while it is conveyed that they have been used on combustible decks. We in turn inform the caller that not only is it inadvisable to use them on a combustible deck; we prohibit their use entirely.

Much has been written regarding propane and charcoal grill use while little detail will be added here. Suffice it to say, we do prefer that they not be left unattended, and used at least 10 feet away from a building at ground level. We have a flyer concerning this policy which you are welcome to request by contacting the fire prevention bureau.

It has become an automated age while most of us have little exposure to open flame in our daily lives. Stoves are automatically ignited, natural gas stoves with continuously lit pilots, for instance, can no longer be sold for residential use in the state. Range oil is no longer stored on porches and heating systems are self-contained. Candle and oil lamps use within a home can be found as contributions for atmosphere, while even their use during an emergency is infrequent. Is anyone still stoking the flames of a furnace or sifting ashes from a night's worth of fire?

It is no wonder then that with such little exposure to fire, restriction on its use increases. Some will dispute that while I for one see the need and must err on the side of caution. Kindly adhere to both our prohibitions and recommendations while you are always welcome to contact us for any further clarification.

Thank you!

Wal-Mart Fishing Derby Scorecard: Three Fish, Good Time By All

The returns are in for the Wal-Mart Kids All-American Fishing Derby held the other day from the Best Western/Adams Inn on the banks of the Neponset River.

There were three fish caught but it was so hot (95 degrees) and everyone wanted to get home so fast that no one took the time to record the names of the winners.

But everybody had a good time, which is what the derby is for in the first place.

Wal-Mart has sponsored the derby for 19 years but this was the first time it was held in Quincy in conjunction with the Beaches and Coastal Commission.

A total of 68 kids ages 4 to 16 signed on for the derby and 40 youngsters along with their families showed up despite the withering heat.

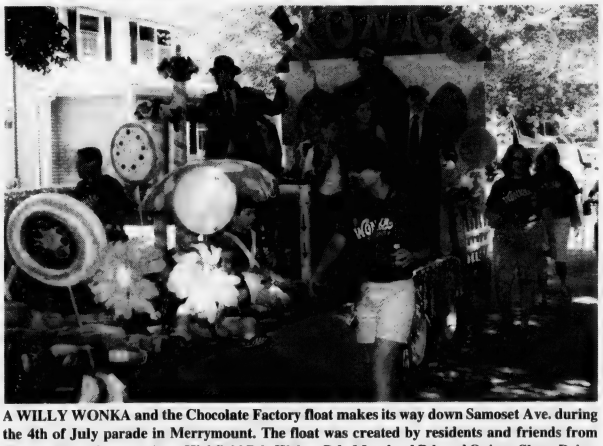
"The fish must have realized we were there fishing because only three fish were caught in a three-hour span!" said Margaret Milne, secretary of the commission.

"But they got a lot of hard shelled crabs and jellyfish."

Prizes donated by Wal-Mart were given out for the first catch of the day, the last catch of the day and the middle catch of the day.

Awards also were made to participants in the casting carnival and all those who showed up received a "fishy goodie bag" made up by commission members.

Commission Chairman Leo Kelly said the ability to catch fish in the Neponset River shows how far we have come in fighting pollution in local waterways.



"With the water quality the best it has been in over 30 years and the recent addition of a sand rake, our Quincy beaches have vastly improved," he said.

"The Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission deserves a hand up for bringing back residents of Quincy to their beaches."

He said the Wal-Mart fishing derby is only the first of many events planned by the commission for the summer season of 2005.

Members of the commission include Leo Kelly, the chairman; Douglas Gutro, vice chairman; Margaret Milne, secretary; Chickie Abdallah, treasurer.

Kristen Awed-Ladas, Monica Ferriaro, P. J. Foley, Robert Galligan, John Haley, Joseph Joy, Michael Morad, David Murphy, John "Jack" Nigro, Sheila O'Sullivan, Rob Stevens, Brion Wynn.

A WILLY WONKA and the Chocolate Factory float makes its way down Samoset Ave. during the 4th of July parade in Merrymount. The float was created by residents and friends from Overlook Rd., Samoset Ave., Highfield Rd., Waban Rd., Moreland Rd. and Quincy Shore Drive.

By SGT. DAN MINTON

On June 29th, Officer Brian Coen was in the parking lot of the Presidents' City Inn on Hancock Street, on "proactive" patrol, having been successful in the past, checking for stolen motor vehicles, and warrants on registered owners.

Officer Coen discovered that one vehicle had a stolen plate on it and decided to set up surveillance on the vehicle. At this time, it was unknown if the vehicle was actually stolen because Officer Coen would have to approach the vehicle to check the VIN (vehicle identification number) and if the suspect(s) were to see him, it would make it difficult to catch them.

SGT. DAN MINTON

A short time later, Officer Coen observed a male in his 30's, have a brief conversation with another male, then leave room 9, and drive northbound on Hancock Street in the suspect vehicle. When Officer Coen put his blue lights on to stop the vehicle, the suspect abruptly turned onto Standish Avenue and increased speed to 45 mph. Officer Coen notified headquarters and additional units headed to the area.

The suspect went through the stop sign as he took a left onto Warren Avenue and then right on Old Colony Avenue, increasing his speed to about 50 mph. The suspect committed numerous violations as the attempted to elude the police, taking a left onto Beale Street, then north on Newport Avenue, then left onto Brook Street.

As the suspect attempted to turn right onto Highland Avenue, the vehicle struck the curb and then crashed into a tree. The suspect then emerged from the vehicle and fled, with Officer Coen behind him, broadcasting the direction of the foot chase. The pursuit went through backyards, over fences and came to a stop when the suspect attempted to hide behind a parked car at 134 Brook Street.

Officer Coen radioed this information in and then drew his weapon, instructing the suspect to show his hands and lay on the ground. After repeating these instructions numerous times, the suspect complied and was handcuffed. The suspect, a Hull resident, was under arrest for multiple motor vehicle charges and transported to the station.

Officer Coen checked the VIN and learned from Officer Lauren Lambert that the suspect's vehicle was stolen from Quirk Chevrolet nine days earlier. This resulted in more charges against the suspect: receiving a stolen motor vehicle (second offense), attaching plates, reckless operation and a parole arrest warrant.

Officers Dan Francis, Dennis Keenan, Paul Murphy, Paul Jackson, Tom Ford and Ken Wood all assisted in the accident and arrest sites. Detectives Jim Lencki and John Menz responded to the hotel room looking for the other male seen in the doorway, but he was no longer there. They interviewed the front desk clerk and learned the identity of the person who rented the room. The investigation will continue into his involvement in the incident.

In summary, Officer Coen's "proactive" efforts in uncovering undesirables in the city is another example of crime prevention. We may never know why these men were in this hotel room in Quincy, with a stolen plate concealing a stolen vehicle, but we do know that they didn't get the opportunity to commit further crimes

Nice work!

Encouraging Fitness in Children

Q. My children are not very active. They participate in physical activities at school, but at home they are more interested in things that don't involve physical exertion. I am concerned about my children becoming overweight or obese. How can I keep them physically active during the summer months?

A. The risk of childhood obesity is a serious concern. Studies have shown that one in four children in America is overweight and/or at risk for becoming obese. Childhood obesity has become an epidemic, and it places children at a higher risk for diabetes, heart conditions and respiratory problems such as asthma.

The following tips can help you increase the level of physical activity in your children's lives and decrease their risk for becoming overweight or obese.

• Although your children may not have any current medical conditions, it is important for them to meet with a physician to rule out any physical limitations. This also will allow your physician to establish a baseline of your children's weight, height, blood pressure and heart rate.

• Make it a family affair. The more children see other family members participating and having fun while exercising, the more appealing it will become to them. If you speak negatively about exercising or do not display good exercise habits yourself, it can plant a negative impression in your children's minds.

• Participating in a fitness program yourself can help you find activities in which you all can take part. Riding bicycles, walking throughout the neighborhood or a simple game of hide and seek can get your children moving while having fun.

• Limit sedentary activities. Try to limit the amount of time your children spend watching television, playing video games and on the computer. Identify an interest your child finds exciting while watching television or on the computer, and try to incorporate that into a physical activity.

For example if your child is interested in science, setting up a scavenger hunt outside or around the house that involves looking for science-related items can be fun and educational. Inviting other children to take part can make it more enjoyable for your children.

• If you belong to a fitness facility, utilize any age-appropriate programs it offers to help your children stay active. Many fitness clubs offer group classes or individual sessions for children to encourage physical activities in a fun and safe environment.

• Proper nutrition is a large factor in childhood obesity. Monitor your children's nutritional intake and encourage a balanced and healthy diet.

Healthy Water Tips To Keep You In The Swim

(NAPS) — Whether you're heading out for the beach or taking a dip in the backyard swimming pool, these do's and don'ts from experts on water health and safety will help you and your family get the jump on healthy water fun.

• Don't swallow water that you swim in. Dirty or polluted water that gets into the mouth or is swallowed can cause gastrointestinal illness. While chlorine does kill germs, it can take some time to do so. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) suggests people actually clean up — with soap and water — before jumping in.

• Do dry ears thoroughly. After any water exposure, dry ears thoroughly with a towel to prevent swimmer's ear — a very common and extremely painful infection of the outer ear canal that affects about 8 million people each year. When water gets into the ear, it can become trapped in the ear canal, turning the area moist and spongy and allowing bacteria to grow. Earplugs can help keep ears dry while they are immersed in water, but if you or your child experience itching in the ear and/or pain in the ear that gets worse when the earlobe is touched or moved, speak to your doctor.

One unique eardrop is available to treat swimmer's ear. Called Ciprodex Otic Suspension, it combines two medications — one is an anti-inflammatory medication to reduce the pain and swelling of swimmer's ear, and the other is a potent antibiotic that eliminates the infection. While most other antibiotic eardrops need to be used for 10 days, Ciprodex is administered just twice a day for only seven days, and it can be used in children as young as six months. Side effects associated with this new eardrop, such as itching and ear residue, are minimal.

• Don't swim when you have diarrhea. This is especially important for kids in diapers. You can spread germs in the water and make other people sick.

• Do remember to watch children around any water environment (pool, stream, lake, tub, toilet, bucket of water), no matter what skills your child has acquired and no matter how shallow the water.

Finally, apply sunscreen liberally — and always before and after swimming — to prevent sunburn and longer-term skin damage. Many dermatologists suggest using a sunscreen with a sun protection factor (SPF) or 30 or higher.

Updated Database Of Cancer Support Services Available

Local cancer patients and their families as well as healthcare professionals can now access an updated online database of hundreds of local, regional, and national cancer care support services.

This information can be found in the Patient Resource Directory of Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology's web site at www.chomed.com.

For example, people searching for information on breast cancer support can quickly find all available programs in their area. Hard copies of these directories are also available.

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology (CHO), the largest private practice cancer care network in New England, developed the site to help patients take an active role in their medical treatment.

"People are discovering that they can empower themselves by learning more about their disease and knowing what support services are available to them," says Walt Kagan, M.D., Ph.D., president of CHO. Dr. Kagan, who practices in CHO's Quincy office, believes this is the area's largest such database of support services. Services range from American Cancer Society chapters and Visiting Nurse Associations to such personal care services as stores that specialize in wigs or adaptive clothing.

CHO's web site also provides information on screening, early detection of cancer, and different treatment options. Educational and informative material is available to healthcare professionals as well.

Commonwealth Hematology-Oncology has offices and hospital affiliates throughout Massachusetts and southern New Hampshire. For more information, visit CHO's website at www.chomed.com.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

IN-OFFICE TEETH WHITENING

While over-the-counter teeth-whitening products can be used to effectively white teeth showing external stains, professional whitening is far more effective for darker-colored teeth, and it is faster and easier to use. In-office professional whitening is the fastest method. It utilizes bleaching gels that are light activated. For the longest-lasting results, in-office treatments are followed with home whitening that use custom mouth trays and viscous bleaching gels. Extensive research and clinical studies indicate that whitening teeth under the supervision of a dentist is safe, and many dentists consider whitening the safest cosmetic procedure available. The whitening process does not damage enamel or weaken teeth. Teeth may become more sensitive during the process, but this a temporary sensation.

If you have questions about tooth whitening, or any other oral health concerns, we invite you to call us. There is an abundance of innovative technologies and devices available to help us improve the quality and comfort of care we deliver. We stress preventive dentistry for the entire family. Be sure to regularly brush, floss, and have professional cleanings. When was the last time you had a dental checkup? Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Smiles are our business at 44 Greenleaf Street. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

Morrisette's Folino No-Hits Quincy, 1-0

LEGION BASEBALL

By CHRIS POISSON

There were no offensive fireworks between the Morrisette and Quincy American Legion baseball teams last Saturday at Adams Field.

John Folino and Dean Sandonato locked up in a sensational pitcher's duel, with Folino tossing a mesmerizing no-hitter to lead Morrisette to a 1-0 victory, snapping a four-game losing skid to its city rivals.

"It's the best I've seen him," said Morrisette manager Ray Cattaneo. "He didn't have a lot of strikeouts but they were just tapping it to the infielders and back to him. They weren't getting around on him. He's the best pitcher in our league."

"All in all, it was a great night for baseball in Quincy," said Quincy manager Mark Jaehnig. "Two outstanding teams and two great pitchers playing quality baseball in front of a charged-up crowd."

Quincy (9-5) still rests in fifth place in Zone 6 East, with Morrisette (6-7-1) and Hyde Park (6-7) chasing them for the final playoff berth.

Morrisette, which played Cohasset Tuesday and Dorchester Wednesday, will host Holbrook tonight (Thursday) at 8 at Adams Field. It travels to Milton Friday, to Canton Sunday and to Braintree Monday to close out the regular season.

Quincy, which played at Weymouth Tuesday, will travel to Dorchester today (Thursday) before closing out the season with four games at home. It hosts Cohasset Friday at 8, Weymouth Saturday at 5, undefeated Milton Sunday at 8 and Canton next Tuesday at 8.

Folino, who walked one, hit two batters and struck out four, handcuffed Quincy as he didn't allow a ball out of the infield. He also recorded six assists and a putout. Quincy had a runner at second base just three times.

Sandonato went six innings, giving up four hits, a walk and an unearned run in the second inning. Steve Sullivan walked and advanced to third base on an errant pickoff attempt. Chris Mercurio knocked him home with an RBI double to down the right field line.

Quincy's best chance to score came in the seventh inning. With one out, catcher Tom Conley walked and moved to second on Tom Power's sacrifice bunt. Sean Sullivan sent a ball up the middle, but second baseman Matt Tobin gobbled it up to end the game.

Shortstop Drew Loud and second baseman John Fitzgerald combined for a nifty 4-6-3 double play in the third inning and Power made a tremendous diving catch in center field to take away a run.

Last Friday, John Santon fired a two-hit shutout with 14 strikeouts to lead Quincy to an important 2-0 win over Hyde Park. Quincy's season sweep earned them the playoff tie-breaker.

Jaehnig said Santon is blessed with exceptional pitching talents, only he has struggled with his control and composure in the past. But he was on top of his game against West Roxbury, allowing only an opposite-field bloop single and a perfect bunt single.

He punched out the side in the final inning, finishing in style as he pounded the catcher's mitt with an 86 mph heater. His 15-year-old Quincy High School teammate, John Alexander, called a great game as catcher.

Justin Thorley and Ian Jorgensen turned in great defensive plays to preserve the shutout.

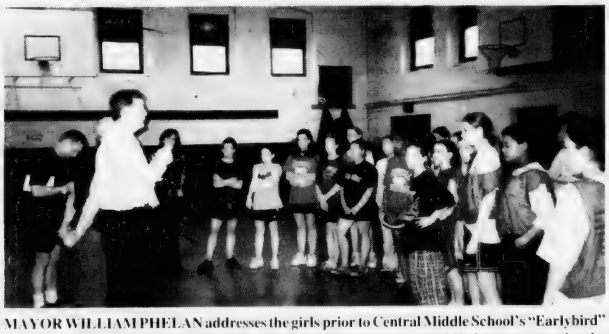
AIRING ON THE SIDE OF CAUTION

Many drivers believe their vehicles' tires do not require maintenance. Nearly as many believe that if a tire does not look underinflated, there is no need to check it. In fact, however, a tire can appear to be properly inflated, yet have only half the recommended air pressure in it. Tires can lose a pound of pressure each month. It makes good sense, then, to check the air pressure in your tires on a monthly basis. To get the proper inflation recommendation, look for the vehicle manufacturer's inflation/pressure information in the owner's manual, on the vehicle's doorjamb, glovebox, door edge, or similar place. Do not pay attention to the tire sidewall, which has maximum inflation pressure, not the recommended one.

Under-inflated tires are not only dangerous, they waste a lot of gas and wear out your tires faster. Keep your tires properly inflated. For more of your car's maintenance and repair needs rely on our ASE Certified technicians at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. For the best service in town, we're here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." We are also your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.



HINT: Check your tire pressure when the tire is cold with a tire pressure gauge in your own driveway or garage.

Harrington (two hits, two runs), Mercurio (two hits, run), Griffin (two hits, run), Orlando (two hits, run) and MacPherson (two-run hit) powered the offense. Orlando played great defensively with seven assists.

In a 9-8 loss to Cedar Grove, Wollaston's pitching fell apart as it walked five in the last inning. Orlando led the way with three hits, two RBI and two runs. Crifo had two hits and two RBI and Doolan belted a two-run triple.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Nearly every mother or father has shown a child how to draw something. Some things can be portrayed on paper . . . but not everything. For example, when a child asked his Daddy to draw a picture of love, he replied, "O.K. - but first I want you to draw me a picture of the wind." After a few curved lines were put on paper, the child exclaimed, "Daddy, I can't draw a picture of the wind. You can't see it. You can only feel it."

Feelings are individual emotions. What one person feels, another may not. One of life's greatest tragedies is to allow a feeling of love to die. It sometimes happens. Such sad feelings can often be avoided by an expression of concern and love. Anyone capable of feeling is capable of saying so. That sort of feeling always makes the listener and the speaker feel good . . . very good.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Although you don't like to change plans once they're set, once again, you might find that doing so can make a big difference in your favor. Family matters dominate the weekend.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) You continue to get encouragement for your proposals, including some support from unlikely sources. Use this positive flow to move forward with your plans. Good luck.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Family matters are dominant this week. It's a good time to be with those you love. It's also a good time to contact and reunite with loved ones with whom you've lost touch.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Be careful not to allow differences of opinion to create unpleasant feelings, especially in the workplace. A neutral observer could check out the situation and suggest a resolution.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) While the Lion's Den is the center of attention this week, with family matters dominating much of your time, workplace issues are also important. Try to find a balance between them.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) The future of a new relationship could depend on how much the usually impatient-to-get-things-done Virgo is willing to stop pushing and let things happen naturally.

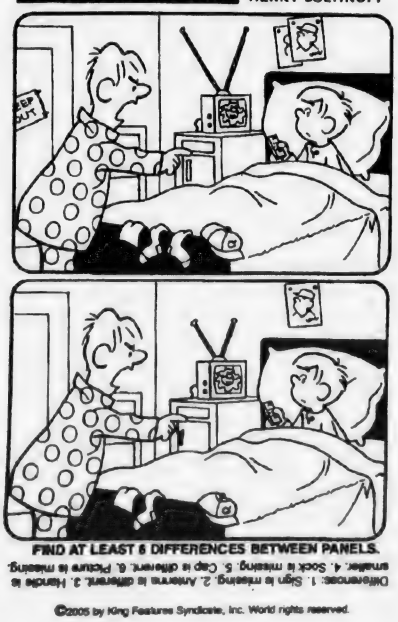
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Worry over a loved one's well-being is eased with good news from a sympathetic source. Your continued show of love and support is important. Stay with it.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) This is a good time to consider mending fences with someone you wish was back in your life. Forget about blame, and focus on the good things you once shared.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) This is a good week to start researching information regarding whatever changes you're considering, whether it involves a new home, a new location or a new job.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A long-anticipated job opportunity could turn out to be less than you expected. But appearances might be deceiving. Check it out before you decide it's not for you.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Good news: Adapting to a new situation might come more easily than you expected. You can look for continued support from colleagues who appreciate your contributions.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Someone you care for might need more reassurance from the typically "unemotional" Pisces. Go ahead. Open up, and you might be surprised at what you find when you do.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a romantic at heart, although you can be amazingly practical when you need to be.

Quincy Mutual Fire Donations Aid South Shore Elder Services

The best known source of funding for South Shore Elder Services comes from the state but the private, non-profit agency paused the other day to acknowledge the contributions from the private sector.

Particularly, the Quincy Mutual Fire Insurance Company, whose corporate donations, couple with private donations from senior executives, are applied directly to the purchase of food, clothing and shelter for seniors.

"We believe our community is better off with senior citizens well cared for," said Tom Harris, the senior vice president and treasurer of Quincy Mutual.

Quincy Mutual folks have been donating their services, too.

Claudia Sorgi, wife of Doug Briggs, the president, has been delivering Meals on Wheels for seniors for 12 years and Tom Harris' wife, Cheryl, has been volunteering for eight years, delivering Meals of Wheels for five.

"We're very fortunate, and grateful, to receive such generous donations from Quincy Mutual," said Ed Flynn, director of South Shore Elder Services.

"With their financial support and with the tireless dedication of Claudia and Cheryl, we're able to provide the much-needed assistance to elders in our community."

Friendly Visitors Sought For Seniors

3 Open School Seats As Mariano Decides Not To Run

"However, the increased demands of my new role as chairman of the Joint Committee on Financial Services requires more of my time and energies.

"As such, after much deliberation, I have decided that it would not be appropriate to seek re-election unless I was able to devote the necessary attention to the needs of the Quincy Public School System."

Mariano noted that during his tenure on the school committee, he has led the fight for a tough attendance policy and for the alternative learning program.

"It is very important that our school system have policies and programs in place that set strict limits on behavior for our students and provide alternatives for those who have difficulty learning in regular classroom settings," Mariano said.

"Over the past several years, we have made many improvements to education as well as the school facilities of Quincy. We have relieved overcrowding at the elementary level by constructing the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center and the Marshall School, reopened the Beechwood Knoll School and built additions to the Bernazzani and Parker Schools. We have also developed a comprehensive plan to solve the problems at the middle and high schools.

"As a school committee, we have responded to the changing needs of our students. The $1.6 million technology bond allowed our students to have the most up-to-date equipment and enables them to compete in college or in the changing world of work."

Mariano highlighted his efforts to reinstitute foreign language and wrestling in the middle schools.

"The committee has worked hard to restore programs that were cut during difficult budget times," he said.

"The Quincy Public Schools System has been nationally recognized for academic quality on numerous occasions. One school received a national award for its work on human rights. Our graduates are competitive in the job market and are attending college in greater numbers. Test scores of our students continue to rise. We provide our students with a reasonable class size in a school environment that is safe. By any evaluative standard, the Quincy School System receives outstanding grades."

Mariano, a former Quincy school teacher for 12 years, has a master's degree in education and a degree in business administration and serves as a state representative from the Third Norfolk District, representing Quincy, Weymouth and Holbrook.

"The perspective that I bring to the committee as a state representative is unique," he said. "It has allowed me to understand the problems in the implementation of state laws and to serve as an agent for change at the state level. I have worked hard to try to change the bilingual education laws and the special education laws as a result of the problems we faced in Quincy. My state position also allowed me to help access reimbursement for our school construction projects."

Those who have taken out nomination papers for school committee as of Tuesday:

Robert Haley, former vice president of the Quincy Taxpayers Association; David Smith, teacher at the Center for Technical Education; Atty. Kathryn Hobin, Celeste McGlone, former executive assistant to Mayor Phelan; Sal Giarratani and Ron Iacobucci, both former candidates; Ann Mahoney, co-owner of a graphics design firm and mother of three; and Martin Joyce, recent college graduate.

Iacobucci is already planning a summer fund-raiser and a campaign kick-off after Labor Day.

Candidates have until Tuesday, July 26, to take out and file nomination papers for all offices on this year's ballot.

MOUNDS OF SAND surround Mayor William Phelan (center), Park Director Thomas Koch (right) and Park Department Project Manager Paul Franz at Mound Street Beach in Quincy Point. The city this week is adding roughly 4,000 cubic yards of washed beach sand to seven municipal beaches throughout the city.

4,000 Cubic Yards

City Adding Sand To Seven Beaches

The city is adding new sand to seven municipal beaches this week, the first time it has done so in more than a decade, according to Mayor William Phelan's office.

Beaches scheduled to receive new sand are: Avalon Beach, Mound St. Beach, Baker Beach, Edgewater Drive Beach, Parkhurst Beach, Nickerson Beach and Orchard Beach.

"Our municipal beaches are beautiful waterfront parks that Quincy families should be able to enjoy without hesitation," said Phelan. "I think people would be surprised at how nice many of our municipal beaches are in Quincy. I encourage residents to take advantage of living nearby such amazing resources."

Approximately 4,000 cubic yards of washed beach sand will be added to Quincy beaches this week, according to the mayor's office.

The move came after the City of Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission issued a resident survey that showed the top desired improvement for the city's beaches was the addition of new sand.

"There is no need to battle traffic and travel to Nantasket or Cape Cod," the mayor said. "We have perfectly nice beaches right here in Quincy."

All Municipal Beaches Safe For Swimming, City Says

Quincy's municipal beaches have the "all clear" sign for swimming, according to the health department.

The following beaches have been tested every Wednesday since June 16 and have been found to be safe for swimming: Avalon Beach, Mount Street Beach, Merrymount Beach, Chickatabot Beach, Heron Beach, Baker Beach, Germantown Fire Station, Parkhurst Beach, Edgewater Beach, Rhoda Beach, Orchard Beach and Nickerson Beach.

Mayor William Phelan called the test results "encouraging."

"The results of the health department's water quality tests show that the money spent on cleaning our waters is working," said Phelan. "We can now enjoy beaches that are clean and safe to swim at throughout the sum

Trolley Routes Link Adams Sites With Harbor Islands

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Tourists and residents should find it much easier to visit some of Quincy's historic sites and other points of interest due to an expansion of trolley routes originating from the Adams National Historical Park Visitors Center, 1250 Hancock St.

In a joint effort to boost regional tourism, Congressman William Delahunt, Mayor William Phelan and tourism officials unveiled details about the expanded trolley service during a press conference held Monday in the Visitors Center.

The new service links - for the first time - the Adams National Historical Site, local hotels, Marina Bay and the Boston Harbor Islands through a network of trolleys and ferries. Officials are hoping to make it easier for tourists to traverse Quincy's points of interest without worrying about transportation.

"Today marks the latest development in our efforts to showcase Quincy as a world-class tourist destination," Delahunt said Monday. "This new system will add another level of marketing opportunity to Quincy's recent successes - including visits from professional sports teams and Hollywood production crews, as well as progress with cleaning our beaches and building top-notch golf and restaurants."

Delahunt's office has been working alongside Discover Quincy, Harbor Express and some of the city's more prominent hotels to expand the current Adams trolley service with two new routes. The move is part of a larger effort to lure local tourists or those from foreign countries to southeastern Massachusetts, including Quincy.

According to the plan, a northern loop will link the downtown Presidents Place Visitors Center on Hancock St. with the Best Western Adams Inn and Marina Bay. A southern loop will link the Visitors Center with the Boston Marriott Quincy and Harbor Express. Through the Harbor Express, the southern loop will also provide residents and visitors access to Boston Harbor Islands.

The Visitors Center will serve as a hub for both routes so tourists can transfer from one trolley to another.

During this initial pilot phase, the two new trolley loops will operate daily from

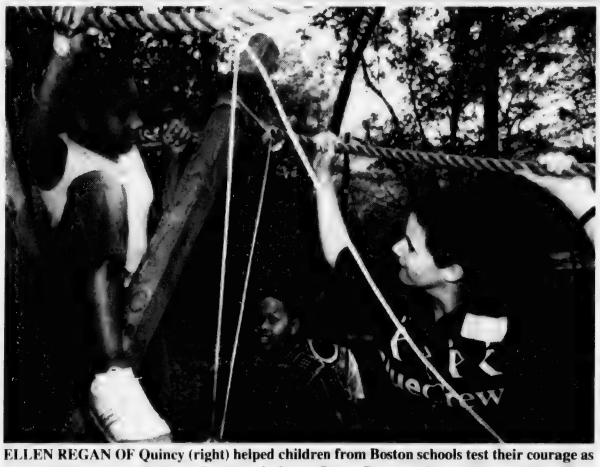
First Mass Sunday At Star Of Sea Chapel

The first mass in more than eight months has been scheduled for Sunday, July 17, at 12 noon at the former Star of the Sea Church, which has been reopened as a mission chapel.

A priest from Sacred Heart of North Quincy, the governing parish, will be allowed to celebrate one mass a week in the church building at 107 Bellevue Rd., Squantum.

The 12 noon mass time was chosen because it fits in with those at Sacred Heart, which are celebrated at 7:45 a.m., 9 a.m., 10:30 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Sunday.

Squantum sacramental celebrations of baptisms, weddings and funerals will continue to be held at Sacred Heart Church, 386 Hancock St., North Quincy.



Star of the Sea was suppressed as a parish following the final mass Sunday, Oct. 24, and the church building and rectory put up for sale.

Archbishop Sean O'Malley permitted one more mass on Easter Sunday after former parishioners threatened to hold and unauthorized mass with a married priest.

Friends of the Star of the Sea pleaded their case for reopening of the church as a chapel and won the recommendation of a committee studying the closings.

O'Malley accepted the recommendations and announced the reopening last week. Ironically, Star of the Sea originated as a chapel of Sacred Heart in 1924.

'Summerfest' Concert Series Underway

The city's annual "Summerfest" concert series held Wednesday evening at 7 p.m. at the Ruth Gordon Amphitheater in Merrymount Park is now underway.

The opening concert, scheduled for last night (Wednesday) featured Denis O'Gorman and his Irish band.

The schedule and performers for the remaining concerts include:

July 20: Riverside Theatre Works. A young group that sings and dances their way through the Great American Songbook.

July 27: Dave Samarco. A five-piece band plays country blues.

Aug. 3: The Continentals. A 17-piece big band in the style of Glenn Miller, Duke Ellington and Count Basie.

Aug. 10: Back Eddy Bluegrass. The group incorporates traditional, contemporary and original bluegrass.

Four Liquor Establishments Get Stung, And Suspensions

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

A "Sting" involving package stores and pouring establishments selling alcohol was conducted over the Memorial Day weekend and four owners were cited for serving alcohol to underage persons.

The License Board at Tuesday's meeting heard reports from Lt. Peter Turowski involving The Irish Pub, 51 Billings Rd. The Eight Ball Billiard Parlor, 1585 Hancock St., Charlie's Mini Mart, 247 Atlantic St., and Tedeschi's 751 E. Squantum St.

In all of the stings, a 20 year old male was sent to all four of these establishments with a marked $10 dollar bill. He was served alcohol in all four places without having to present an ID.

Turkowski said that when Steve Westgate, manager Charlie's Mini Mart saw him he said "guilty as charged". When asked by Health Commissioner Drew Scheele as to why Westgate didn't ask for an ID, Westgates replied "bad judgment."

Police Chief Robert Crowley said there is "no excuse" for not asking for an ID and emphasized about serving individuals under 21 years old.

Crowley said because it was the first offense, he recommended a three day suspension with one day served on a Friday night and the other two days placed on filed.

Chairman Joseph Shea said the four may appeal to the Alcohol Beverage Control Commission and said the board will decide this week as to what Friday will be designated for the closing.

Tedescchi's owner John Whalen, apologized to the board for the violation and was asked by Crowley as to the number of employees at the time of the sting. He said he thought more than one employee should be one from 8 to 11 p.m. He said taking care of the lottery as well as selling alcohol becomes "overwhelming."

Crowley said he had talked to Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner who said she was concerned regarding the number of young people hanging out around Tedeschi's.

Crowley recommended a three day suspension with one day served on a Friday, the same day as the sting.

Shea said the real story is the 80-90 establishments that passed.

At the Eight Ball Billiard Parlor, Atty. Louis Cassis said the bartender ;had left for a while and left a person who usually cleans and stocks the place who ultimately sold the alcohol without an ID.

When Crowley asked if there was another incident involving after hours drinking, Cassis said the establishment had closed at the appropriate time, but an employee came in around 3:30 a.m. with some friends and that is why they were cited.

Crowley recommended a five day suspension with three days served.

At the Irish Pub, 51 Billings Rd., Turowski said when he confronted the owner Noel Bowlan about the serving of an underage person, he said "don't tell me, I'm not working." Turowski said Bowlan was allegedly taking picture of the underage male with his cell phone.

Cassis said Bowlan was actually making a call on his cell phone and not taking a picture.

Cassis said the person who sold to the underage male was "unhappy over the change of ownership" and was not as "diligent" in asking for an ID/

Crowley said he was concerned over the comment Bowlan made and said "that upsets me" plus the fact that he was trying to take a picture.

Bowlan said the phone was a speaker phone and he was holding it out in front of him instead of near his ear.

A motion by Crowley to suspend the license for three days with one day served on a Friday night was voted unanimously by the board as was all of those cited.

A discussion was held after the meeting regarding the consistency of the sentences. Scheele said the first offense used to be a written warning. Cassis had questioned the board about the written warning during the meeting.

Now the first offense is a three day suspension with one day served, the second offense a five day with three day served.

Crowley said the sting operation will continue during the summer.

Honored On 238th Birthday Anniversary

John Quincy Adams Praised As Great Patriot, Leader

One of Quincy's most famous sons, former President John Quincy Adams, was an independent thinker whose philosophy and values helped shape modern America, residents and history enthusiasts were told Monday during Adams' 238th birthday anniversary.

At the city's annual wreath-laying ceremony, held July 11 at the United First Parish Church in Quincy Center, onlookers were treated to a history of Adams' life, including details about his tenure as a U.S. Senator, U.S. Congressman, Secretary of State and sixth President of the United States.

Although Adams was the eldest son of John Adams, the nation's second president, he had a very distinguished life of his own as a patriot, diplomat and public servant, residents were told.

"President John Quincy Adams may be best known for being the son of a president, but his accomplishments should not be overshadowed by his bloodline," Mayor William Phelan told a throng of more than 150 people in attendance. "Standing alone, his record of public service is matched by few men in the history of our country."

Phelan and several other speakers, including a local Navy officer and a direct descendent of Adams himself, recounted his long and illustrious career and how his service influences society to this day.

The highlight of the event was the annual wreath-laying ceremony, which was started in the 1960s during Lyndon Johnson's administration. The practice of White House-authorized presidential wreaths laid on burial sites of U.S presidents has been done ever since. Adams and his father, John Adams, are entombed at the "Church of the Presidents" along with their wives, Louisa Catherine Adams and Abigail Adams.

Navy Lt. Cmdr. Scott Graham, a Massachusetts native, laid a floral wreath on the 19th-century president's resting place on behalf of President George W. Bush.

At the ceremony, Graham praised Adams' accomplishments, calling the former president "a great American patriot, leader and man" who worked tirelessly on behalf of the United States.

Caroline Keinath, deputy superintendent of the Adams National Historical Park, spoke about Adams' early life as a young man assisting his father on several diplomatic missions to Europe at the time of the American Revolution.

After serving as U.S. Minister to Prussia, Adams was elected to the U.S. Senate for one term. He then became the U.S. Minister to Russia.

On December 24, 1814, Adams signed on behalf of the United States the Treaty of Ghent, which concluded the War of 1812. He then served as minister to Great Britain, as had his father following the American Revolution.

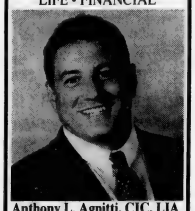
Stephen Kenney, director of the Commonwealth Museum, recounted one of Adams' most important and influential positions, that of U.S. Secretary of State under President James Monroe. Kenney underscored Adams' role in the acquisition of Florida and the declaration of the Monroe Doctrine.

After his term as president, Adams continued his life as a public servant by serving 16 years as a U.S. Congressman. Kenney pointed out that Adams was the only former president to be elected to Congress after his term in the White House.

Although he sometimes rankled others with his political positions, Adams was known as an "independent thinker" with "intellectual honesty," said Kenney.

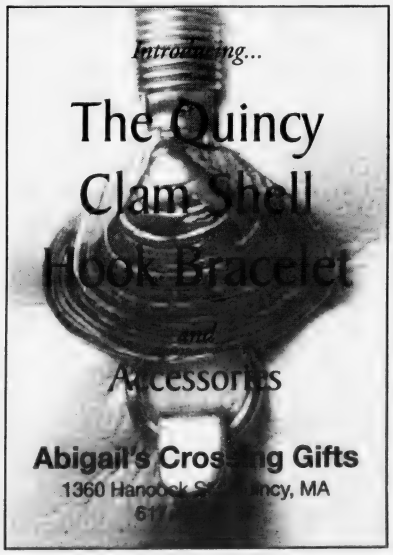
Edward Fitzgerald, executive director of the Quincy Historical Society, called John Quincy Adams "the most complex" of the Adams family, pointing to his numerous writings and length of service to the nation.

And nearly all speakers stressed Adams' tireless advocacy for the abolishment of slavery, which came to partial fruition only 15 years after his death.



"We inherit a better world due to the conceptions of John Quincy Adams," said his direct descendent, F. Douglas Adams, 60. A sixth-generation descendent of John Quincy Adams, he was accompanied by his daughter, Marian Adams, a recent Smith College graduate.

Phelan said those who engage in any type of public service are paying tribute to Adams' legacy. Quincy's native son was a public servant for nearly 70 years until his death in the chamber of the House of Representatives in 1848.



Attendees were treated to the sound of the U.S. Navy Brass Ensemble from Newport, R.I., several hymns by chorus singers and were encouraged to participate in a rousing rendition of "America the Beautiful."

A tour of the church and crypt was offered after the ceremony.

• On July 14, 1811, Byron returns to England after touring Europe and the Near East for two years. His travels inspired "Childe Harold's Pilgrimage" (1812). The poem brought him almost instant acclaim in England, and Byron's taste, manners and fashion became widely imitated.

• On July 13, 1938, the first "television theater" opens, in Boston. The audience paid 25 cents admission to view a black-and-white broadcast on a 9-by-12-inch screen of singers, musicians and dancers performing in a studio above the auditorium.

• On July 16, 1945, the United States conducts the first test of the atomic bomb at its research facility in Los Alamos, N.M. As he watched the mushroom cloud rise into the sky, Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the project, recited a passage from an ancient Hindu text: "Now I am become death, destroyer of worlds."

• On July 17, 1955, Disneyland, Walt Disney's metropolis of nostalgia, fantasy, and futurism, opens in Anaheim, Calif., on 160 acres of former orange groves. Today, Disneyland hosts more than 14 million visitors a year.

• On July 15, 1965, the unmanned spacecraft Mariner 4 passes over Mars at an altitude of 6,000 feet and sends back to Earth the first close-up images of the red planet. The photos revealed a vast, barren wasteland of craters and rust-colored sand, dismissing 19th-century suspicions that an advanced civilization might exist on the planet.

• On July 11, 1985, soft-drink giant Coca-Cola announces plans to return the beloved original version of Coca-Cola — now christened "Classic Coke" — to the market. The original Coke had been dropped in favor of reformulated "New Coke," which was a resounding flop with consumers.

• On July 12, 1990, the TV series "Northern Exposure" airs its first episode. The offbeat show, about a Manhattan doctor forced to work in a small Alaska town, consistently ranked in the Top 20 most-watched TV shows until it was canceled in 1995.

23 School Candidates In 1971

Three open seats on the school committee in this year's city election is quite unusual but not really historic.

This political scenario has played before – 34 years ago.

That was the 1971 election when the three incumbents up for re-election that year gave up their seats instead.

And it triggered a 23-candidate scramble to fill the three openings.

One of the incumbents, Vice Chairman James McCormick, opted to run for mayor that year.

McCORMICK

Alice Mitchell, who had served 18 years on the board, decided that was long enough and retired.

Ruth Scanlan, who had served one four-year term, also decided that was enough. She had been considered a budding political star and potential mayoral candidate. But, she moved out of the state.

DAVIS

McCAULEY

The three vacant school seats were won by Harold Davis, Daniel Raymondi and Francis McCauley, who finished in that order.

For Raymondi, it was the start of his political career.

For McCauley, it was a political comeback. As Ward 1 councillor, he made an unsuccessful bid for a council at-large seat in 1967.

McCauley went on from the school committee to win a council at-large seat in 1977 and then on to four terms as mayor.

Now City Council president, he retires at the end of this year with 32 years service and the distinction of being the only person ever elected to all four municipal offices: school committee, ward councillor, councillor at-large and mayor.

Christopher Kennedy, who finished a close fourth in that school committee race, would win a seat in 1975.

There were other interesting tidbits about that 1971 election year.

James McIntyre, one of the city's all-time powerful political figures, did not seek a fourth term as mayor, having accepted appointment as counsel to the Massachusetts state senate.

The open office attracted three other candidates in addition to McCormick: Walter Hannon, Joseph Brett and Rita Anderson, the first woman to run for mayor in Quincy.

Hannon and Brett won the nominations with McCormick third and Anderson last. She had 737 votes. Hannon would go on to defeat Brett in the November final election.

HANNON

The election was also a comeback for Joseph LaRaia who won a council at-large seat after failing two years before and would go on to the mayor's office in 1975.

LaRAIA

It was a year when Leo Kelly actually lost an election trying to unseat Ward 1 Councillor Edward Graham.

KELLY

Two years later, Kelly would come back to defeat Paul Harold for the very same seat. Few can say they topped Harold in an election.

Also in 1971, William Delahunt defeated Warren Powers for the Ward 5 seat. Both moved on to bigger things. Delahunt as Congressman, Powers as presiding justice of Wrentham District Court.

DELAHUNT

POWERS

One other thing about that election: the voter turnout was over 70 percent with 33,805 of the city's 47,978 registered casting ballots. Haven't seen that in awhile.

WILL THIS YEAR'S school committee race with the three open seats come anywhere near attracting 23 candidates as in 1971?

Well, it's getting closer. At midweek seven more candidates had taken out nomination papers bringing the total number so far to 15.

The new names:

Uncle Sam Rounseville of Kendrick Ave.; Michael Covais, Pope St.; Stanley Underwood, Clay St.; Eileen Mullen, Trafford St.; Sandra Verhault, Island Ave.; Kevin Mulvey, Willow St., and Atty. Joseph Keegan of Moreland Rd., who run for the Ward 1 council seat two years ago.

Deadline for taking out and filing nomination papers for all offices is 5 p.m., Tuesday, July 26.

MARIANO

BRAGG

THE THREE OPEN school committee seats in this year's election, as you probably know, are those of Vice Chairman Michael McFarland, Ron Mariano and Jo-Ann Bragg.

McFarland is running for city councillor at-large. Mariano and Bragg are stepping down after serving 16 and 12 years respectively.

GOING BACK TO that 1971 election, Leo Hannon, Jr., and Dean Paul Nicastro finished in fifth and sixth place behind Kennedy.

The other candidates in that race:

Louis Arienti, Joseph Collins, Domenic D'Arcangelo, Gregory Galvin, Joseph Glynn, Jr., Muriel Goudey, William Grindlay, Joseph Hanningan III, James Harrington, William Hurley, Nancy Marie Longhi, Joseph McConville, Jr., Carole McCormack, Joseph McDermott, Leslie Molyneaux, J. Thomas Mullaney and George C. Smith, Jr.

And, give them a lot of credit.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS AN early 1950s postcard view of Quincy Square. The bus was part of a new fleet introduced by the Eastern Mass. Street Railway Company after they discontinued electric trolleys here in 1948. The Eastern Mass had a waiting room here alongside the old Waldorf Cafeteria. Saville Street on the right ran down to the railroad depot. This area on the right is now all part of Constitution Plaza and McIntyre Mall. New plans for this section of Hancock Street include expanding the Mall across to the church eliminating through traffic through here. The highway sign on the left shows Route 135 that until the present Route 128 was built, was the main connecting route between Quincy and Dedham through Milton. The trees on both side of the church steeple have grown to the point where today you can't read the clock. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Fore River Built USS Long Beach Seen Historic Nuclear Step

Navy Admiral Hyman C. Rickover, an advocate of a nuclear Navy, said the Fore River-built nuclear cruiser USS Long Beach "marks an historic first step in the development of our nuclear powered surface fleet."

Rickover, writing at sea from the Long Beach enroute home from sea trials, said in a letter to Quincy Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa:

"Once her potentialities are understood the Long Beach may well have the significance for surface naval warfare that the (nuclear submarine) Nautilus had for undersea warfare.

"The ship made her design full power, in fact she exceeded it."

HEDGES HONORED

Col Charles W. Hedges of Quincy was awarded the Massachusetts Medal of Merit for his "outstanding leadership as a senior officer" in the state Air National Guard.

Hedges, a former Norfolk County sheriff and state senator, received the medal from Gov. John A. Volpe during ceremonies at Otis Air Force Base on Cape Cod.

LANGUAGE PROBLEM

It took City Clerk John Gillis nearly an our to accomplish the three minute chore of filling out a marriage intention form for Harry Karl Berglund and Maria Rosa Uria, both of Houghs Neck.

Seemed Berglund spoke only Swedish, Uria only Spanish and Gillis only English – and the interpreter wasn't really well versed in any of them.

Affordable Housing And 10-Year Plans

Recently, the Quincy Leadership Council on Chronic Homelessness made up of social service advocates, city officials and business leaders presented a plan to end chronic homelessness in Quincy. They even held a ceremony at the Thomas Crane Library and presented the plan to a Bush administration official.

According to Philip Mangano, the head of the US Interagency Council on Homelessness, the plan "is a model for other cities," and "one of the best in the country." He predicted that "the quality of life for everyone will be improved through this great plan..."

I've worked for the state Department of Mental Health since 1972 in both direct care and support services and I have little faith in these 10-year plans to cure this problem or that problem. Doing anything is better than doint nothing but trying to get more grant monies for homeless will have little if any actual effect in getting the homeless housed.

In the past 30 or so years the homeless crisis has grown. There are many factors creating this crisis. The lack of affordable housing has created homeless families. The closing of many inpatient DMH units led to the increase of the chronic homeless on our streets. There are still not enough group homes and many of the former clients float downward through the cracks and end up on the street or shuttle between homeless shelters.

Today, not only do we have folks wandering our streets living in shelters or back alleys, we have poor and working families struggling to keep a roof over their family's head.

I wonder if the city's leadership council on homelessness had homeless people on it offering suggestions as to why it has happened to them and what they see as a possible solution? It's one thing to talk about the issue and another to live it.

Dancing around the issue for 10 years means that in 2015 we will have to come up with another 10-year plan and by then the homeless crisis will be the much greater.

When developers want to build in Quincy, does the city require them to set aside so many affordable units? Putting monies in a trust fund doesn't build housing for those who need it. Linkage out to be real linkage.

Also, every luxury condo, townhouse or apartment built in this city sends housing costs and monthly rents soaring higher and higher. This can help increase our homeless population and move people closer to crisis.

The chronic homelessness is not just former DMH clients off their meds. That is too simple an answer. Single people and working families watch their rents skyrocket and see the city catering to developers building more luxury units. Everyday, more people move closer to being homeless themselves.

Instead of worrying about five or 10 years now, how about worrying about tomorrow, this week or next month? Money isn't going to solve this homeless issue and neither will 10-year plans.

Fifty-seven years ago both President Harry S. Truman and Minneapolis Mayor Hubert Humphrey both said housing was a right guaranteed to every American. It was in 1948 and remains so today.

Don't blame ex-DMH clients for the problem, blame the problem on a lack of affordable housing for all.

A Flag Amendment Would Jeopardize Constitution

It behooves me to disagree with all those who wish to make it a crime to desecrate our American flag. Many who are in favor of a Constitutional Amendment are most responsible and are trained to think. The term models and symbols are inanimate examples of expression in design: freedom and liberty take actions that demand human action.

Freedom and liberty are action expressions of conviction, which need rules of law to argue declared in the "Constitution." The anomaly, models and symbols when established within the context of the United States Constitution do not need anything to protect it or them.

The depth of the words expressed in our Constitution should not be placed in jeopardy for dispute, through an objection of words, action on or about our national flag.

Same Sex Marriage

The recent endorsement of same sex marriage by the United Church of Christ should not be taken to mean that all United Church of Christ churches support homosexual marriage. Union Congregational Church of Wollaston, a member congregation (for now) of United Church of Christ, holds the Bible as our rule of faith and practice, affirms the divinity of the Lord Jesus Christ as well as his blood atonement for sin and defines marriage as a heterosexual consecrated union between one man and one woman. We know not how our sister United Church of Christ congregations in Quincy or on the South Shore shall respond to the vote of the United Church of Christ Synod regarding same sex marriage. However, to paraphrase Martin Luther, "Here we stand, we can do no other."

Quincy Students Honored For After-School Ideas

Nine Sterling Middle Schools students were among 49 others in Norfolk County who received top honors for their participation in Sheriff Michael Bellotti's School Essay Contest.

Of the nearly 500 essays submitted, 49 students received honors for their compositions on the subject of their dream after-school program. Essays ranged from a variety of topics, from dance classes and community service projects to a student-run television show and a rocket club.

Sterling Middle School students and their honors were: 6th Grade - Justin Ricciarelli, first place; Vinny Wang, second place; Kathleen Lesslie, third place. 7th grade - Tea Trebicka, first place; Marisa Saraci, second place; Lien Do, third place. 8th grade - Janine Shappee, first place; Siobhan Moriarty, second place; Brooke Chevalier, third place.

Boston Globe columnist Bella English, guest speaker at the sheriff's awards ceremony, congratulated students for their inventive and detailed program ideas.

Bellotti said the children did a "wonderful job" writing their essays and describing their dream after-school programs.

"As a supporter of after-school programs, I think it's important to hear what the children themselves want to be involved in. As adults and parents, we always have to listen," he said.

The sheriff's Youth Education Division chooses the winners after grading the essays on grammar, composition and overall development of ideas.

The sheriff runs an after-school program in Braintree during the school year that focuses on outdoor adventure-based education and leadership skills.

Harry Potter Day Friday At Thomas Crane Library

It's Harry Potter Day Friday, July 15, as the Thomas Crane Public Library celebrates the adventures of the young Wizard of Hogwarts in "Harry Potter and the Half Blood Prince."

The festivities begin at 10 a.m. when you can get sorted and help de-gnome the front lawn and later in the afternoon you can drop into Diagon Alley to make a craft.

Throughout the day, Harry Potter movies, word puzzles, coloring sheets, etc., will be available for all ages although some may be too advanced for the very young.

The library suggests ages 4 and older for de-gnoming the lawn and 3 and older for the crafts. Feel free to dress in robes, hats or other wizarding clothing.

Registration begins Monday, July 18, for Tiny Tot Tunes, an innovative early childhood music and movement for under-4-year-olds accompanied by an adult.

Two sessions of the program are being offered Wednesday, July 27, at 10 and 11 a.m. in the large meeting room of the main library directed by Melissa Williams.

Registration is required, limited to Quincy residents, and can be made by dropping by the library or calling the Children's Room at 617-376-2411.

The program is sponsored by the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Rocking boats are the craft of the week for the week of July 18 in the Art-to-go series of weekly art activities that travel throughout the Quincy library branches..

Drop in anytime from 2 to 4 p.m. to create a project. Supplies will be at the Main Library Children's Room on Mondays, Adams Shore on Tuesdays, Wollaston on Wednesdays and North Quincy on Fridays.

In keeping with this year's "Going Places" theme, the 18th annual Summer Storytellers Series will travel around the world with tales from the six continents.

Asia is the continent of choice for Tuesday, July 19, with "Tales from Nepal," an exploration of the Himalayan kingdom through its folk literature, presented by puppeteer Sarah Lamstein

Two tales will be dramatized — "The Uttis Tree," performed as a shadow show, and "Queen Lakshmi and the Vat of Sticky Tar," a nonsense tale enacted as tabletop object theater.

A marionette representing the Hindu god Bhairab dances to Nepali music to conclude the performance.

Pajama Time with Joan Goodman is a drop-in evening storytime for ages 2-5 accompanied by an adult. There will be singing, dancing and storytelling. Children are welcome to attend in pajamas.

Both Pajama Time and the Summer Storytellers programs are presented Tuesdays at 7 p.m. at the Main Library, 40 Washington St., and do not require registration

They are sponsored by the Quincy Arts Lottery and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

Spruce Up Chapel Grounds In Preparation Of Reopening Sunday

Friends Of Star Of The Sea Host 'Gardening Gathering'

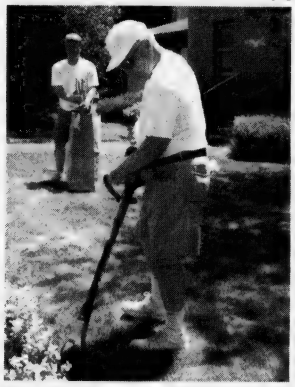
The Friends of Star of the Sea organization sponsored a "Gardening Gathering" Sunday on the grounds of Star of the Sea Chapel in the Squantum section of Quincy.

The gathering was organized in preparation for the reopening of Star of the Sea this Sunday, July 17.

Among the gardening activities, flower beds were re-planted, hedges were trimmed, shrubs were transplanted, mulch was spread, and two statues each received a beautiful new bed of flowers upon which to rest.

In addition, "Rose of Shannon" bushes were planted on the right side of the church, and about two dozen yard waste bags were filled with weeds, which were hand-pulled from all over the property. Finally, a birch tree on the rectory side of the grounds received a much-needed pruning.

"Within just a few hours, a few dozen members of our faith community, young and old alike, transformed a barren desert into what will once again become our spiritual home," said Erin Driscoll, life-long Star of the Sea member. "We are truly blessed".



"The grounds of Star of the Sea look better now than they did before our suppression," said Sean Glennon, Co-chairperson of the Friends of Star of the Sea. "The success of our gardening gathering illustrates that accomplishments are truly limitless when thoughtful and dedicated people work together for the greater good of the church."

The Friends of Star of the Sea look forward to celebrating their re-opening Mass this Sunday at 12 noon. With even greater anticipation, however, they look forward to celebrating a more festive liturgy – a "Mass of Rebirth" – on July 24. That day will mark nine months since Star of the Sea was suppressed by Archbishop O'Malley.

Star of the Sea is located at 107 Bellevue Road in Squantum. For more information, visit www.marystaroftheseа.org

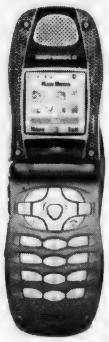
Residents Asked For Input On Sailors Pond Upkeep

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro has sent out a survey to neighbors near Sailors Pond to determine how the city can improve the natural area.

Gutro said he will review the survey results and convey the recommendations to Mayor William Phelan's office and city department heads.



"There are a whole host of issues with the pond," said Gutro. "It is my hope we can produce a consensus from the survey and present it to the mayor."

Gutro said it is his hope that the city can institute a more routine and comprehensive plan that will allow Sailors Pond to thrive for years to come.

City Purchases New Sand Rake For Municipal Beaches

It may look a bit odd, but that new machine being dragged across Quincy's municipal beaches this summer is actually a new sand rake that will be used to clean litter, debris and other trash below the sand surface.

Purchased with revenues from the hotel/motel tax, the new sand rake will be deployed across the city's municipal beaches throughout the summer, according to Mayor William Phelan's office. The rake will clean litter, glass, cigarette butts, debris and other trash up to six inches below the surface.

"The new rake will allow for cleaner and more attractive beaches," said Phelan. "We are investing resources in drawing people back to our beautiful waterfront and the sand rake will provide a super place to sit, sun or simply enjoy the sand."

The Park Department will operate the sand rake. In addition to picking up debris, it rakes across the sand, leaving a smooth, attractive contour to the sand.

Eight municipal beaches in Squantum, Merrymount, Hough's Neck, Germantown and Quincy Point will be cleaned by the city's new beach rake, according to the mayor's office. Wollaston Beach is owned and managed by the state's Department of Conservation and Recreation and not affected by the rake.

St. Chrysostom's Townhouse Project Complete

Great Faith Venture Called A Miracle For Parish

The St. Chrysostom's Townhouse Project neighboring the Wollaston church on Hancock St. over two years in the making is now complete.

"Our great Faith Venture has become an answer to our prayers, it is a miracle," said John Iredale, Senior Warden. All of the units constructed have been sold with over a $1 million dollars going to the church.

The project's site at 535 Hancock St. was built where the rectory once stood - a single family home -- with an adjacent open vacant lot. There are 10 units total with one owned by the church to serve as a rectory.

The Townhouse Project was recently turned over to a new Condo Association.

"It was a blessing to have such a talented group of volunteers from the church that devoted hundreds of hours to make this a success. It really is a miracle," said Ron Iacobucci.

The funds raised from the project will be invested wisely to provide for improvements and maintenance to the church and to fund a full time priest for the parish, Iacobucci said.

The Building Committee included John Iredale, Ron Iacobucci, Ward Smith, Marcia Freeman, Bill Messmer and Helen Shalit with Rev. Claude Smith serving as an advisor to the group.

"They all contributed their own special gifts to this project," said Iredale. "Without the leadership of Claude Smith and Ron Iacobucci this project would never have happened.

"Ward Smith brought his expertise as an engineer that was instrumental from preplanning to construction. Bill Messmer was our treasurer and handled all the finances. Marcia Freeman was chief designer, sales person and attorney all rolled into one and Helen Shalit with here architectural degree from MIT and her expertise in the landscaping department made a tremendous difference," Iredale said.

"The real difference however in the success of this project was John Iredale," Iacobucci said. "His knowledge and experience in the construction business made things go very smoothly."

"We were blessed to have the support of our Parishioners, the Diocese of Massachusetts and the neighborhood. Our success reinforces our belief that this Parish is meant to remain a strong, viable and committed House of Worship," Iacobucci added.

St Chrysostom's is in the process of calling a full time priest with a search committee headed up by Iacobucci.

Dana-Farber Cancer Education Van Visiting Sidewalk Festival Today

The Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's Blum Family Resource Center Education Mobile Program will visit Quincy today (Thursday) during the Sidewalk Festival.

The Blum Family Resource Center van is Dana-Farber Cancer Institute's innovative approach toward accomplishing their mission of eradicating cancer.

The special visit coincides with the Mayor William Phelan's current "Crusade Against Cancer" effort. The van will be located near the locally active prevention group.

This van brings cancer prevention programs, early detection education and screenings to the public at a convenient, close-to-home location.

The summer months bring a more intense focus on the dangers of skin cancer, however, the van will also include other presentations, including the Gillette Company Prostate Screening, Cancer Education program, Tobacco Control and the National Bone Marrow Donor Program, as well as other health career data.

With the slogan, "On The Road To Better Health" emblazoned on the side of the 39-foot vehicle, Dana-Farber intends to bring its expertise in the battle against cancer to the public, focusing on the underserved, through early detection prostate cancer screenings and several other cancer education/awareness and prevention presentations.

MARLA AND HER reptiles will entertain people of all ages Saturday at 11 a.m. during the 35th annual Quincy Center Sidewalk Festival.

OSHA Blames Company For Fatal Craneway Collapse

Testa Corp. responded cautiously to official allegations of 15 violations of safety and health standards in the deaths of two workers at the former Fore River Shipyard.

Elvis Munoz, 44, and David P. May, 36, were removing asbestos from an adjacent building Jan. 26 when a portion of the craneway in Braintree collapsed, crushing them.

A report by the U. S. Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA) found that Testa Corp. did not survey the craneway's stability and gave the workers the okay to enter before it had been properly braced.

The proposed penalties total $60,400.

Nancy Sterling, a spokeswoman for the company, said Testa is reviewing its three options, which is compliance, a conference with the OSHA regional director or an appeal to an independent commission.

"Fortunately, we have time," she said, noting that Testa has 15 days in which to respond.

Steve Testa, president of Testa Corp., said in a statement that the company "will continue to cooperate with OSHA and will be reviewing the violations carefully to determine the company's response."

"The company has a full-time safety officer and we make safety a top priority," he said.

"Nothing we can say can appropriately express our regret for the pain and suffering of the workers and their families involved in the accident.

"The company, and I personally, deeply regret that the accident occurred. Our thoughts and prayers remain with all those who were impacted."

The 190-foot, skeletal craneway straddled the Quincy-Braintree line. The Quincy portion was taken down in November but the section in Braintree was not removed until last month.

The OSHA report said that an engineering survey would have shown that some beams had been cut through by torches and cross-bracing supports had been removed leaving the structure overstressed.

"Had proper procedures been followed and required safeguards adhered to, this fatal accident could have been avoided," said Brenda Gordon, OSHA's area director for Boston and southeastern Massachusetts.

OSHA's inspection also identified several health hazards to workers exposed to airborne concentrations of lead while torch-cutting lead-coated steel, including lack of a written lead compliance program.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative Provides $150,000 For Fratelli's Pastry Shop

City officials joined the owners and Quincy 2000 Collaborative in a check presentation to Fratelli's Pastry Shop. scheduled to open Thursday, July 21, on Broad Street, off Southern Artery.

The full line bakery will feature both a wholesale and retail component and expects to employ 10 people.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative provided a $150,000 business load through the organizations Loan Pool and the City of Quincy Community Development Block Grant Revolving Loan Program. The funding was used to help renovate the property, purchase equipment and provided needed working capital.

With a combined 38 years in the bakery business, brothers Giovanni Milone and Pino Santarpia dreamed of owning their own business.

"The assistance Quincy 2000 provided in developing the business plan and obtaining a business loan was invaluable," commented Milone.

Quincy 2000 Collaborative is the city's public/private partnership for economic development.

"Through the continued support of Mayor Phelan , Quincy 2000 is one of the few places where startup businesses in the city can obtaining financing," said Quincy 2000 executive director Dean Rizzo.

"Because Fratelli's Pastry Shop met the job creation criteria, we were able to make Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) loan funds available for the renovations and equipment purchases."

Planning Director Dennis Harrington emphasized, "This loan is another good example of the type of resources that the city, in partnership with Quincy 2000 is able to provide to help businesses grow and expand in our community."

Quincy 2000 provides financing for Quincy businesses either through the city's CDBG Revolving Loan Fund or through its Quincy 2000 Loan Pool. The Loan Pool is a consortium of 11 area banks which has approximately $5 million available for business expansions, equipment purchases, start-up costs and sign and facade improvements.

Participating banks in the Loan Pool consist of Asian American Bank, Bank of America, Century Bank, Citizens, Colonial Federal, Eastern, Rockland Trust, South Shore Cooperative, South Shore Savings. Sovereign and Bank of Canton.

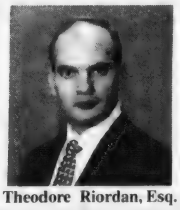
mer months."

The state's Department of Conservation and Recreation tests the water quality at Wollaston Beach on a daily basis during the summer months.

Chickatabot Beach has been the only beach that has been closed for more than a one day "re-test" this summer.

Phelan said the community's hard work in identifying and eliminating the sources of beach closings is paying off.



"We have fixed sewer pipes, educated residents about pet waste, kept our catch basins clean and collectively invested billions into the cleanup of the harbor and bay," said Phelan. "We need to continue to be vigilant but our work is paying off."

Beach test results of Quincy's municipal beaches can be found on the City of Quincy's website at www.ci.quincy.ma.us.

A Job Well Done

By SGT. DAN MINTON

On June 30th, at approximately 3:20 p.m., Officer Mike Brandolini, who works the Quincy Center business area beat on foot, was dispatched to Angelina's Pizza on a "tagging" report. Tagging is using a marking instrument, most often spray paint, to put graffiti on a wall or other object. In this case, a citizen reported that he witnessed the suspect tag the outside of the building and described him as a young black male.

SGT. DAN MINTON

Officer Brandolini was nearby and observed a lone black male standing in front of the restaurant, right next to a pole that was tagged. After determining the tagging was fresh, Officer Brandolini asked the suspect for identification. The suspect stated that he did not have identification but did provide a name, which was checked for warrants. Officer Brandolini became concerned when the suspect reached into his pocket and seemed very nervous. Since he did not know the suspect and was unsure what was in the pocket, for his own safety, Officer Brandolini performed a pat frisk for weapons. Although he did not find any weapons, Officer Brandolini, through his training and experience, did feel what he believed to be individually packaged bags, possibly Marijuana, in the same pocket that the suspect kept moving his hand about.

When Officer Brandolini inquired as to what was in the pocket, the suspect pulled out matches. This only escalated the officer's probable cause since matches are relevant to Marijuana. The officer then radioed to have another officer swing by his location. When Officer Brandolini ordered the suspect to remove the package in his pocket, he began walking away, objecting that the officer had no right to search him. After repeating his instructions to the suspect, to no avail, Officer Brandolini grabbed the suspect's arm to prevent his escape and possible destruction of evidence. As soon as he did this, the suspect began to struggle violently to get free. They both went down to the pavement as Officer Brandolini tried to hold onto the 200-pound suspect. During the scuffle, the officer's radio button was accidentally pressed in and the sounds of the fight were broadcast over the air. Dispatcher Gregg Hartnett picked up on this and ordered any officer nearby to respond.

Within seconds, Officer Joe McGunigle jumped out of his cruiser and joined in the scuffle, which almost sent the three of them through a glass doorway. After getting the suspect handcuffed, Officer Brandolini searched the right pocket and found five individually wrapped packages of a green leafy substance that had the odor and appearance of Marijuana. Once the arrest was complete, officers returning the congested area to normal by moving traffic and dispersing the estimated 100 onlookers.

The suspect, a homeless 26-year-old, listed Quincy as his address. He was charged with "Possession of Class D with Intent to Distribute" and "Resisting Arrest." Officer Brandolini stated that the suspect was not charged with "Assault and Battery on a Police Officer" because the suspect was trying to get away and did not strike him.

Often times in the profession of police officer, what appears to be a simple call can change dramatically at a moment's notice. This call started out as a "tagging" complaint and ended up with one drug arrest and two officers involved in a violent struggle.

Nice work!

As a side note: Many positive comments were made to me and other officers about the excellent handling of the crowds during the July 3rd celebration in Houghs Neck. Many people thanked the department for making this such a wonderful "family event." Credit goes to Lieutenants Corliss and McKusker and their officers.

Women's Senior Golf Tour

Granite Links To Host Inaugural BJ's Charity Championship Aug. 5-7

Many of the greatest names in women's golf will compete when the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship tees off Aug. 5-7 at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills in Quincy and Milton.

Sponsored by BJ's Wholesale Club, a leading operator of warehouse clubs in the eastern United States, the BJ's Charity Championship will bring the excitement and competitive shotmaking of the Women's Senior Golf Tour (WSGT) to Quincy.

The Official Senior Tour of the LPGA, the WSGT is open to professional women golfers who are 45 and older.

The WSGT features some of the most recognizable names in women's golf, including four with New England roots: Pat Bradley, Patty Sheehan, JoAnne Carner and Jane Blalock. Other prominent members include LPGA Hall of Famer Nancy Lopez, Jan Stephenson, Sally Little and Tammie Green.

"BJ's Wholesale Club is thrilled to be teaming up with the Women's Senior Golf Tour for the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship," said Paul Bass, senior vice president of Food Merchandise for BJ's Wholesale Club, Inc. "Our tournament promises to shine the spotlight on this incredibly talented field of women golfers while raising money for important charitable programs."

"Our partnership with BJ's Wholesale Club to bring women's professional golf back to Boston is a great win for golf fans in this community," said Jane Blalock, former LPGA great and president of the Women's Senior Golf Tour. "Boston has a strong women's golf heritage, with past events such as the Boston Five and Ping Welch's Championship. Some past winners of those events are looking forward to returning here for the BJ's Charity Championship."

The BJ's Charity Championship will comprise a one-day Pro-Am event (Friday, Aug. 5) and two-day Professional Tournament (Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 6-7). The Professional Tournament will be a 36-hole best-ball featuring 26 two-player teams. Boston area-favorite Pat Bradley is among those planning to attend.

"I'm excited about the chance to compete in front of my hometown fans," said Bradley, a native of Westford. "I think Boston will be impressed by the sharp competitive spirit of the Women's Senior Golf Tour and will discover the BJ's Charity Championship to be a great golf event in support of a great cause."

The three-day event will be held at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills, one of the Boston area's most talked-about new courses. Located just 10 minutes south of Boston in Quincy and Milton, Granite Links was built using fill materials excavated from the "Big Dig." The course offers sweeping panoramas of the Boston skyline.

"Granite Links is proud to be hosting the BJ's Charity Championship," said Stan Abrams of Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills. "Having many of the greatest names in women's golf compete in such a unique setting is sure to make the tournament an event to remember."

Olay, a leader in the field of women's skin care, will serve as presenting sponsor of the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship.

Information regarding ticket sales for the golf championship will soon be available. For more information about the event, contact the Women's Senior Golf Tour at 800-466-1133 or www.wsgtour.com.

Money raise from the tournament will be administered through BJ's Charitable Foundation to support community-based programs benefitting children and families. Established in 2004, the goal of BJ's Charitable Foundation is to create a positive, long-lasting impact on the communities BJ's serves.

"We started four years ago as a private BJ's golf tournament to raise money for a local charity has evolved into an impressive professional sporting event with significant charitable impact," said Bass, who also serves on the Board of Directors for the BJ's Charitable Foundation. "Our goal for this inaugural BJ's Charity Championship is to raise $1 million for worthwhile causes."

North's Shauna Kelly Caps Off Track Career In Fine Fashion

North Quincy High School track captain Shauna Kelly capped off a dramatic finish to her career with 15th place in the New England High School championships at Thornton Academy in Saco, Maine.

Just weeks ago Kelly didn't even make the Atlantic Coast League All-Star team due to a bad outing against other top javelin throwers in a tri-meet at Dennis-Yarmouth.

She quickly rebounded to claim third in the ACL championship and then went to place second in the Class A championships at Andover.

There, the stage was set for a rather unexpected performance. After a week of working with an improved running approach and a different javelin, Kelly opened up at the All-States with throws of 117 feet, 128'10" and 119' — all exceeding her personal best which she set a year ago in winning the State Coaches Invitational.

Her 128' toss kept her in first until the fifth round when Jessica Stern of Lunenburg threw 134' to win the event. The result of being the best Eastern Mass. girl was a selection to the Boston Globe, Boston Herald and Patriot Ledger All-Scholastic teams.

Kelly's expertise also extends to soccer and basketball and so she is one of the few athletes to claim tournament participation in all three seasons. She will play basketball this fall at Lasell College.

The other athlete placing at the Eastern Mass. Class A. meet was Paula Morgan in the shot-put (fourth).

At the MSTCA Freshman-Sophomore Meet at Franklin on May 30, freshman Virginia Wong, another rising star in javelin circles, won the event with a personal best 105'8".

At the annual awards banquet, Kelly won the MVP award, Kelly Pineo the Coaches Award and Kristen Newsom the Unsung Hero Award.

BY THE DASHBOARD LIGHT

These days, dashboard lights come in about as many colors as cell phone covers. In fact, some automobile manufacturers enable vehicle owners to select from a number of color options. Owners of European cars, in particular, have long been accustomed to reddish-orange instrument panel lighting, which is derived from the instrumentation illumination in airplane cockpits. This reddish instrumentation is known to preserve the night vision of pilots. However, new research from Virginia Polytechnic Institute's Locomotion Research Laboratory reveals that blue may be a better option for older drivers. It seems that drivers suffering from presbyopia, the age-related inability to see up close, are better to distinguish close objects illuminated by blue than those at the red end of the spectrum.

Whatever the color of your dash board lights it is important to pay attention to any illuminated warning lights. For most all your maintenance or repair needs count on us. Our ASE Certified service technicians here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO, 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550), will do their part in making sure your car is properly maintained for maximum efficiency, performance, and safety. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Hours: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm.

HINT: Research has also revealed that older drivers have difficulty hearing high-pitched warning sounds in vehicles, such as those used for back-up sonar.

Ask Dr. Gilbert:

What You Must Know Before Having Botox

DR. KENNETH GILBERT

Botox is botulinum toxin (Type A). Myobloc is Type B. Injections of botulinum toxin, A or B, can improve some undesirable facial lines and wrinkles.

Since many of these lines and wrinkles are due to muscular contractions, weakening or paralyzing relevant muscle groups with the toxin produces a smoother skin appearance.

Botulinum neurotoxin is produced by a bacterium. It works on the nerve terminals where they join to make the muscles work. The paralysis is reversible. The nerve endings will grow and heal. This recovery takes a 3 to 6 month period of time. Then the muscles will start working again and the lines and wrinkles will reappear.

The duration of the effect may be longer or shorter than expected. There is approximately a 5% poor response rate to the injections. Common areas treated are the glabellar frown lines, which are the vertical lines at the base of the forehead between the eyebrows, the Crow's feet wrinkles at the corners of the eyes, and horizontal forehead lines. The treatment of the forehead lines does not result in as much improvement nor does it last as long as other areas commonly treated. Wrinkling around the lips and vertical neck "bands" have also been treated.

Contraindications to the use of the toxin are diseases that affect the muscular or neurological system (for example: Myasthenia Gravis or Eaton-Lambert syndrome), the presence of an allergy to the toxin, concurrent use of aminoglycoside antibiotics, pregnancy and lactation. Your doctor will ask you about your general health as part of the visit.

Injections are performed in the office. You have the option of using a topical "numbing" cream on the areas to be treated. The cream must be applied approximately 1 hour before the procedure. You will be in an upright position for the injections.

To treat the frown lines, 5 to 7 injections are needed at the base of the forehead and above the eyebrows. To treat the Crow's feet areas, 2 to 3 injections are used on each side. To treat the forehead lines, 4 to 16 injections are used on either side of the lines to be softened.

A short period of observation is then needed to make sure there is no bleeding. An ice-pack may be placed on the areas treated.

You will then be discharged. You will be asked NOT to massage the area but will be asked to contract the injected area(s) for approximately the next 90 to 120 minutes. This helps with the uptake of the toxin by the muscles we want to paralyze. You can expect a response in 2 to 3 days, with the period of maximum weakness in approximately 1 to 2 weeks after the treatment. You may be asked to return in 4 to 6 weeks for a check-up.

The typical interval for retreatment is 3 to 4 months. Possible complications are: bleeding and bruising - the potential for bruising can be reduced by not taking any medications that inhibit blood clotting, such as vitamin E, aspirin, aspirin-containing products, and nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (such as motrin, naprosyn, etc.) for a period of 10 to 14 days before treatment, temporary numbness of a small area of the forehead, transient headache (2 to 3 hours), ptosis ("drooping") of the eyebrow or upper eyelid - this may occur in approximately 5% of patients 1 to 2 weeks after the treatment and last 4 to 6 weeks, and, rarely, the development of antibodies to the toxin which will decrease its effectiveness.

The costs for a treatment will most likely be available over the telephone and you should inquire about payment when you make your appointment.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

WHERE DO TEETH COME FROM?

According to recent research, the day may soon come when it will be possible to replace missing teeth with those created through techniques utilizing stem cells and gene therapy. Researchers have presented techniques that enable dentists to coax existing teeth to repair and regenerate themselves, as well as techniques that "make" teeth from scratch. In some instances, researchers are attempting to reprogram cells in the mouth to behave like tooth-growing cells by convincing them that they have to produce new teeth. Other techniques involve the use of stem cells, which have the potential to become any type of cell or tissue. With this in mind, researchers extracted stem cells from the pulp of adult teeth.

We are pleased to keep you informed about new dental research and techniques. We encourage you to talk to your dentist about oral health care issues. Your health is our first priority. Preventing dental disease is less costly and more rewarding than correcting the problem. We will show you how to care for your teeth. After all, teaching you how to prevent dental disease is our primary goal. We provide quality, personal dental care in a comfortable, immaculate, professional environment at 44 Greenleaf Street. PH: 617-479-6220. Let us help you bring out that natural smile. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Researchers indicate that it will take at least 10 years to perfect a technique that enables them to grow teeth from scratch.

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

"Count your blessings," goes the old song.

At a time of economic uncertainty, tight job situations, and tightening of belts, it is indeed time to count our blessings, to realize the graciousness of God in each of our lives.

Many times we overlook such blessings as good health, the blessings of family and friends, the blessings of good food, and many countless others. There are many hidden blessings as well: strength through sickness, patience through suffering, peace in the midst of stress, forgiveness from guilt.

Yes, count your blessings. Who can really count them all? The words of the ancient Aaronic Benediction are for each one of us: "The Lord bless you and keep you; The Lord make his face to shine upon you and be gracious to you; The Lord lift up his countenance upon you and give your peace." (Numbers 6; 24-26).

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A perplexing situation needs to be dealt with in order to avoid problems later on. Rely on both your own sense of what's right and the advice of someone you trust to help work it out.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Let your sharp Taurean business insight guide you when considering a "dream deal." Without all the facts, it could turn into a nightmare. Remember: Investigate before investing.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Sharing so much of your time and your gifts with others is what you do so well, and this week, don't be surprised if others want to share with you. Enjoy the experience. You've earned it.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A difficult personal situation seems to defy efforts to resolve it. Perhaps you're too close to it. Take some time to reassess what went wrong, and then see where things can be set right.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Leonine pride could be piqued a bit when someone else appears to be standing in your light. Be patient and resist the urge to growl at the interloper. You'll soon be the "mane" attraction again.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A professional situation benefits from your clear assessment of the circumstances involved. On the personal side, that new relationship looks as if it will continue to grow.

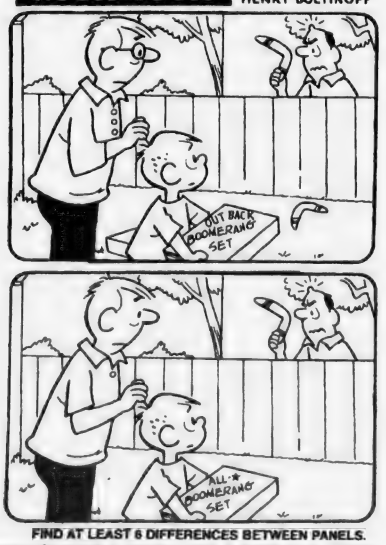
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) More good news about a loved one helps reassure others who could not share your more-optimistic view before. Continue to help everyone in need of your comforting presence.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Creating new friendships could turn out to be the unexpected but welcome result of reconnecting with old friends. The weekend is a good time for fun and games. Enjoy!

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The more you learn about what you plan to do, the more likely you are to consider making some changes in your plans. This is good; don't resist it. Instead, go with it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) A career change is still in your aspect, but a potential workplace change could be what you've been looking for. See what develops before making any drastic moves.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your energy levels are high this week, which should help you get all your workaday tasks done and still leave you with enough breath to handle some domestic challenges.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) An unexpected fluke could cause problems with your travel plans. If so, use the time to troll for other available options, and you might be pleasantly surprised at what turns up.

BORN THIS WEEK: You enjoy the company of lots of people, but you can also treasure the moments shared with just one special person.

New Trolley Routes Boost Tourism

9 a.m. to 5 p.m. through Labor Day, then weekends until Oct. 10, 2005, according to organizers. Service will be free to all users during this season.

The pilot program will be paid for with an infusion of $425,000 in federal highway funds. Ridership will be studied for possible long-term implementation, according to Delahunt.

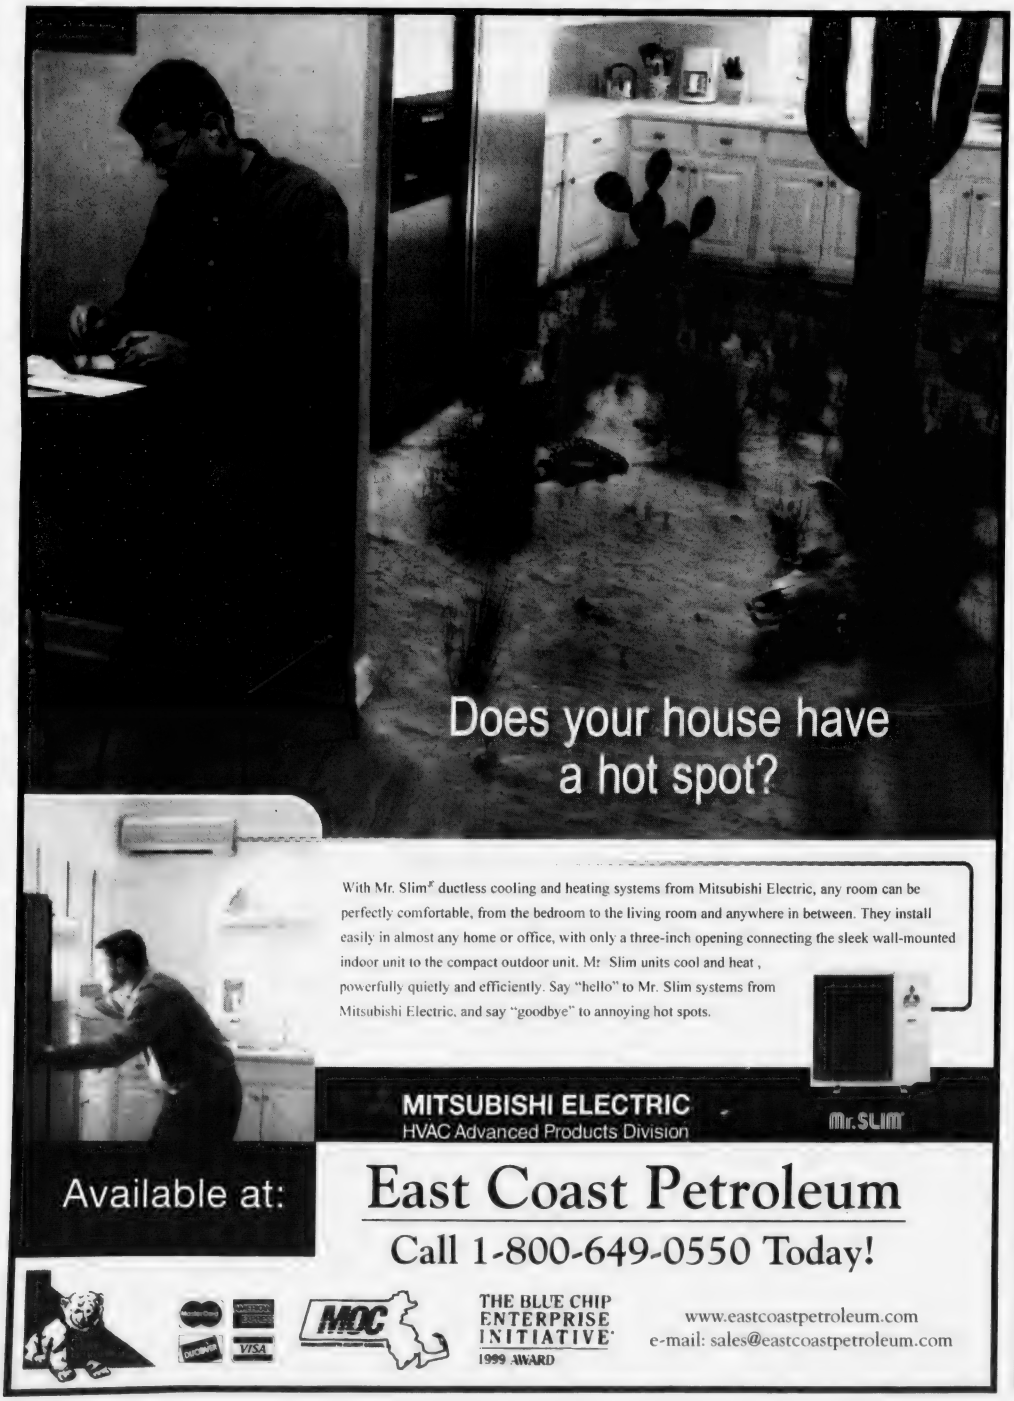
Delahunt said next year he would seek to secure additional funding to continue the program. Over time, increased ridership may allow the program to become self-sustaining, he said.

The Adams National Historical Park has operated a trolley bus transportation system since 1995 that tranports park visitors to the presidential birthplaces and the Old House, the summer White House for both Adams presidents.

Both the enhanced trolley service and ferry projects are part of a larger regional tourism effort, called the Cultural Coast, which was launched last year by Delahunt to enhance regional business opportunities during the Democratic National Convention.

The Cultural Coast group is designed to create a "synergy," as he calls it, among the arts, historic and natural resources across the region and includes key tourist destinations such as Cape Cod, Martha's Vineyard, Plymouth and Quincy.

To that end, officials unveiled a new brochure advertising the Cultural Coast. Funded by a $25,000 state grant, the brochures are the first step in a concerted effort to regionalize tourism in southeastern Massachusetts.



Officials said they are looking to tap into the more than one million tourists that visit Plymouth each year. Quincy is expected to have approximately 220,000 visitors to the Adams National Historical Park, and that number continues to rise, according to tourism officials.

Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy, said she believes the expanded trolley service will encourage Boston tourists to visit Quincy via the ferry because visitors will be able to step off the boat and onto a trolley rather than having to call a cab or find a bus.

But the expanded trolley service is not for tourists only, she said.

"This is not only a great program for tourists, but it's also beneficial to Quincy residents," said Logue. "This free service will enable Quincy residents to take advantage of everything the city has to offer."

For more information about the new routes, call the National Park Service at 617-770-1175, Discover Quincy at 617-657-0527 or the Harbor Express Ferry Service at 617-222-6999.

HAPPY WORSHIPPERS linger to renew old friendships on the steps of the Star of the Sea Chapel in Squantum after the first mass celebrated there since it was closed as a church by the Boston Archdiocese last Oct. 24. Quincy Sun Photos/Noreen O'Shea

Squantum Church Reopens As Chapel

'Mass Of Rebirth' Sunday At Star Of Sea

By TOM HENSHAW

Joy and excitement returned to Catholics in Squantum Sunday as the first mass in nine months was celebrated in a rejuvenated Star of the Sea Chapel.

And, according to those who managed to pull the former church back from the brink of extinction, as good as it was on Sunday, the best may be yet to come.

"Technically, that was the opening mass," said Sean Glennon, co-chairman of the Friends of the Star of the Sea, which fought long and successfully to bring back the church as a chapel.

"But there was no cantor, no choir. Next week we'll have a piano and the children's choir will be back. We call it a 'mass of rebirth.' There'll be a social gathering after mass."

Star of the Sea Church was closed by Archbishop Sean O'Malley as part of the Boston Archdiocese reconfiguration plan that shut down upwards of 60 churches.. The last mass was celebrated Oct. 24.

REV. JOHN O'BRIEN, pastor of Sacred Heart Church in North Quincy, chats with his new Squantum parishioners after celebrating the first mass in nine months in the Star of the Sea Chapel.

Since then, the only authorized Catholic activity on the Squantum peninsula was an Easter Sunday mass permitted by O'Malley to be held in the gymnasium of the Squantum School.

That mass was hastily organized after the Friends of the Star of the Sea had announced plans for a mass of their own, to be celebrated by a married priest in a Protestant church.

More than 500 people, the capacity of the house, packed the church for Sunday's mass, with people standing in the back, lining the walls and filling the corridors, all sweltering quietly in a room that lacked air conditioning.

"The mood of the people was joyful, excited," said Glennon. "It was like the Easter mass, overflowing. Everyone was so happy to be together again and have a permanent home once again.

Worshipping once more in the familiar confines of her old church brought back memories for Terry Lord-Piatelli as she watched old friends step

After Romney's Veto Override

QMC Could Net $18 Million In Medicaid Funds

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) is on track to receive approximately $18 million in federal Medicaid funds after the state Legislature overrode Gov. Mitt Romney's attempt to block it.

The state Legislature last week overrode Romney's veto of an amendment which allows the state to apply for federal Medicaid cash and use it to pay back costs related to the near-closing of Quincy Medical Center in 1999.

The then-city-owned hospital became a private institution affiliated with Boston Medical Center under an ambitious bailout plan spearheaded by then-Mayor James Sheets.

Local legislators, led by Reps. Ron Mariano, Stephen Tobin, Bruce Ayers and Sen. Michael Morrissey, included an amendment in the 2006 state budget that allows the state to exploit a complex Medicaid program that could potentially yield about $35 million from the feds.

Although QMC could get at least $35 million, the medical center is due to pay back a $12.1 million state loan beginning in 2007. Under federal regulations, QMC must also pay the city an additional $2.7 million for the bailout, according to Morrissey.

After fulfilling these and other commitments, QMC is looking at a net gain of $15 to $18 million, said Mariano.

Hospital officials thanked Quincy's state delegation and Mayor William Phelan for their efforts to secure the funds.

"These funds are essential to Quincy Medical Center to continue its transition and provide tomorrow's care today," said Bonnie Kaplan Goldsmith, the medical center's director of public relations.

Mariano said the Legislature's override is the first step in a process that will ensure that the federal government fulfills its commitment to QMC. The override compels Romney to apply for the program.

"We never received a dime of federal money to save the hospital," said Mariano. "The city and state did its part, but the only commitment that wasn't kept was the federal commitment."

The city is still looking to recoup some of the $33 million it committed to the hospital as part of the bailout plan in 1999. The city has already repaid a $12.1 million loan it got from the state to help with the bailout.

The city is expected to receive about $3 million, which represents about one half of its payment for the QMC bailout this year, according to Morrissey.

To Compete With City's $430,000 Offer

Glad Tidings Will Bid On St. Boniface

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Glad Tidings Assemblies of God Church, a growing Pentecostal congregation based at 158 Washington St., will compete with the city in a bid to buy the former St. Boniface Catholic Church in Germantown.

Lynn Wheaton, wife of Rev. Greg Wheaton, pastor at Glad Tidings, confirmed Tuesday that the congregation will seek to purchase the Shed St. building from the archdiocese. She said the church's board of deacons is expected to meet this week to determine a bid amount.

The decision comes after about 200 congregants last Sunday visited the former St. Boniface Church with a real estate agent. After the site visit, congregants generally supported a move to purchase the former church, said Wheaton.

"We have outgrown our building and have been looking for a larger building for years," she said. "It's difficult to find a sanctuary as large as the one at St. Boniface, so that would be an ideal location for us."

Due to Glad Tidings' surging population, parking has become difficult, as has the scheduling of activities.

If Glad Tidings is the win

Addiction Physician Shares Stories Of Recovery At Germantown Neighborhood Center

Addiction physician Dr. P.S. Kishore, founder of the National Library of Addictions (NLA), held his 2005 "Clean Summer Series" recently at the Germantown Neighborhood Center.

Dr. Kishore and NLA "ambassadors," recovering addicts, who recently graduated from high school, shared information regarding the harmful effects of drug use and abuse. The NLA Ambassadors told how they got addicted and how they managed to begin and continue recovery treatment.

"With users getting younger and younger, there is a stronger need to address this epidemic early on," Dr. Kishore said. "This grassroots program is designed to educate and build awareness of the dangers of drugs."

The "Clean Summer Series" is an eight-week program, which targets a different youth group each week and provides them with the keys to drug prevention.

Founded in 1993 by Dr. Kishore, the Brookline-based National Library of Addictions is a not-for-profit, intellectual gathering place for health care professionals and community members who are working to overcome the effects of addictions.

The Library serves as a research facility, continuing medical education institute, and gathering place for professionals to exchange ideas and develop treatment methodologies.

Thomas Pecoraro Named Chief Plumbing Inspector

Lifelong Quincy resident Thomas Pecoraro has been named Chief Plumbing Inspector for the city, Mayor William Phelan announces.

Pecoraro has served as plumbing and gas fitting inspector in the Inspectional Services Department for the past nine years. He is a licensed master plumber and member of Plumbers Local 12.

Phelan called Pecoraro "a great employee" who is deserving of the appointment.

"We are fortunate to have a great plumbing division and I am sure Mr. Pecoraro will serve this city and its citizens well in his new role," the mayor said.

Pecoraro is also a former member of the Ward 4 Neighborhood Association Board of Directors.

WARD 1 COUNCILLOR Leo Kelly checks out washed beach sand being added to Edgewater Drive Beach in Houghs Neck. In an effort to replenish its beaches, Quincy is adding new sand to seven municipal beaches throughout the city. For the first time in 30 years, the city added new sand - in this case 30 truckloads - to Edgewater Drive Beach, Kelly said.

Steve Harold Appointed To Zoning Board Of Appeals

Quincy resident Steve Harold has been appointed to the city's zoning board of appeals by Mayor William Phelan.

Harold, a plumbing contractor from West Quincy, joins Jack Garland, Dave Portesi, John Greene, William Cunniff, Marty Aikens and Brian McNamee on the city's zoning board. Harold has been appointed to a three-year term as an alternate.

"I am proud to appoint Steve Harold," said Phelan. "He is a community-oriented individual with a background that will assist the zoning board. I appreciate his willingness to serve our community."

The zoning board oversees implementation of the city's zoning ordinances and reviews applications seeking relief from the zoning ordinances. The board meets bimonthly in the city council chamber.

Looking for an investment that's guaranteed to grow?

What's the main problem with stock market investments and mutual funds? Simple – you just can't be sure that your money will grow. In fact, you can't even be sure that your principal won't shrink. And while no one would deny that market-based investments should at least be considered as part of a diversified investment plan, sometimes you have money you don't want to put at risk in any way. Maybe it's money you're going to need soon. Maybe it's your IRA or Roth IRA. Maybe you're a conservative saver who simply wants investments that are guaranteed to grow. We understand. Which is why we don't sell stocks. We don't sell mutual funds. We don't sell annuities. Colonial Federal is a community bank providing competitive-rate options for today's conservative saver. If you're looking for a safe investment that's 100% guaranteed to grow, come see us. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 21, 1861, Confederate forces under P.T. Beauregard turn back Union General Irvin McDowell's troops along Bull Run in Virginia. The inexperienced soldiers on both sides slugged it out in a chaotic battle that resulted in a humiliating retreat by the Yankees and signaled, for many, the true start of the Civil War.

• On July 23, 1903, the first two-cylinder Ford Model A is delivered to its owner, Dr. Ernst Pfenning of Chicago. The Model A was the affordable runabout that Henry Ford needed to begin marketing his company's stock, and the following year the Ford Motor Company was incorporated.

• On July 22, 1933, American Wiley Post becomes the first aviator to fly solo around the world when he lands his Lockheed Vega monoplane at Floyd Bennett Field in New York. Post completed the 15,596-mile journey in 7 days, 18 hours and 49 minutes.

• On July 20, 1948, President Harry Truman institutes the first peacetime military draft in U.S. history with a proclamation calling for nearly 10 million men to register within the next two months. Truman's action came during increasing Cold War tensions with the Soviet Union.

• On July 24, 1956, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis perform their final comedy show together at New York's Copacabana Club. They made their first appearance in 1946 at a club in Atlantic City, N.J. — performing an act in which screwball Lewis constantly interrupted straight man Martin's singing — and were an instant hit.

• On July 19, 1966, 21-year-old actress Mia Farrow marries singer Frank Sinatra, who was 30 years her senior. The marriage lasted only two years.

• On July 18, 1984, James Oliver Huberty opens fire in a crowded McDonald's restaurant in San Ysidro, Calif., killing 21 people and wounding 15 others with several automatic weapons. Huberty, who had a history of mental problems, was killed by a SWAT sharpshooter.

Those Pet Peeves

Maybe the heat and humidity have got to me. Or, maybe I've always been a natural grouch and just now being outed.

No, I think it's more those pet peeves of mine that have come rushing to the surface once again.

I've gotten some of them off my chest in the past. But I've also picked up a few new ones. Maybe some of them are some of yours, too.

Anyway, here they are at random, not in any particular order:

• The guy or gal – lazy or just plain inconsiderate – who leaves a shopping cart in a parking space at the supermarket instead of returning it to where it belongs. Curses on them. May the dozen of eggs they might have bought on sale be all cracked by the time they get home.

• Worst still. The guy who sneaks into a parking space reserved for the handicapped.

• The "get-the-hell-out-of-my-way" cowboy who roars through a residential neighborhood, tires screeching, ignoring parked cars and driveways a youngster might dart out from. You really wouldn't feel too badly to see him again a block or so away wrapped around a steel utility pole.

• And his buddy who has a ball for himself speeding through puddles seeing how many pedestrians he can drown. You wouldn't mind seeing him later, too, with his car dead in a flooded street.

• The "music lover" with the blaring car radio who thinks the noise he's tuned into is actually music and insists everyone within earshot should hear it, too. He's a candidate for an early hearing aid.

• All those medical TV commercials that come on one right after the other. And after listening to all the side effects described you get to thinking you might prefer the medical problem instead.

• And speaking of TV commercials, why do most of them have to be twice as loud as the program itself?

• The bartender who hasn't learned how to mix a good dry martini.

• People who just stand around talking during the playing of the National Anthem.

• And those who show no respect to Old Glory passing by in a parade.

• Fox TV's Sean Hannity who can be pretty darn insulting when a guest disagrees with him on an issue. He's on a one-way street: Republican always right, Democrats always wrong.

• Kids on skateboards risking their young necks maneuvering with traffic on Hancock St.

• The horn tooter who lets you know the instant the red light turns to green.

• The guy who likes to surprise you by waiting until he starts making a turn before giving a directional signal.

• You're waiting for an important phone call at night. The phone finally rings. And a voice says: "Hello, how would you like to save money on your telephone bill? Let me tell you now." (Click!)

• People who loves dogs – we all do – but the ones that love to let them roam where they please, tipping over trash barrels, leaving souvenir deposits on the lawn and "watering" your shrubs.

• The reader who dishes off a sizzling letter alleging some hanky panky gong on in town and ending it with a challenging: "I bet you don't have the guts to print this letter." But doesn't have the guts to sign the letter.

• And is one of your pet peeves an opinionated columnist forcing his pet peeves on you?

Maybe it is the weather after all.

Hurricane Preparedness Tips

As peak time for the hurricane season approaches, the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) is offering personal preparedness tips for residents.

Weather experts are predicting another active year for hurricanes and tropical storms in the Atlantic Ocean.

"Every family should have a basic supply kit that could be used for any emergency," said MEMA Director Christine McCombs. "Everyone should keep certain items around the house in the event of a hurricane or other severe weather. A portable radio, flashlight, extra batteries, and extra food and water are all essential to help your family weather the storm."

Every household should have a supply of canned goods and other non-perishable foods that do not need cooking, along with bottled water, extra prescription medication, and extra food and supplies for infants and pets. A manual can opener and a basic first aid kit are also essential.

McCombs also said residents should call local authorities to determine where emergency shelters are located in the community.

According to MEMA, residents are encouraged to have the following items handy in case of a hurricane or severe weather:

• Canned goods and non-perishable foods that do not need cooking, such as canned meats, fruits, vegetables, nuts, break, cookies, peanut butter and jelly, and bottled water;

• Manual can opener;

• Prescription medication (2 weeks supply);

• Pet food/supplies;

• Disposable plates, cups and utensils;

• Infant care items, such as baby wipes, disposable diapers, baby food and formula;

• First aid supplies;

• Battery-operated radio, with extra batteries;

• Watch or battery-operated clock;

• Masking and duct tape;

• Matches;

• Ice chest.

James Kennedy Deployed To Kuwait

Army Reserve Staff Sgt. James M. Kennedy has deployed to Kuwait to assist in vessel transport and cargo operations in direct support of Operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom.

The soldier is a member of the 595th Transportation Terminal Group, one of four transportation groups in the U.S. Army's Military Surface Deployment and Distribution Command.

The 595th Transportation Group conducts all of the U.S. Central Command's seaport operations.

In Kuwait, service members operate in the port of Shuaiba, the busiest military seaport in the world. Members of the Army, Navy Reserve and Department of Defense civilians work together to accomplish the important mission of delivering military cargo to commanders in the battlefield.

The magnitude of vessel transport and cargo involves massive handling of equipment, materials, supplies, and munitions needed to sustain military operations in the fight against the war on terrorism in Kuwait, Iraq, Afghanistan, Pakistan, countries in the Horn of Africa, and Persian Gulf region.

Kennedy, a cargo terminal movement supervisor with 17 years of military service, is the son of James M. Kennedy of Grafton, and Patricia A. Kennedy of Quincy.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A real postcard view of Wollaston Boulevard looking south from near the end of Carle Road. The picture was takcn about 1913 just a few years after the Boulevard was built through the marsh along here. The narrow unmarked roadway was more than adequate at the time since there were few automobiles to use it. Mike wider today, and a busy commuter route to Boston, the present roadway will be somewhat narrowed by the current reconstruction project. It is expected this will slow down traffic. The big tree in the distance is still growing at the foot of Beach Street. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Modern Buses Replace Trolleys

This Week
1947
58 Years Ago

John I. Donovan, chairman of the public trustees of the Eastern Mass Street Railway, said modern bus service will replace street cars in Quincy in a very short time.

The only stumbling block, said Donovan, is an old World War I agreement with the Navy that the company supply street car service to Quincy Point. The company was negotiating with the Navy to modify the agreement.

During World War I the Navy financed construction of the Quincy Point street car service to provide better transportation to the Fore River Shipyard. Eastern Mass agreed to repay the Navy on a per capita passenger basis.

"It has been our hope," said Donovan," that all trolleys should be eliminated from our system and last year a start was made on the South Shore when buses were substituted for street cars on the Houghs Neck line.

"Our general counsel has been of the opinion that for us to remove trolley service without permission of the Navy would be a technical violation of the present contract we have with it."

NOISE ABATEMENT PLANNED

Mayor Charles A. Ross conferred with Capt. Otho O. Smoot, commanding officer of the Squantum Naval Air Station, and they announced a new plan to counteract the noise of planes taking off from the base.

Capt. Smoot said from now on planes will gain altitude over the Neponset River and make no turns until they reach 1,000 feet or more and then follow the water to skirt the city.

FORE RIVER SHIPS NEEDED

Admiral William H. P. Blandy, commander-in-chief of the Atlantic Fleet, indicated that the Navy still had need for the unfinished ships at the Fore River Shipyard, the heavy cruisers Des Moines, Salem and Northampton.

"In any overseas campaign where we take the offensive we would need a fleet whether the other fellow has one or not," said Admiral Blandy on a visit to Boston.

The 18th annual Summer Storytellers Series presents an array of talents old and new. In keeping with this year's Going Places theme we will travel around the globe with tales from six continents. These programs are for school age children. Five-year-olds just entering Kindergarten may prefer the Pajama Time programs.

Storyteller Dennis Caraher tells tales of cowboys and cowgirls. Hear stories and songs about the old west, some original, some as old as them thar hills.

Pajama Time with Joan Goodman is a drop in evening storytime for ages 2-5 accompanies by an adult. Rock and Roll is Here, Let's Play! Join Joan and use up some of that boundless energy singing, dancing, listening to stories. Children are welcome to attend in pajamas.

Both programs are presented on Tuesday evenings at 7 p.m. in the Main Library in Quincy Center and do not require registration. These programs are sponsored by the Quincy Arts Lottery and the Friends of the Thomas Crane Library.

This summer enter the Read and Review Raffle. Readers of all ages can pick up book review slips at the Main Library or any branch library. Read or listen to a book, fill out a slip, and return it to any library location to be entered into weekly drawings for bookstore gift certificates.

Third-Grader At Clifford Marshall School

Ashley Desire Recognized For 'Savings Makes Cents' Essay

Ashley Desire, a third-grader at Clifford Marshall Elementary School in Quincy, was a regional semi-finalist in the "Savings Makes Cents" essay contest.

Hosted by Bank of Canton, "Savings Makes Cents" is part of the Quincy School-Community Partnership that connects local businesses, community service agencies and agencies of higher education with individual Quincy schools.

Sponsored by the State Treasurer's Office, "Savings Makes Cents" is conducted in over 400 schools across the Commonwealth teaching students the importance of good money management skills and providing a better understanding of the banking industry.

Bank of Canton has offices in Canton, Quincy, Randolph and Brookline and lends throughout the state. Established in 1835, Bank of Canton is a Massachusetts-chartered mutual savings bank offering consumers, businesses and commercial customers access to deposit, loan, investment and convenience service options. Senior Resource Center Raises $10,000 For South Shore Elder Services

Senior Resource Center, Inc. (SRC) recently held a fundraiser and reception in support of South Shore Elder Services, Inc. (SSES) at their main offices at 50 Quincy Ave., Quincy.

The fundraising effort was a great success, providing a grand total of $10,000 which will go directly towards SSES' Special Needs Fund. McGlone Kicks Off School Committee Campaign

Celeste McGlone has officially kicked off her campaign for one of the three open School Committee seats on this year's election ballot.

An estimated more than 300 attended the special family-style event at the Adams Inn last Friday. It included limbo dancing and face painting.

"Small class sizes, adding programs to enhance the learning process and the fundamental obligation of a school system to ensure that every school setting is safe.

"My children (J.J. and Scottie) inspired me to run and I am committed to win so that I can work for all the children who attend Quincy public schools.

"I know that by working together for our children we are making a solid investment in our future."

McGlone was introduced by her son, J.J., who is 10 and who came up with his own campaign slogan:

"My mother is running for school committee. Her name is Celeste and she's the best."

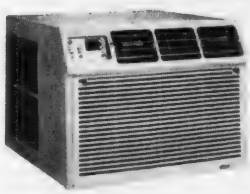
Dear Neighbor,

My name is Celeste McGlone and I would like to be your next School Committee Member. In the coming weeks, I will be in your neighborhood to introduce myself and listen to your ideas about the Quincy Public Schools.

As a mother of two children in the Quincy Public Schools, I know that a happy, healthy and safe environment is key to fostering a child's learning potential. As a former Executive Assistant to both Mayor William Phelan and former District Attorney William Delahunt, I possess the knowledge and experience necessary to be an effective member of the Quincy School Committee.

With a strong foundation already in place, we are presented with the opportunity to continue to develop our school system into a model of educational excellence. I respectfully ask for your support so that, working together for our children, we can accomplish this goal.

Sincerely



Celeste McGlone

Sandy Verhault, a lifelong resident of Quincy, announces her candidacy for a seat on the School Committee.

A graduate of Quincy Public Schools, Verhault dedicates much of her time to the city's various youth and scholastic activities, serving as Commissioner of Quincy Youth Baseball, current president and six-year member of the Quincy Youth Hockey Board of Directors, past member of the Montclair Elementary School's PTO executive board, and representative of the Quincy Citywide Parents organization.

"It would be an honor to serve on the School Committee to advocate for our children's educational needs and voice the valuable opinions, ideas and concerns expressed by parents in an effort to benefit our school system," said Verhault, who is an appointed member of the Mayor's Commission on the Status of Women and the Park and Recreation Board.

"With two children in the school system and a third who recently graduated, I realize the vital role education plays in the future success of our children and I look forward to ensuring our strong academic tradition and working to improve upon areas where necessary," she said.

Verhault will hold her official campaign kick-off Tuesday, Aug. 16 at the Furnace Brook Golf Club from 6 to 8 p.m. Suggested donation is $20.

To Benefit Tourism

Mayor's Garden Party July 29

Mayor William Phelan's annual Garden Party will be held Friday, July 29 beginning at 5 p.m. at the Adams Mansion.

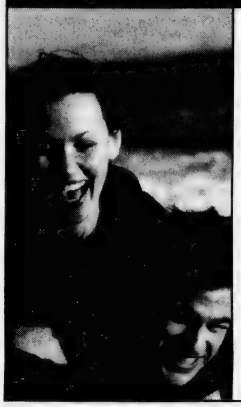
Tickets are $100 and can be purchased by calling the mayor's office at 617-376-1990.

Proceeds from the event will again benefit efforts to improve tourism in Quincy. Last year, the event raised more than $15,000 to assist Discover Quincy, the city's tourism agency.

The Garden Party will precede a free performance by the Boston Landmarks Orchestra to be held on the lawn of the Beale Estate, adjacent to the Adams Mansion on Adams St. The Orchestra will begin playing at 7 p.m.

Food will be donated by Siro's Restaurant. Beverages and a live jazz band will be provided by Tosca Restaurant.

"The Garden Party and corresponding concert provide a great way to spend a summer evening and I think one of the finest events of the summer," said Phelan. "The blending of the music and atmosphere provide for an unparalleled event."



The mayor thanked all sponsors, supporters and participants, including State Street, the National Park Service, restaurant owners and the orchestra.

Quincy 2000 Provides Loans For 3 North Quincy Firms

Quincy 2000 Collaborative, the city's public/private partnership for economic development, announces the recent granting of business loans to three North Quincy businesses.

The three firms are: Boston Baking, Prism Consulting Inc., and Nebraska's Midwest Grille.

"Through the continued support of Mayor Phelan and our banking partners Quincy 2000 is one of the few places where start-up and expanding businesses in the city can obtain business planning and financing," noted Quincy 2000 executive director Dean Rizzo.

"I am pleased that the city is able to provide valuable resources in partnership with our community banks to support the growth and development of the city's business community," Phelan said.

Quincy 2000 provides financing through the city's Community Development Block Grant Revolving Loan Fund or through the organization's internal Loan Pool. Funds are available for business expansions, equipment purchases, start-up costs, working capital and sign and facade improvements.

The Quincy 2000 Loan Pool is a consortium of 1 area banks which has approximately $5 million available to support Quincy businesses.

"The Loan Pool is a great financial resource for Quincy businesses who need an alternative to conventional bank financing," said John McCarthy, Loan Pool Chair and Vice President at the Bank of Canton. Participating banks in the Loan Pool consist of Asian American Bank, Bank of America, Century Bank, Citizens, Colonial Federal, Eastern, Rockland Trust, South Shore Co-operative, South Shore Savings, Sovereign Bank and The Bank of Canton.

PRISM CONSULTING, INC. received a loan of $50,000 from Quincy 2000 Collaborative for vehicle purchases and working capital. At the presentation are, from the left, John McCarthy, chairman Quincy Loan Pool and Vice President Bank of Canton; Wendy Simmons, president and owner of Prism Consulting; Mayor William Phelan, Dean Rizzo, executive director Quincy 2000 Collaborative; Stacy Coco, Business Development Officer at South Shore Savings Bank; Ward 6 City Councillor Alicia Gardner, City Planning Director Dennis Harrington and Karen Simmons, Chief Operating Officer at Prism Consulting

$60,000 To Boston Baking

While today Boston Baking is well known throughout New England for its biscotti, bruschetta, soda-bread, cookies and many other baked goods, it started out specializing only in bagels.

When in 1996 Bob Boschetto and Julee Robey-Boschetto decided to expand their product list they knew they had to relocate their then-based Roslindale company to a more central location.

Quincy 2000 played a critical role in their move to Quincy. First it helped Boston Baking find an ideal facility that could readily accommodate all the baking equipment. The perfect choice was the old Jordan Marsh Warehouse. Quincy 2000 also guided Boston Baking through the complicated electrical, plumbing and permitting proces, mapped out a business plan and most importantly provided Community Development Block Grant funding and loans totaling $188,000 over the years.

This money was used for capital equipment and helped with initial improvements to the facility. Recently, Boston Baking received another CDBG loan totaling $60,000. This time the money was used for working capital and to create seven new jobs. Today, Boston Baking has 23 employees, all specializing in baking and shipping and has plans to add a few more jobs.

Quincy 2000 was a constant support system providing networking opportunities with local officials and other businesses, advising on marketing, sales and accounting issues and always suggesting helpful classes and other business opportunities.

"They helped us with whatever we needed," said Boschetto.

Boston Baking continues to expand and grow with the introduction of Smart Sweets, a healthy alternative line of reduced sugar and Zero Trans Fats goodies, healthy cog biscuits, baklava and many other baked products. They continue to focus on the details and provide "bake shop quality" to the wholesale market.

They attribute much of their success to Quincy 2000 and look forward to working with them just as closely in the future.

$50,000 To Prism Consulting

Wendy Simmons, president and owner of Prism Consulting, founded her company in 1998.

Located at 440B East Squantum St., Prism Consulting develops and implements energy conservation programs for utility companies. They perform energy audits and install energy efficient lighting to reduce emissions and lower energy costs for their clients. The company has 14 employees; eight who work in the office while the others are out in the field visiting job sites.

For a company that has almost half of its employees and much of its business out on the road and in the field, it is crucial to have all of its motor vehicles functioning properly. However, within the past year, three of the company's vehicles needed to be replaced. This is a major financial burden on any company, especially a small business.

Since Wendy was a member of the Quincy 2000 Collaborative, she turned to the organization for help. Quincy 2000 loaned her $50,000 to replace the aging vehicles. With the funds she was able to purchase a new van and two cars as well as some other necessary equipment.

"It is so hard to succeed and flourish as a small business," Wendy says. "All help is very appreciated."

The networking opportunities that Quincy 2000 provides are extremely helpful to Prism Consulting. Even small benefits, such as the use of the conference room at Q2000, proved to be very helpful.

$30,000 To Nebraska's Restaurant

After 30 years in the restaurant business, John LeRoy decided to open his own restaurant and try something new.

He didn't want to open yet another sub or pizza shop, so he did some research. He soon learned that the barbeque niche market was an untapped area in New England yet had a lot of possibilities for growth and expansion. He immediately decided to bring the Southern Cuisine of smoked meats and unique flavors of hickory, apple and cherry woods to Quincy.

After a lot of hard work and remodeling, Nebraska's Midwest Grille, 405 Hancock St. in North Quincy opened its doors in 2003. In the first year, LeRoy realized that he needed a bit more capital for start-up costs and turned to Quincy 2000. He soon received Loan Pool funding totaling $30,000 which he put towards advertising, additional equipment and other expenditures.

LeRoy quickly realized that Quincy 2000 could do a lot more for him. Today, he sees the value of the organization as a voice to the city on behalf of small businesses that have the same concerns.

It is a great way to address issues as a business community and to connect to others, he says. "I am no longer just one person complaining about something, but instead my concerns are made more legitimate by the connection to other business owners."

Quincy 2000 has recently been working with Nebraska's and other businesses in North Quincy to create a solution to the lack of parking.

In the meantime, Nebraska's has been expanding their eat-in business of busy lunches and dinners with catering, take-out and delivery. LeRoy is now launching, Catering For All Occasions, serving corporate functions and social events.

Nebraska's is currently working on becoming a staple in the city and Quincy 2000 has been helping with networking and bringing the business community together.

A $30,000 LOAN from Quincy 2000 Collaborative helped Nebraska's Midwest Grille with equipment and working capital. At a recent check presentation ceremony were, from the left, John McCarthy, chairman of the Quincy Loan Pool and Vice President Bank of Canton; Mayor William Phelan, John LeRoy, owner Nebraska's Midwest Grille, Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, Dean Rizzo, executive director Quincy 2000 Collaborative and John Mannions, Loan Pool vice chairman and Vice President South Shore Savings Bank.

ASIAN AMERICAN BANK has won a $1,000,000 on-line CD auction bid through BidMass, the Massachusetts State Treasury's on-line auction platform. State Treasurer Timothy Cahill (right), a Quincy resident, presents the check to Raymond Tung, president and CEO of Asian American Bank during a ceremony at the Bank's headquarters at 68 Harrison Ave., Boston. Cahill also announced new incentives aimed at banks working in community development and serving minority communities. The competition fostered by BidMass is aimed at benefitting Massachusetts taxpayers through higher investment returns, while the on-line bidding process provides banks with a transparent and efficient means for receiving Commonwealth deposits. The Treasury has been conducting bank CD auctions through BidMass since June 2004.

Glad Tidings Will Bid On St. Boniface

ning bidder, about 100 voting members from the congregation will determine whether to accept the sale, she said.

Currently, about 325 congregants representing 30 different nationalities attend church at Glad Tidings on Sundays, she said. A move to the former St. Boniface Church location would alleviate their growing pains, she said.

"It's such an ideal neighborhood and it would be such a wonderful area to go into," she said of the Shed St. site.

Meanwhile, determined to transform the former St. Boniface Church into a neighborhood center, the city has partnered with the YMCA to make its own bid for the property.

And competition for the property appears to be stiff, as several other parties have already bid on the property, according to Theresa Donovan, a real estate agent with Coldwell Banker, which is handling the sale of the former church.

The city and YMCA made the offer recently after the archdiocese rejected a $420,000 bid by Manet Community Health Center to build a nonprofit community center. Church officials deep-sixed the sale without explanation in June, leading city officials and community leaders to speculate about the reasons for the rejection.

Some observers questioned whether the archdiocese nixed the deal because Manet offers birth control and abortion counseling.

At the time, Manet was the sole bidder on the property.

The city's new deal with the YMCA calls for utilizing a portion of the church building as the Germantown Neighborhood Center, which has been looking to relocate from its current cramped quarters at the Snub Harbor Elementary School.

The new offer, a $430,000 bid, does not include Manet as a partner. The city is expected to use a large portion of its Community Development Block Grant (CDBG) funds from the federal government to pay for the property. The YMCA is expected to use a $285,000 grant from State Street Bank to pay for renovations to the church, if the sale is completed.

A move to St. Boniface would allow the neighborhood center to move out of its cramped quarters at the Snug Harbor Elementary School.

St. Boniface was closed on Jan. 30 as part of the archdiocese's church consolidation plan. In the late 1990's, it was merged with Our Lady of Good Counsel in Merrymount and renamed St. Elizabeth Seton Parish.

The 30,000 square-foot location is zoned for residential use, which means the most likely use would be a housing development. There is enough space to build three single-family homes on the site.

The property has been assessed at more than $1 million.

Several elected officials expressed their support for the city's proposal, saying Germantown would benefit greatly from a neighborhood center.

"The city obviously needs the space for a community center," said Sen. Michael Morrissey. "This would be an ideal location for such a place."

Morrissey suggested the city could use the power of eminent domain to take the property as a last resort.

"I would even advocate the city using its eminent domain powers to take the property for a community center," said Morrissey. "I can't speak for the mayor, but it is an option down the line."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly said he strongly supports the city's bid to purchase the former church.

"I think it's the way to go," he said. "This way, you service the most people in the Germantown area. The neighborhood center is already established, as is the YMCA. The city's plan would service more people than anyone else can."

With the waters of Boston Harbor growing cleaner by the day and the temptation growing to jump in just for fun, it's time to learn to swim and to practice water safety.

The city is offering two programs aimed at providing a safer and more enjoyable day at the beach for everyone.

The first will be held Saturday, July 23, from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Mound Street Beach on Mound Street, Quincy Point.

The second is scheduled for Saturday, Aug. 13, from 10 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at Edgewater Beach on Edgewater Drive, Houghs Neck.

Licensed instructors will lead the programs.

The programs are sponsored by Mayor William Phelan, the Recreation Department and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Lose Weight...
with PERFORMANCE LEAN
only available at Performance Nutrition

This unique product combination allows you to:
Control Appetite / Increase Energy / Boost Metabolism

There are two glaring and until now unavoidable metabolic barriers that prevent fat loss. First, your metabolism may not be that good to start with due to your body's less than optimal production of thermogenic enzymes. Second, when dieting, your metabolism may diminish further as you reduce calories in the quest for more fat loss. If not for these two barriers, losing fat would be infinitely easier.

Performance Lean is research proven to help you avoid both obstacles. It will improve your output of thermogenic enzymes and increase your metabolic "Set Point". This set point is the level of fat that your body burns throughout the day. Performance Lean has been proven to shift your metabolic set point in favor of burning fat, it supercharges your metabolism.

Performance Lean is only available at Performance Nutrition.

Home Makeovers That Won't Break The Bank

(NAPS) — Giving yourself a new home – at the old address – may be a lot easier than you realize. Countless projects don't even require a hammer.

"People today have the confidence and passion to tackle projects on their own. A few simple fix-ups can really enhance the way someone feels about their home," said Lou Manfredini, known as Mr. Fix-It on the "Today Show" and author of the book House Smarts. Here are some easy and cost effective suggestions:

Ten Minute Touch Up: Painting is the number one home improvement project in America, but touching up scratches and scrape marks can be a never-ending process. Rubbermaid's new Paint Buddy stores paint for fast, easy touch-ups. Learn more at www.paintbuddy.com.

Easy Installation: Before changing kitchen cabinets, consider new handles and drawer pulls to update the look. At www.Amerrock.com you'll find the latest in cabinet hardware. Designers say a switch from shiny brass to brushed metal or stainless steel can completely change the look of a room.

Let There Be Light: Nothing brightens a room like natural light. Updated window treatments can help make that happen. The new custom wood Blind Collection by Levolor showcases 55 beautiful furniture quality finishes. They can be complemented by updated drapery hardware and soft treatments for a unified look. Visit www.levolor.com.

Clear The Clutter: While more than 80 percent of American garages today are designed for two or three cars, over half of all garage owners say there's little or no room left for vehicles. When gardening tools and outdoor gear trump the family car, the FastTrack Garage System from Rubbermaid can help with an assortment of shelves, hooks, racks and baskets, many designed for difficult-to-store items such as wheelbarrows, ladders, power tools and sports equipment. Accessories are easy to reposition anywhere on the track and have a rustproof satin-nickel finish and rubber-coated grippers. The system is easy to install and holds up to 1,750 pounds. For more information, go to www.rubbermaid.com.

A Healthy Glow: Dress up the deck, patio or any outdoor entertaining area with candles that double as a mosquito repellent. Bernzomatic makes a Mosquito Block candle that helps shield people from these pesky bugs that can carry disease and ruin a party. In addition to helping provide your outdoor area with a warm candlelight glow, the Mosquito Block candles' patented Linalool formula blocks a mosquito's ability to find you.

Home Improvement Tips: The Easiest Way To Get The Job Done

(NAPS) - The first step in any do-it-yourself project may be to get some advice from the experts.

Professionals have learned the hard way how to make home improvement jobs easier and more efficient. Here are some tips that may help get the job done:

• Start with a list. Although you're eager to get started, picking up a pen and paper can save some time in the long run. Make a plan for how you're going to tackle the job – whether you're painting the deck or putting up new siding. Create a list of materials and tools you'll need for the project, plus a budget of how much you want to spend.

• Check the calendar. How long with the project take? A day? Two weeks? An afternoon? Does the project depend on good weather? Decide on start and finish dates for the job – and factor in enough time to get all your supplies and to work at a comfortable place.

• Take time to get the right tools. It's much harder to do a job correctly if you don't have the right tools.

• Don't hesitate to ask for help if you need it. One of the smartest moves a do-it-yourselfer can make is to ask for help when it's needed. Go to the hardware store and admit that you need some free advice. Take a free clinic to get some pointers. Sometimes all it takes is a more efficient tool or a new way to view the project. For more information, visit www.wagnerspraytech.com.

Home Ideas

(NAPS) — Acidic soil with low pH, or sour soil, is not conducive to healthy plant growth. If tests show your soil is acidic, consider using hydrated lime. According to Dave Jackson of Oldcastle, the lime helps neutralize acid in the soil and helps make nutrients more available. If also helps detoxify naturally occurring elements such as aluminum that are often found in soil. For more information, visit www.yardright.com.

Homeowners who are looking for ideas to personalize their home may want to check out Wood Beautiful, a free magazine from the Minwax Company. The publication inspires and guides do-it-yourselfers of all skill levels with innovative yet achievable wood-finishing and home-improvement projects. The idea-filled magazine can be obtained by visiting minwax.com.

THIS IS A HAMMER

By Samantha Mazzotta

Keeping the Basement Dry

Q. I have a small basement — 20 by 15 feet — that has no windows and is very damp. Since I directed rainwater away from the house, the cement block walls are pretty dry. We also wrapped all of the water pipes and they don't sweat as much. I was hoping you could advise me as to the best sealer for the walls and the concrete floor. — Thomas D., via e-mail

A. Sealers will only work as long as the water pressure on the other side of the walls remains low. The concrete blocks facing the "dirt" side of the house are unsealed and therefore still vulnerable to water seeping through them. After a while, you'll have a wet basement again.

You have already taken steps to reduce this possibility by redirecting the rainwater drainage. The next step is to make sure the grading outside the house isn't directing groundwater back toward the walls. If the ground slopes toward the house, rather than away from it, then groundwater is building up against the foundation and basement walls.

Keep dirt from piling up around the mudsill (sill plate) that runs between the foundation and house walls. As a rule, a 6-inch clearance should be maintained between the ground and the mudsill. This also applies to any ground-level (basement) windows and vents you install.

Additionally, find out if any drainage options were built into the basement. For example, some basement floors are created by pouring the concrete over a bed of crushed rock that contains drainage tiles slanted toward a drain point (sump). These are called "floating slabs" and are often built in areas prone to groundwater flooding, like the Northeast. It's possible to modify the basement floor to increase drainage (or seal it further), but I'd recommend consulting a professional before taking more drastic measures.

Once the groundwater situation is addressed, you can look into sealing the walls and improving ventilation. Installing windows will help bring air and sunlight into the room, but they need to be properly installed and sealed to keep moisture from entering and condensation from forming. Check vents leading from appliances like the dryer and dishwasher too. If they ventilate into the basement, they could be bringing additional moisture into that space. Redirect those vents to the outside of the house.

If moisture is only an occasional problem (such as during damp spring months), bring in a dehumidifier to take care of the excess.

Tips On Avoiding Moving Time Headaches

(NAPS) — Moving to a new city or state can be an exhilarating experience, with opportunities to explore unknown surroundings, develop new relationships with neighbors and create a new home.

Moving can also bring undue stress and anxiety when not well coordinated. Making a plan ahead of time using Internet resources can make for an easier transition.

Studies show that people are turning to the Internet in large numbers to make the process of settling into a new community easier. A recent comScore survey revealed that consumers who had moved in the past six months were almost two and a half times more likely to have used local search sites, such as Switchboard.com (www.switchboard.com), than average consumers.

Spending a little time in advance on a Web site that offers local business listings and a mapping feature helps people who are moving to quickly identify where the local coffee shops are, the discount superstore that may come in handy, the closest vet or the nearest pharmacy. Not only can exploring the new neighborhood online be fun, it helps in the preparation of any move and saves time in the long run.

To make life even easier, sites like Switchboard allow users to plot all the businesses they need to visit on a map and send contact information straight to their cell phone. Having driving directions and phone numbers handy in one location vs. on various pieces of paper can reduce the chaos of a move and lower the stress level.

Another useful resource for moving in the United States Postal Service Web site (www.usps.com). It has a change of address form, along with information and time line for when an address change request should be filed, how long it takes before the request is active and how long mail will be forwarded to the new address.

When changing an address, don't forget to update utilities, credit card companies and magazine subscriptions to ensure timely delivery at the new location. One to two weeks ahead of a move is the best time arrange the cancellation date of services such as water, garbage, electricity, phone and cable and to set up new services. For other monthly bills and subscriptions, a good rule of thumb is to contact the company when the bill or publication arrives the month before the move.

Moving can be a life-changing event, and sometimes a challenge – and it's important to evaluate a location to ensure it's the best place for the future. With that in mind, approaching moving with an organized plan and using the best online resources can make relocating a simpler experience than it has been in the past.

Teams Sought For Volleyball Challenge At Wollaston Beach

The 7th annual Wollaston Beach Volleyball Challenge will take place on the southern end of Wollaston Beach Sunday, August 7 at 10 a.m. Interested teams are encouraged to sign up now.

"With the visible improvements happening along Wollaston Beach, the enthusiasm for this tournament continues to grow," said Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro, co-organizer of the tournament.

In the past, businesses, political candidates, city departments, civic groups and individuals have sponsored teams. Last year 16 teams signed up for the event. Gutro's team won the tournament last year.

Karen Djerf, co-owner of Tony's Clam Shop and co-organizer of the tournament, said, "City and state investments and activities like this help bring people back to Wollaston Beach. We've been a proud sponsor of this event since the beginning and it really does generate excitement for Wollaston Beach."

There will be three nets with constant play in this double elimination tournament, according to Gutro. Local sponsors contribute to provide free volleyball challenge t-shirts to the first 100 players registered. Prizes will be awarded for winners and runners up.

Jim Rendell, North Quincy High School Girls Volleyball Coach, volunteers his time as the head official.

Up to 16 co-ed adult teams can compete in this annual event designed to raise funds for educational and recreational activities along the beach. Teams must consist of three men and three women. One male and one female alternate on each team are permissable.

Registration costs $125 per team. Proceeds will go to the Wollaston Beach Cleanup fund designed to promote educational and recreational events along Wollaston Beach as well as scholarships for high school volleyball players from Quincy Public Schools.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

Your Child's Health Update:

Skin Infections

(NAPS)–As children rush to play outdoors and enjoy the warm weather, the fun activities they participate in can be hard on their skin, leaving them vulnerable to minor skin infections.

Especially at sporting events, day-camps and outings, children can get minor cuts and scrapes. These abrasions can allow bacteria commonly found on the surface of the skin to enter the body, causing an infection. The infection can spread to others through skin-to-skin contact and from shared items, such as bedding, towels and sporting equipment.

Parents should watch for signs of skin infection, which may include:

• Redness, tenderness, warmth, pain and swelling around a wound or broken skin

• An area of red skin, followed by blisters and crusting lesions

Children with these symptoms should be taken to a pediatrician for proper diagnosis. If the infection is caused by bacteria, oral antibiotics may be prescribed. In the meantime, parents can elevate or immobilize the affected body part to reduce swelling and pain. Pain relievers may help reduce discomfort.

After several days of antibiotic treatment, the doctor may schedule a visit to ensure symptoms are improving. Even if your child is feeling better, it is important to take the full course of treatment to help prevent antibiotic resistance. To make treatment easier for you and your child, ask your doctor to an appropriate antibiotic that does not require refrigeration and tastes good. Research suggests that an effective, pleasant-tasting antibiotic may lead to completing the full course of treatment, as young children may be more willing to take it.

The best way to prevent skin infections is to protect children from cuts and scrapes. Doctors recommend wearing pants and long-sleeved shirts while hiking and sandals on the beach or at the park.

At 59 Franklin St., Quincy

New Owner At Performance Nutrition

Performance Nutrition, a vitamin, natural product and sports supplement business with several New England locations including 59 Franklin St., in Quincy, has a new owner.

Dominick Walsh, moved to New England from Colorado after purchasing the Performance Nutrition stores. Walsh said the Quincy store, as well as the other regional stores, will remain at their present locations. Other stores are located at 594 Providence Highway, Dedham; 150 Highland Ave., Seekonk, 196 East Main St., Milford; 11 Main St., Nashua, N.H.; and 1295 Post Rd., Warwick, R.I.

Walsh said he is very excited by the opportunity to purchase the stores here. "The people here are great; they are friendly and very health conscious."

Walsh has more than seven years of experience working in the natural products, muscle and fitness, and sports supplements industry. After getting a degree in business administration from the University of Wisconsin, he began his career in natural products, muscle and fitness and sports supplements as a store manager in the Vail, Colorado resort area. He soon began working with the nutritionists and personal trainers to the stars who vacation and reside in the resort area. This involved determining the proper mix of natural products and supplements to produce effected weight loss or weight management for the nutritionist's star client.

"Effective weight loss does not come from all the new so-called miracle diet products from the right combination of proven products some of which have been around for years," said Walsh, who has trained his employees at each store on weight-loss solutions and has set up a display in the Quincy Performance Nutrition store that showcases each of the products that make up his weigh-loss solution.

"If you are trying to lose weight, you should stop by one of our stores, and we will show you the combinations of proven, tested products that produce weight-loss results," he added.

Walsh has also worked with the trainers of various top athletes to develop a strength solution. "We came to realize that there is no one combination of muscle building product that will work for everyone." Instead, he says, he has developed several different combinations of products that customers can assemble to come up with their own custom strength solution.

Walsh says he also spends time researching new products and reading the latest tests results that come out on the store's current products. "I like helping people and I find the nutrition and supplement business fascinating."

Walsh said customers will see some changes in the Performance Nutrition look and product mix. He said he plans to update the look of the stores while broadening the product mix and stocking cutting edge products. There will also be more women's specific products and more items for general health like green foods, and cleansing products.

Performance Nutrition carries a wide variety of health and nutrition products including muscle and fitness supplements, general health products, vitamins, and weight-loss products. All stores carry the NOW vitamin brand which makes multi-vitamins, L-Carnatine (energy and mood enhancer), Omega-3 (heart health) and Glucosamine and Chondroitin (arthritis and joint treatment) among others.

In the muscle and fitness area, the stores carry hundreds of products including creatine, muscle mass gainers, amino acids, protein powder, muscle repair supplements, and workout recovery boosters. The stores' natural health products range from flax oil, grape seed, red rice yeast, and ginkgo biloba to enzyte and ogoplex.

Current "hot sellers" include his weight-loss solution, meal replacement products like protein shakes and ready-to-drink meal replacements. For more information, call 617-786-9393.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century
by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.
ALL SHAPE AND SIZES

While permanent teeth are subject to natural variations in shape and size, it sometimes happens that the variation is great enough to cause problems. For instance, it is not at all uncommon for one or more teeth to be misshapen, as is the case with the "peg" lateral incisor. This tooth is more narrow and pointed than usual. In other cases, individual teeth may be relatively large or small. Most common are large central incisors. These teeth figure prominently in the upper front portion of the dental arch. Variations such as they may contribute to spacing problems with adjacent teeth, or create alignment problems with corresponding teeth in the opposing jaw. If so, some alteration may be called for.

Come to our office for a consultation. There are many ways we can give you a youthful, attractive and natural looking smile. You can always discuss your dental concerns with us. Good dentistry is more than excellent clinical skills and state-of-the-art equipment. We feel that mutual trust is a factor in the success of your treatment. Our entire staff believes that open communication can help build this trust. Anytime you have a question, please don't hesitate to ask. We invite to you to call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Our office is located at 44 Greenleaf Street. We're here to help. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. If teeth are misshapen or otherwise irregular, the dentist can apply cosmetic techniques such as bonding, tooth resculpting/recontouring, and the application of veneers to create a more attractive smile.

Memorable Season For Quincy Legion

The 2005 Quincy Legion baseball club will go down as one of the best teams in the history of Post 95.

The team finished at 11-9 which is the best won-loss record in recent memory.

After starting the season 9-4, Quincy Legion bounced back from 5 consecutive losses to win its last two "must win" games to qualify for the playoffs for the first time in four years.

Unfortunately, Quincy Post 095 was forced to use its two ace pitchers, John Santon and Dean Sandonato in order to get into the playoffs. Consequently, Quincy Legion went into the playoffs with a tired pitching staff and lost two straight playoff games to a powerful Dedham Legion squad.

In its last two regular season games facing must-win situations, Quincy Legion showed its character and came up big. John Santon, who emerged as a dominant starting pitcher, took the mound and shut down the powerful Canton bats as Quincy won 10-0. Santon struck out 10 batters in five innings and scattered four hits to record the victory.

Jared Kenney mopped up with two innings of perfect relief.

Quincy Post 95 scored three runs in the second and two runs in the third and fourth innings as the bats finally came back to life. Catcher Tom Conley walked, Tom Power singled to shortstop and Ian Jorgensen beat out a bunt to load the bases. Sean Sullivan cracked a two-run double to right and John Fitzgerald's single brought in the third run.

In the third, Justin Thorley and Conley cracked back-to-back doubles and Power hit an RBI single. Fitzgerald walked in the fourth inning, David Jaehnig singled on a successful hit-and-run play and both came home on another booming double by Thorley.

Post 95 tacked on three insurance runs in the 6th inning when Conley and Power singled, Kevin Bossart was hit by a pitch. Fitzgerald hit a sacrifice fly to centerfield and David Jaehnig singled to center.

Fitzgerald, Drew Loud and Jorgensen turned a team record 20th double play in the fifth to preserve the shutout.

Dean Sandonato took the hill against Cohasset with a playoff berth at stake and he did not disappoint. Sandonato picked up his fourth win of the year as he held Cohasset to four hits while striking out four over six innings.

Quincy made four excellent defensive plays to key the victory. Centerfielder Tom Power made a fine running catch in the left centerfield gap and turned it into a double play when he hit cut-off man Loud who spun and made a perfect relay to punch out the runner trying to tag up to third base.

Leftfielder Justin Thorley made a great diving catch to take away a double.

Third baseman David Jaehnig saved a couple of runs when he robbed a sure single in the hole and threw out the batter by a step.

Second baseman John Fitzgerald stayed in front of a wicked one hope lined shot and turned it into another great 4-6-3 double play.

Quincy jumped out on top offensively in the first when Jaehnig walked, Loud bunted safely and both moved up on a wild pitch. Thorley drove in one with an infield bouncer and Power singled to plate another.

Post 95 manufactured another run in the second inning when Sean Sullivan singled, John Alexander executed a perfect sacrifice bunt and Jaehnig singled to left to drive in the run.

Sullivan cracked a bases-loaded double to the fence in left to drive in two runs in the third inning. Ian Jorgensen blasted a monstrous 2-run homerun high into the trees in left field at Adams Field to scored Power (triple) ahead of him. The homer was the third of the season for the powerful Jorgensen. Jared Kenney and Matthew Jaehnig singled in the last inning as almost every member of the team hit safely.

Quincy Post 95 opened the playoffs with high hopes and things looked great when they took a 4-0 lead in the third inning. David Jaehnig led off the game with a triple to the right centerfield fence and scored on a Drew Loud groundout. Jaehnig led off the third inning with a double over the left fielder's head. Thorley lined a single to right to score Jaehnig.

Sullivan and Tom Power hit back-to-back singles to score another and Sullivan scored the fourth run on a perfectly executed double steal. With pitcher Justin

Quincy Hosts Tournament Aug. 19-27

Local Families Needed To House Players During Babe Ruth World Series

Organizers for the 2005 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series hosted by the city of Quincy are appealing to local families to house players during the tournament Aug. 19-27.

"One of the most exciting ways to experience the Babe Ruth World Series Tournament is by being involved with the players," said Marie Sullivan, housing coordinator for the second series Quincy is hosted. The city hosted the 14-year-old tournament in 2003.

About 50 players, many traveling from different regions of the country, still need housing.

Sullivan, who hosted players during the 2003 World Series, said, "It's a fabulous experience and I would never consider housing again if it had not been." Not only is she housing again, but also her mother and two sisters will be joining her.

"The players had a great time here and were treated to a warm and caring city that welcomed and supported them throughout their stay. How could you not want to be a part of that,?" she said.

The major need in housing players is transporting them to and from practices and games which will be played at Adams Field off Southern Artery. They need their clothes washes, and to be fed meals. Babe Ruth provides some supplies such as laundry detergent and bottled water, while also providing monetary help to all host families.

Sullivan said the best way to house a player is to "keep it simple." Keep the schedule, meals and activities as simple as possible. Each housing family is part of a "team" itself, and "if you plan with your housing team meals and activities, maybe at someone else's home with a pool, and everyone contributes to the meal it is less expensive and the players spend time with their teammates.

"The players," Sullivan adds, " are pretty low maintenance."

The first days the kids are with their families is a "feeling out" process, Sullivan explains. "When the games begin, you get in a groove and everyone is relaxed with each other.

"To sit at the games and root on the kids from across the country because you care about them and want to see them succeed is very exciting. You are very 'connected' to the tournament yourself," Sullivan said.

Anyone interested in housing or for more information should contact Marie Sullivan at 617-328-0610.

POWER GRAB

While some auto enthusiasts boast about the horsepower of their rides, others maintain that torque is more important. Torque may be defined as rotating force while horsepower is the measurement of torque through a specific amount of time. In terms that an auto enthusiast can understand, torque is the muscular accelerating force felt at low engine rpm, and horsepower is the busy high-rpm power that drivers encounter when revving the engine. Many factors help determine whether an engine is torquey, a high-rpm revver, or something in between. By paying particular attention to what rpm the horsepower and torque peaks are obtained, auto enthusiasts can get a feel for how the engine will perform.

Whatever your car's horsepower, LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) is your local auto center that can handle all your automotive service and repair needs, a shop that wants to earn your return business, a shop that treats you like a person and not a number. You can trust your auto maintenance and repairs to us. Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. We are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: There is a new generation of diesel engines on the horizon that will give new meaning to the term "torque."

Davis Club Defeats Westwood, Dedham

Softball

Quincy's 10 and under Girls Travel Softball team moved to a 5-1 record with wins over Westwood and Dedham 2.

The team's lone loss was to Milton.

Davis Club survived a heart pounding finish when visiting Westwood, winning 13-12. Sam Briody pitched great in relief to get the final six outs. The game-ending double play by Nicole Parry and Caroline Kelly secured the victory.

Despite strong pitching performance by Liz Kelly, Davis Club lost to a powerful Milton team, 14-4.

David Club bounced back the following night against Dedham with an attack featuring solid hitting and fielding. Callie Cabral's 3-run double broke the game open for Quincy.

Memorable Season For Quincy

Thorley baffling the Dedham hitters with a combination of slow curves, fastballs, and a nasty change-up good for four strikeouts over the first two innings. The Quincy fans were very excited.

The euphoria didn't last long when Dedham exploded for 9 runs in the third inning. Quincy had a chance to escape with no runs when a line drive double play ball couldn't be handled and the floodgates opened.

Jorgensen pitched well in middle relief helped out by a nice 3-6-3 double play (Sullivan-Loud-Sullivan). Matt Jaehnig gave up three unearned runs in the sixth as the defense got sloppy.

Quincy didn't quit as they scored two runs in the last inning to make the final score 13-6. Loud singled, Thorley doubled and Power singled. Catcher Tom Conley hit a line-dive double and John Fitzgerald had 2 singles as Quincy showed good offense (13 hits) but struggled defensively and had one real bad inning

Quincy Post 95 gave the ball to John Santon last Saturday in front of a big home town crowd at Adams Field. Santon, who was pitching on short rest, was not as sharp as he had been during the regular season. Nevertheless he battled hard and only surrendered two hits over the first three innings. A misplayed fly ball gave Dedham a gift run in the first inning.

Quincy answered when David Jaehnig led off with a walk, went to second a Fitzgerald sacrifice bunt and scored the tying run when Sean Sullivan smoked a clutch two-out line drive single to centerfield. For the second game in a row Quincy took a third inning lead but unfortunately couldn't hold on.

Jaehnig smashed a triple off the fence in centerfield and scored on an infield groundout by Fitzgerald. Thorley followed with a long double to left center but was stranded

Santon started to show some control struggles in the fourth as a leadoff walk followed by consecutive wild pitches resulted in the tying sacrifice fly.

In the key play of the game he walked the ninth hitter on a close pitch. Dedham leadoff hitter B.J. Powers drilled the first pitch he saw high and deep off the flag pole in right field for a two-run homer and a 4-2 Dedham lead.

Quincy only managed three hits (Conley, Loud and Fitzgerald) over the last four innings as their memorable season came to an end. The final score was 8-2.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Did you know your hands can and do betray your thoughts? For example, clapping hands express agreement. Fists express rage. Fidgeting hands express discontent, inhibitions. Doctors watch the hands of patients for tell-tale signs. Well-trained detectives watch the hands of a suspect during questioning.

One of the nation's top salesmanagers told how he schools his salesmen to interpret hand actions of customers. His men stop making statements when hands are pocketed, clasped or hidden. They start asking questions to re-open and enliven the mind. He cited the picturesque pose of old Chinese philosophers. Their characteristic pose shows arms folded across the chest, hands hidden in flowing sleeves. The philosophers knew, centuries ago, the hand could indicate the thinking of the mind.

A tiny baby can certainly tell you whether he wants something offered to him. Open, outstretched hands indicate acceptance. Clenched hands close to the body indicate rejection. Even a baby, without realizing it, replays inner mind thinking with the hands. We thought the idea was worth passing along to both salesmen . . . and buyers . . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Starting something new is always exciting for the adventurous Aries. And here's the good news: This time you might be able to get some assistance in helping you finish what you've started.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Put your daydreaming penchant on hold for now, and face the facts as they are, not as you'd like them to be. Your customary hardheaded approach to "deals," etc., would be called for.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Problems beyond your control might delay some of your plans. But things should start to get back to normal by midweek. The weekend could bring an unexpected (but welcome) visitor.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) It's a good time to buckle down and tackle those unfinished tasks so you'll be ready to take on other projects. The week's end could bring an invitation from a most surprising source.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Mixed signals could create a few stressful moments for the Lion. But by midweek, explanations should help ease the tension. The weekend is party time! Share it with someone special.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) This is a good "catching up" week for finishing tasks, calling old friends and maybe reading that book you haven't opened yet or renting that movie you wanted to see again.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Money matters should be worked out, even if it takes time away from a more romantic situation. Better to settle things before feelings turn hard and angry on all sides.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A job-related problem could turn out to be less troublesome than it seemed at first. Just a few moments of talk 'twixt the parties resolves everything to everyone's satisfaction.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) The Sagittarian Archer takes aim at health and fitness issues this week. Watch your diet, and try to put more exercise time into your typically busy schedule.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) As you continue to focus on a career or job change, it's a good time to look over some of your rarely used skills and see where they can fit into your future workplace plans.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A loved one's health might be worrisome, but there's good news by midweek. Expect people who share your ideas and your goals to try to contact you by the week's end.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A colleague's request that makes the typically perceptive Pisces feel uncomfortable is a request you probably will want to turn down. The weekend favors family get-togethers.

BORN THIS WEEK: You have a gift for making others feel warm and wanted. Even newcomers feel like old friends.

NATIONAL FLOOD INSURANCE PROGRAM
Proposed Flood Elevation Determinations for the City of Quincy, Norfolk County, Massachusetts

AGENCY: Federal Emergency Management Agency
ACTION: Proposed rule.
SUMMARY:

Technical information or comments are solicited on the proposed base (1% annual chance) flood elevations shown on your community's preliminary Revised Flood Insurance Rate Map. These base flood elevations are the basis for the floodplain management measures that the community is required to either adopt or show evidence of being already in effect in order to qualify or remain qualified for participation in the National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP)
DATES:

The period for comment will be ninety (90) days following the second publication of this proposed rule in a newspaper of local circulation in the community.
ADDRESSES:

Preliminary Revised Flood Insurance Rate Maps showing the proposed base flood elevations and their delineation are available for review at the Quincy City Hall, 1305 Hancock Street, Massachusetts.

Send comments to:
The Honorable William J. Phelan
Mayor of the City of Quincy
1305 Hancock Street
Quincy, Massachusetts 02169

FOR FURTHER INFORMATION CONTACT:
Doug Bellomo, P.E., Chief
Hazard Identification Section
Mitigation Division
Emergency Preparedness and Response Directorate
Federal Emergency Management Agency
Washington, DC 20472
(202) 646-2903

SUPPLEMENTARY INFORMATION:

The Federal Emergency Management Agency gives notice to the proposed determination of base flood elevations, in accordance with Section 110 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Pub. L. 93-234), 87 Stat. 980, which added Section 1363 to the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Pub. L. 90-448)), 42 U.S.C. 4001-4128, and 44 CFR 67.4(a).

These elevations, together with the floodplain management measures required by Section 60.3 of the program regulations, are the minimum that are required. They should not be construed to mean the community must change any existing ordinances that are more stringent in their floodplain management requirements. The community may at any time enact stricter requirements on its own, or pursuant to policies established by other Federal, State, or regional entities. These proposed elevations will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents.

Pursuant to the provisions of 5 USC 605(b), the Administrator, to whom authority has been delegated by the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, hereby certifies that the proposed flood elevation determinations, if promulgated, will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. A flood elevation determination under Section 1363 forms the basis for new local ordinances, which, if adopted by a local community, will govern future construction within the floodplain area. The elevation determinations, however, impose no restriction unless and until the local community voluntarily adopts floodplain ordinances in accord with these elevations. Even if ordinances are adopted in compliance with Federal standards, the elevations prescribe how high to build the floodplain and do not prohibit development. Thus, this action only forms the basis for future local actions. It imposes no new equipments; of itself it has no economic impact.

Proposed base flood elevations along flood sources studied in detail are shown on the Preliminary Revised Flood Insurance Rate Map. Lessees and owners of real property in the City of Quincy, are encouraged to review these maps and related materials at the address cited above. The proposed base flood elevations for the Weymouth Fore River are as follows:

	Range of Base Flood Elevations #Depth in feet above ground • Elevation in feet (NAVD)
Source of Flooding	Existing	Modified
Approximately 760 feet south of Germantown Point	None	• 11
Approximately 700 feet south of Germantown Point	None	• 14

OPEN DOORS press home the point that Star of the Sea in Squantum is still a place of worship in spite of the fact that it is a chapel, not a church, and the masses are limited to one Sunday a week.

IT'S NOW Sacred Heart Parish Star of the Sea Chapel.

SEAN GLENNON, co-chairman of the Friends of the Star of the Sea, accepts thanks from worshippers for the committee's efforts in keeping the Squantum church open as a chapel.

ping up to receive communion.

"It was a very emotional time," she said. "It was very upbeat. Everyone was in a homecoming mood. It was like coming home.

"There was a life to that church. It was like a neighborhood. You didn't just go there to go to mass. There was much social life, too.

"I remember when Friday night was chowder night. Whole families would meet there and have supper together. It was as much a part of the spirit as the mission of the church."

O'Malley's recreation of Star of the Sea as a chapel place it under the control of Sacred Heart Parish, which is directed to supply a priest for one Sunday mass a week.

The Rev. John O'Brien, pastor of Sacred Heart, celebrated the first mass himself and remained for some time afterward to chat with parishioners.

"When he acknowledged that Archbishop O'Malley had opened the church for one Sunday mass there was a long applause that lasted more than a minute," said Alicia Gardner, who attended the mass.

Ironically, Maureen Mazrimas, co-chair with Sean Glennon of the Friends of the Star of the Sea, was unable to attend the mass. She was at a family wedding a thousand miles away in Florida.

"Maureen and Sean were largely responsible for this," said Lord-Piatelli. "They researched history from the start as a chapel of Sacred Heart 50 years ago and were able to build a case based on history. Star of the Sea is restored to its original purpose."

But just because the Chapel is open for one Sunday mass per week doesn't mean that the Friends committee will be dissolved. There's more to do, said Glennon.

"The committee will remain intact," he said. "We would like to have more than just one Sunday mass. Our example is St. Lawrence Chapel in Brookline where they have one Sunday mass but also weddings, baptisms and funerals.

"We'd like to reestablish the religious education program or hear a good enough reason from O'Malley why we can't.

"We had 150 kids in the CCD program. There's not enough space for them at Sacred Heart, even after they trek two and a half miles on Tuesday afternoon. It would be easier if we had CCD in house."

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN, Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly and Council President Frank McCauley on Tuesday celebrated the city's purchase of the Bayswater Boatyard in Hough's Neck. As part of the mayor's Natural Resource Investment Initiative, the city bought the one-acre property for $1 million with funds from the hotel/motel tax. Phelan said he is hopeful that the parcel will be used for kayaking, canoeing, small sailboats and other recreational activities. Story on Page 3.

Gardner Withdraws, 5 Ward Councillors Unchallenged

Phelan Unopposed, 12 Seek Three Open School Seats

The city election stage was set Tuesday with the unexpected withdrawal of Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, 12 candidates for three open school committee seats and free rides to re-election for Mayor William Phelan and five ward councillors.

Gardner said "with deep sadness" she would not seek a second term because her husband, William, "has been diagnosed with a serious heart ailment that will require a lengthy treatment and recovery period."

Gardner Statement On Page 13

Gardner's announcement sent two last minute candidates - Brian McNamee and Mark Bracken - scrambling to get the required 50 signatures before the 5 p.m. deadline Tuesday. Both brought back more than needed.

Both ran against Gardner two years ago.

McNamee, who lives at 133 Commander Shea Drive and is now a member of the Zoning Board, lost by just 15 votes. Bracken, a resident of 242 Quincy Shore Drive, failed to win a nomination in the preliminary election.

'City Won't Benefit From Lawsuit,' He Says

Cahill Defends SBA Over QHS Project

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Despite requests for hundreds of documents from the state School Building Authority (SBA), the city maintains it is not gearing up for a court fight against the agency over the controversial Quincy High School project.

If the city does bring a lawsuit against SBA, however, it won't win that battle, State Treasurer Timothy Cahill asserted recently.

Cahill, chairman of SBA, which oversees the disbursement of hundreds of millions of dollars in funds for school building projects throughout the state, made that statement after being asked whether he thought Quincy was laying the foundation for a court fight with SBA.

"I'm comfortable if the city wants to sue us," Cahill told The Sun. "But I'm confident they won't win that lawsuit or benefit from it."

TIMOTHY CAHILL

Cahill's claim follows a request by Tishman Construction Corp. of Boston, the city's project manager on the high school, for hundreds - perhaps thousands - of documents from SBA and the treasurer's office.

Tishman made the request on behalf of the city as part of a public information request, according to City Solicitor Monica Conyngham.

She said the requests are simply a way of trying to obtain more information from the authority and not necessarily a precursor to a court fight.

"It's a perfectly legitimate request," said Conyngham. "We want to make sure this brand new agency that is laying down policy is making its decisions consistently.

"We realize this is a time-consuming request, but people have a right to know what our government is doing, especially with regard to a project that will affect 1,500 kids each year for the next 50 years," she said.

Tishman is asking SBA to turn over all documents in the files of nine school building projects. The firm also asked the building authority to provide records pertaining to school building projects prior to last year's creation of SBA. Some of those requests date back 50 years, according to state officials.

In addition, Tishman is asking Cahill's office to turn over copies of his and his

Pettinelli Named Acting Fire Chief

Deputy Chief Timothy Pettinelli has been appointed to serve as acting chief of the Quincy Fire Department, Mayor William Phelan announced Tuesday.

Pettinelli will serve as acting chief until a permanent successor to Chief Paul O'Connell can be named. O'Connell retired on July 8.

"Chief Pettinelli has served our city well for almost three decades," said Phelan. "He will provide a seamless leadership change and has worked well with all aspects of the fire department. I congratulate him and look forward to working with him."

Pettinelli has served on the Quincy Fire Department for 27 years. He has risen through the ranks, serving as firefighter, lieutenant, captain and deputy chief.

"It is an honor to serve as fire chief and I look forward to the challenge," said Pettinelli. "I am fortunate to inherit a well-managed department that was left in great shape by Chief O'Connell. I hope we can continue to improve."

The Quincy Fire Department is comprised of 214 employees; 141 firefighters, 64 officer and nine other employees. There are eight fire stations in Quincy, making it the largest department on the South Shore.

Beechwood Offers 'Seniors Cooling Center'

When the thermometer reaches for the 100-degree mark and the humidity enfolds you in a blistering embrace, it's time for the "Senior Cooling Center!"

"Our drop-in center is cool and welcoming," said Maryann Mahony, the senior center coordinator at Beechwood on the Bay.

"Quincy seniors are invited to stop by to participate in some or all of our summer activities."

Or maybe just sit and enjoy the air conditioning.

For the past six years, Beechwood has invited so many seniors into the well air conditioned center that it has come to be known as the unofficial Senior Cooling Center for those "at risk."

Beechwood opens at 7:30 each morning and remains open until 5:30 p.m. on Monday, Wednesday and Friday; and until 9 p.m. on Tuesday and Thursday.

There are a wide range of services that seniors might need to see them through the hazy, hot and humid days of summer, including blood pressure clinics, nutrition, fitness, etc. For more information, call 617-471-5712.

City Proposes Regulations For Sidewalk Cafes

By MARIE D'OLIMPIO

The License Board Tuesday took under advisement a draft of proposed regulations regarding sidewalk cafe's presented by assisted City Solicitor Owen Kane.

Kane said the concept of outdoor cafes where people like to have the opportunity to eat outside adds to the character of the neighborhood.

Chairman Joseph Shea who said the whole concept ;is "somewhat driven by the smoking ban" has been getting requests for outdoor patio's for more than 10 years.

He said he was "optimistic" and added the city is changing as well as the marketplace and restaurants

Maralin Manning, executive director of the Quincy Business Association, Dan Rizzo, Quincy, 2000 and Dan Flynnn, chairman of the Quincy Business Council all supported the concept .

Manning said the idea has done well in Europe as well as other places in this country and said it "adds to the ambiance of the city."

Flynn said the extension of premises is an "excellent idea" and said it was "absolutely necessary" in downtown Quincy, comparing it to a smaller version of Faneuil Hall in Boston.

Rizzo said the concept is a "great opportunity to help re-vitalize the downtown area.

In the draft presented to the board Kane said the hours of operation would be Sunday through Thursday from 11 a.m. to 9 a.m. and Fridays and Saturdays from 11 a.m. to 11 p.m. Other rules are as follows:

• That all alcoholic beverages be served to only as a complement to those eating lunch or a dinner meal.

•No artificial lighting and no live music to be used for a sidewalk cafe unless authorized by the city.

•If additional parking is needed, Kane said it is up to the owner to secure off-street parking.

•All licensees shall maintain and ensure that all trash and debris is removed on a timely basis.

Kane said owners should expand their insurance policies for bodily injury and property damage.

Also that there should be a four foot clearance in accordance with the disabilities act.

He said in the case of fire or any other emergencies, the city will have the right to remove all the tables and chairs to get into the building.

Shea said the board will study the draft and report back in a timely manner.

LICENSE BOARD BRIEFS

The License Board took the following action at Tuesday's meeting.

Deputy Joseph Walsh Retires, Ends Family's 84 Years' Service

By TOM HENSHAW

When the sun goes down tomorrow (Friday) night there won't be a member of Joe Walsh's immediate family on the Quincy Fire Department for the first time in 84 years.

Deputy Chief Joe Walsh, the son of a firefighter who served Quincy for 35 years, is retiring after 30 years from the same post his grandfather held at the end of his 41-year career.

That's a grand total of 106 years, some of them overlapping, on the job of protecting the citizens of their city from fires and kindred calamities.

"I plan to chill out for a while," said Walsh, 55, the last of his line on the Quincy Fire Department, unless you count his stepson, Christopher Condon, a lieutenant at the North Quincy Station.

"Then," he said, "I'll entertain prospects. I plan to move south, where I can enjoy the weather, the boat and the beach. I want to get out of this weather. I don't enjoy the cold."

Despite the weather, Walsh said, he looks back on his years of firefighting in Quincy as enjoyable ones and feels a little sadness at his leaving of it.

"It was a good paying job," he said, "but if you only look at the pay, you're wasting your time. I worked with some great guys. It was an honor to know them. I'm going to miss working with them.

"Now there's the specter of the terrorists. These guys are in the first line. Firefighters and the police were the first on the scene in New York. The Quincy guys are no different from the New York guys."

Walsh doesn't recall any specific fire or other emergency as particularly memorable, although the near-disastrous gasoline spill when a truck overturned in Quincy Square two years ago sticks in his mind.

""I was at most of the big fires in the last 20 years in Quincy," he said. "None really stand out. Maybe the fire at Louis' Restaurant out in the Neck or the fires on Great Hill or the Dependable Cleaners in Wollaston."

Quincy-born Joseph Walsh joined the Fire Department in 1975, a move that was more or less expected since his grandfather, an earlier Joe Walsh, had started the family tradition in 1921.

Joe Walsh the Elder was a legend among Quincy firefighters, one of the founders of their union.

"They called him in and told him there would be no union or there would be no Joe Walsh," said his grandson. "That didn't stop him."

His grandfather also started the Quincy Fireman's Credit Union, now the Quincy Municipal Credit Union, back in the 1930s.

"The guys who needed loans couldn't get them," said Walsh. "So he formed a credit union for firemen. They made loans out of a shoebox at first. It helped get a lot of families going."

Joe Walsh the Elder retired in 1964 as a deputy chief.

DEPUTY JOE Walsh is retiring after 30 years on the Quincy Fire Department. Quincy Sun photo/Noreen O'Shea

Richard Walsh, the father of the retiring Joe Walsh, joined the Quincy Fire Department in 1947 after serving in World War II. He retired in 1981, still a private.

""He was not much of a student," said his son. "He left school prematurely to join the service during the war. He spent most of his time at the Wollaston Station. He was on the job for 35 years."

Young Joe Walsh's move up the ladder in the Fire Department was swift.

He was a lieutenant in the Wollaston Station in 1981, a captain in Houghs Neck in 1985 and finally deputy chief on July 11, 1987.

"I've been lucky," said Walsh, who is inclined to attribute his success to anything except his own abilities. "I'm not the smartest guy in the world. I had a couple of good exam days, that's all."

$1M For One-Acre Property In Houghs Neck

City Purchases Bayswater Boatyard

The City of Quincy has finalized its $1 million purchase of the Bayswater Boatyard in Houghs Neck, Mayor William Phelan announces.

The one-acre waterfront property was purchased with monies from the hotel/motal tax. The boatyard was brought to the attention of the open space committee through a citizen petition of more than 1,500 names.

"This is an incredible piece of property and we are excited about the range of possibilities that it presents," said Phelan. "Our citizens will benefit greatly from this acquisition for generations to come."

The parcel contains four house lots, two existing structures, a boat ramp, a large boat yard and waterfront property. The Department of Environmental Protection recently approved a proposal from the prior property owner to develop the site.

Phelan has formed a citizens advisory committee to help develop potential uses of the parcel. Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly co-chairs the committee.

The mayor said he is hopeful that the parcel can be used for canoeing, kayaking, small sailboats, light recreation and other uses. He said the city will work with the advisory committee to develop city-wide uses for the property that is compatible with the surrounding neighborhood.

The property also abuts the Parkhurst Marsh. The purchase of the property will allow the city to investigate ways to better improve the ecological condition of the adjacent marsh.

The acquisition if part of Phelan's Natural Resource Investment Initiative, a $10 million plan to acquire open space, renovate parks, playgrounds and beaches, and restore the Broad Meadows marsh. Earlier this year, the city bought the remaining upland portions of Lot 23 at Marina Bay with funds from the hotel/motel tax.

Do you have an adjustable rate mortgage or home equity loan?

Will you be able to afford your payment when rates start going up? Lots of people have gone with adjustable rate loans because they could "buy more house" or just because the rates were so low. But rates are starting to move up now. In fact, short-term rates went up more than a point over the past few months. Fed watchers say they'll be going up again soon. THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On July 29, 1588, off the coast of Gravelines, France, Spain's "Invincible Armada" is defeated by an English naval force. After eight hours of furious fighting, a change in wind direction prompted the Spanish fleet to break off from the battle and retreat, its hopes of invasion crushed.

• On July 27, 1921, at the University of Toronto, Canadian scientists Frederick Banting and Charles Best successfully isolate insulin — a hormone they believe could prevent diabetes — for the first time. By 1923, insulin had become widely available, and Banting and Macleod were awarded the Nobel Prize in medicine.

• On July 26, 1945, in the 11th hour of World War II, Winston Churchill is forced to resign as British prime minister following his party's electoral defeat by the Labour Party.

• On July 25, 1965, folk legend Bob Dylan performs for the first time with electric instruments. His fans, who were used to hearing him play folk songs on an acoustic guitar, were so disappointed that they booed him off the stage at the Newport Folk Festival.

• On July 31, 1975, Teamsters Union president Jimmy Hoffa is reported missing in Detroit. He was last seen alive in a parking lot at the Red Fox restaurant the previous afternoon. To this day, Hoffa's fate remains a mystery, although many believe he was murdered by organized crime figures.

• On July 28, 1990, Maximo Menendez falls into a coma and later dies after drinking a Colombian soft drink, Pony Malta, in Miami. The next day, FDA officials determined that the soft drink had been laced with a lethal dose of liquid cocaine in an apparent smuggling operation gone awry.

• On July 30, 2003, the last "classic" Volkswagen Beetle rolls off the production line at VW's Puebla, Mexico, plant and is sent to a museum in Wolfsburg, Germany. The Beetle — with its rear-mounted, air-cooled engine — was the best-selling car in history, with more than 21 million produced.

One More Time . . .

I'm having one of those can't-get-started days.

Don't feel like doing a thing. Like not doing a column. Every once in a while I find myself running out of gas.

So, before the tank hits empty today, I'd like to dip into a past column and add a few more memories to freshen things up a bit.

Call it "One More Time."

Things I wish I could see, do, or hear one more time. Little things, most of them, but fondly remembered: Like:

• Seeing Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa walking through City Hall turning off unnecessary lights to help keep the electric light bill down.

• Principal Henry Prairio stressing to students at Quincy Point Junior High School: "Always give it that extra ounce." He meant effort. Good advice today, too.

• Ruth Gordon, calling from her apartment in New York City or her home on Martha's Vineyard, all enthused about her latest movie or TV appearance. And asking me to keep an eye on her birth certificate at City Hall.

• Seeing Munroe MacLean on the bench on one side of Veterans Memorial Stadium and Jack Donahue on the other, plotting strategy at a Quincy-North Quincy Thanksgiving Day football game.

• The all-night celebration at Jim and Sheila McIntyre's Kemper St. home that night in 1965 when he was elected mayor, succeeding Amelio Della Chiesa. Nobody wanted to leave.

• Ordering that tasty and plenty-of-it 45-cent luncheon special at the Howard Johnson restaurant downstairs in the Granite Trust bank building now the Bank of America.

• Taking in a movie like "Casablanca" at the Strand, Quincy, or Lincoln Theater.

• Meeting Dorothy Lamour who helped get this then green reporter through an interview when she was here on a war bond drive. And 10 years later when we met again at the Latin Quarter where she was performing and pulling me down beside her kiddingly teased: "C'mon now, you're not a cub reporter anymore." (She was my first celebrity interview and an all-time favorite.)

• President-elect John Kennedy in his father, Joseph's, home in the Kennedy compound in Hyannis Port a few hours after Richard Nixon conceded, pouring drinks for and chatting with the press. And noting he was looking forward to playing some golf in Florida.

"But don't print that," he asked. "They'll think I'm another Ike."

• Standing with my father watching the launching of the USS Massachusetts, the Wasp and some of the other great Navy ships he helped build at the Fore River shipyard.

• Hearing former Mayor and Councillor Tom Burgin telling his City Hall colleagues: "It's time to fish or cut bait."

• Buying a suit or sport coat from Ray Josephine at Remick's. Ray usually would have one put aside he knew you would like.

• Or, a TV set from Remo and Pete DeNicola at South Shore Television. "We'll deliver it today."

• And a Big Band album from Jason Feldman at Jason's. (I really miss those three stories.)

• Seeing John Gillis in a crew cut.

• Sitting in the stands at Fore River Field and seeing Jay and Fran Desmond, Nick Malvesti, Clappy Wildrege, Joe Shapiro, etc. in action. And happy to donate when the hat was passed around.

• Riding on Adlai Stevenson's Presidential campaign train as a reporter in 1952 that stopped in Quincy with such passengers as John Kennedy, Humphrey Bogart, Lauren Bacall, Robert Ryan.

• Walking into United First Parish Church (1951) a few steps behind General Douglas MacArthur on his visit after his recall by President Harry Truman. Pausing at the Adams family pew, he remarked: "I am certain that John Quincy Adams must have prayed in this pew for divine guidance before he wrote the Monroe Doctrine."

• Ordering a Coke with a dash of lemon at the Alhambra Tea Room.

• Plunking a nickel in the juke box and getting Glenn Miller, Tommy Dorsey and Jimmy Dorsey, Harry James, Artie Shaw, etc.

• Getting up at 4 a.m. for Quincy High School hockey practice at the Boston Arena. (I'm not so sure about doing that one again.)

• A night at the old Quincy Arena to boo wrestling villains Ted Germaine and Tony Papalino. They always put on a good act.

• Old friend Percy Lane, reporter, punster and bachelor observing: "You don't have to be crazy to be a newspaper man but it helps. . . "Marriage is an institution but who wants to live in an institution!"

Fond memories.

Quincy Crisis Center Appeals For Food Donations

Summer is the time when much-needed vacations are taken; unfortunately, hunger does not take a vacation.

It is during the summer months that many food pantries experience a slump in donations because food supply sources are either closed for the summer, schools and colleges, or individual donors are on vacation.

The Quincy Crisis Center's Food for Families pantry, a unique "food pantry on wheels" that makes year-round emergency food deliveries directly to the homes of the elderly, the sick, disabled shut-ins, and others who cannot access other food pantries, is currently experiencing a shortage on certain types of food.

The food pantry's shelves need to be replenished with the following non-perishable food items: spaghetti sauce; tomato products; juice; powered milk; canned pasta; mayonnaise; Fluff; jelly, snacks, cookies, popcorn, crackers; dessert mixes: cake, cookie, muffin, and frosting.

All donations are welcome and can be dropped off at 282 Billings Rd., Quincy, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

For directions or further information, call 617-847-6967.

This Is Not His Year To Run

Ten years ago I ran for a seat on the Quincy School Committee. Several times since then I have considered another run for public office. It isn't easy committing yourself to run for elective office. You really have to want to do it.

This year I had a very strong urge to try again especially when all three incumbents have given up their school committee seats. Someone said having three vacancies at the same election hasn't happened in Quincy since 1971. It's almost a once in a lifetime event in politics.

However, after given the idea of running this year some serious thought I have concluded this is not the year for me. I will bypass this election cycle and keep on doing what I've been doing as an active citizen and community activist.

Public service is a noble calling but one can serve his or her community without running for office. I will continue to speak out on issues that are important to me. I will continue to stay active helping elected officials better serve their constituents. I will remain the voice speaking up when I must.

However, the only running I want to do this year is along Wollaston Beach. Running for anything else is off my radar no matter how enticing the three open seats appear to be.

I will leave the school committee race to others to run. I will continue to write and to do that thing that rhymes with witch. I will remain a pain when I have to and the voice of reason when it becomes necessary.

When it's my time to run for office I'll be the first to know.

Thanks For Making Sidewalk Sale Festival A Success

We would like to thank the Quincy Business Association participants, vendors and crafters who participated in the recent 35th annual sidewalk sale festival.

With temperatures reaching high in the 80's, visitors were able to stroll down Hancock Street and shop through a diverse selection of clothing, jewelry, ethnic food, crafts, toys, and $1 bargains. In addition the musicians, the reptile show and a special appearance from Sidewalk Sam were enjoyed by all.

It was a thrill to see the street filled with visitors from Quincy, as well as surrounding neighborhoods and states including Connecticut, New York, New Hampshire and Rhode Island.

We would especially like to thank the Mayor's Office, Quincy Police, DPW, Maralin Manning and Marie Watts for their tireless effort in making the sidewalk sale such a huge success.

Squantum Naval Station Sold To Boston Edison

This Week
1956
49 Years Ago

The General Services Administration in Washington announced it had accepted a bid of $851,000 from the Boston Edison Co. for the 631 acres of land that constituted the deactivated Squantum Naval Air Station property.

William A. O'Connell, executive vice president of the Quincy Chamber of Commerce, hailed the acceptance of Boston Edison's bid as "a great event for the city of Quincy."

"It is a great event to have a company of this stature here and the Chamber of Commerce extends a cordial welcome and offers it services in any future plans they may have for the development of the area," he said.

But J.V. MacDonald, promotion manager for Boston Edison, said the company is not ready to announce its plans and Planning Director Regis Harrington and Building Inspector Alrick A. Weidman said they have not been approached about the development.

QUARRY FIRE

Debris dumped in Hitchcock's Quarry on Quarry St. caught fire, sending thick clouds of acrid smoke over the Hospital Hill area. The three-alarm fire was punctuated by small explosions as bottles and other rubbish burst in the heat.

Mrs. Dora Donovan of 36 Filbert St. said the quarry "looked like a picture of hell," and another neighbor, Mrs. Dennis Behan, described it as "a blazing inferno."

At one time the entire surface of the quarter-mile square quarry was aflame and firefighters had difficulty getting down from the 100-foot ledges to the debris floating on the water. Deputy Fire Chief James J. Daley said it might be days before the fire was out.

TOWN BROOK STUDY

Mayor Amelio Della Chiesa made a second request for a state drainage study of the Town Brook area in South Quincy to accompany the construction of the proposed Southeast Expressway on the Quincy-Braintree line. Della Chiesa noted that the area was so badly flooded in August, 1954, that boats were used in South Quincy to evacuate residents of Brook Rd. Extension, Roberts St., Water St. and Grossman St.

QMC Treats Volunteers To 'Evening Of Appreciation'

Quincy Medical Center volunteers received a dose of their own medicine, recently, during the Annual Volunteer Appreciation Dinner.

In appreciation of their dedicated service, the volunteers were treated to a four-course dinner, served by apron-clad members of the senior leadership team.

Last year, volunteers contributed more than 15,076 hours of service to QMC.

"In addition to their tremendous tally of service hours, the volunteers have an immeasurable impact on our patients and staff," said David Ryan, Esq., vice president of Human Resources. "In many respects, they bring out the essence of what a first-tier, high-quality community hospital is all about: personal touch."

During the dinner, held in the QMC's CrossRoads Café, Robert "Bob" Curry, chairman of the Board of Trustees, and Gary Gibbons, MD, Interim President and CEO, toasted the volunteers for their vital role. In addition, volunteers also were honored with commemorative pins celebrating milestones of 100, 500, 1,000, 2,000 and 4,000 service hours.

To learn more about volunteering at Quincy Medical Center, call Marilyn McAllister at 617-376-5368.

Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services. The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center (BMC), formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry.

Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work with community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

QUINCY MEDICAL CENTER Volunteers Edward Regan and Ruth O'Shea, both of Quincy, enjoy the recent Appreciation Dinner.

VOLUNTEERS Julia MacLean and Barbara Thomas, both Quincy residents, were among the volunteers treated to an appreciation dinner at Quincy Medical Center.

Jay Davis To Seek Second Term In Ward 4

Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis announces he will seek re-election to a second term this fall.

"Although serving on the city council has been quite a learning process, it has also been very rewarding," said Davis. "The council, the mayor and the community have worked together to tackle some challenging issues, and I am extremely proud of our accomplishments.

"During the last two months I have been going door to door, meeting with Ward 4 voters and listening to their concerns. Many residents are extremely pleased with the progress the city has made in the area of public works over the last year.

"One example is the city's Pavement Management Plan, which really hit its stride in the spring. Since its inception last year, a number of streets in Ward 4 have been paved including all or part of: Columbia St., Copeland St., Common St., Federal Ave., Granite St., Independence Ave., Intervale St., Nightingale Ave., Penn St., Quarry St., Rodman St., and Trafford St. If all goes as planned, this fall we will see Brook Rd., President Ave., Robertson St., and Verchild St. paved as well."

In addition to passage of the Pavement Management Plan, Davis said he is proud of a number of other accomplishments, including the relocation of Fallon Ambulance headquarters from Milton to a $5 million facility on Brook Rd.

The city council approved a plan by Marion Manor to construct a $78 million residential facility that will provide independence and assisted living at Quarry Hills.

Davis said he is also working with the mayor, private business owners and state officials to secure the necessary commitments to build direct connectors from Route 3 and 93 to the Crown Colony Office Park.

He said he is also encouraging private developers to partner with the Lincoln Hancock School and the Sterling Middle School allowing for additional funding sources for the schools.

JAY DAVIS

Davis has also encouraged participation in the Ward Four Neighborhood Association and Cleaner Greener Quincy.

And Davis said he is pushing for the economic rebirth of Brewer's Corner which has included a $50,000 commitment for traffic improvements and the opening and renovation of restaurants such as Mannion's, Spuckies Pizza and More, Simply Good Food To Go and Charlie Ng Chinese Restaurant.

A graduate of Syracuse University and Suffolk University Law School, Davis and his wife, Honor, live with their two daughters, Madison, 7, and Megan, 4, on Shawmut St. in West Quincy.

Davis has been practicing law in Quincy for more than nine years. He is currently the managing partner in the law firm, Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, P.C. The law office is a general practice law firm with more than 25 employees located in downtown Quincy.

In addition to his work at his law firm and on the city council, Davis volunteers for a number of community agencies, including Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore, the Quincy Public Schools Business Partnership, South Shore YMCA, Quincy Youth Soccer and the Beechwood Knoll PTO.

For 10 years, Davis was a coach for Quincy Youth Baseball. He has also been a volunteer Big Brother, a pro bono (volunteer) lawyer for both DOVE, Inc., and the Volunteer Lawyers Project, and served as a councillor as well as a member of the program board for the American Legion Boy's State program.

David Smith Candidate For School Committee

David H. Smith of Quincy announces he is a candidate for a seat on the Quincy School Committee.

Smith was the first candidate to submit his papers for the office of School Committee, one month before the deadline.

An educator in the Quincy School System for over 30 years, Smith said his "continued dedication to the youth of the city can be found throughout his lifelong residency." A former vice president of the Citywide PTO and personnel director of the City of Quincy, he said has always strived to do his best and would prove again if elected to the School Committee.

"I am not a man who is easily influenced, but will look at any situation and do what is right for all, not a few," Smith said.

DAVID SMITH

As an educator, Smith said he has seen many changes, and not all of them for the good of the students or the schools.

"With the new demands on education, the main focus needs to be on academics: putting the students first, helping to make classroom learning a priority, and allowing the teachers the time and equipment to teach," he said.

If elected, Smith also said attendance and accountability would be priorities. Addressing attendance, he said would enforce the current attendance and tardy policies. "Attending school regularly and showing up for class is not incidental to getting an education. It's essential," Smith said.

As for accountability, Smith said there "needs to a group effort among students, their parents and the teachers."

He said he looks forward to sharing his views and hearing from concerned citizens. For more information on Smith's campaign, visit www.votesmith2005.com.

Members of the organization ask citizens to play their part in making this an amazing celebration.

Members recently met to create the essential working groups that include logistics, entertainment, sponsorship, marketing, and volunteer coordination. Organizers hope more people will contribute their time and ideas.

"The August Moon Festival is wonderful event which brings together the community to celebrate Asian cultures," said John Brothers, executive director of QARI. "We invite representatives of all of the cultures living on the South Shore to take part."

This year the organization hopes to get as many suggestions and help from the community as possible. Currently, approximately 50 North Quincy High School students have signed up as volunteers for the committee.

"Volunteers are essential to making an event successful. I commend all the participants taking time out of their busy schedule to attend meetings," said Denise Chan, QARI volunteer. Mayor Applauds Effort

Planning Board Approves Rezoning Of 16 Parcels

The Quincy Planning Board recently recommended approval of a proposal to rezone 16 various lots to open space.

The rezoned parcels include lots on: Knight St., Marshfield St., Palmer St., Peterson Rd., Rock Island Rd., Russell Park, Sea St., and Stoughton St.

All parcels are on city-owned property and recently acquired through the tax title process. In total, more than 43 acres were recommended for rezoning to open space by the planning board.

The proposal was submitted to the city council and planning board by Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly at the behest of Mayor William Phelan's Open Space Committee.

Phelan commended the planning board for supporting the open space committee's effort.

"Many of these parcels are in wetland areas or adjacent to wetland resources areas," said Phelan. "The rezoning provides another layer or protection and assurance that our valuable natural resources will be protected for generations to come. I am hopeful that the city council will ultimately pass the formal rezoning proposal in the fall."

The rezoning effort is part of Phelan's Natural Resource Investment Initiative, the largest open space protection and enhancement effort in city history. The city acquired two significant open space parcels, Lot 23 at Marina Bay and the Bayswater Boatyard in Hough's Neck, as part of this initiative. The city is also restoring the Broad Meadows salt marsh and creating a new waterfront upland park at Broad Meadows.

Three Residents Graduate Mass Art

Three residents of Quincy graduated from the Massachusetts College of Art at recent outdoor ceremonies held in Boston.

They are David E. Parra (graphic design), Maurice F. Celosse (painting) and Keng-Qui Chia (animation).

Anne Mulligan Mahoney Candidate For School Committee

Quincy resident Anne Mulligan Mahoney announces her candidacy for one of three open seats on the Quincy School Committee.

"As a lifelong resident of Quincy and three school-age children, I have a vested interest in doing what I can to help ensure the Quincy Public Schools continue to be a great foundation for individual growth and learning," Mahoney said.

Recently endorsed by the Norfolk Central Labor Council AFL-CIO, Mahoney has pledged to pay particular attention to classroom size, student safety, and educational resources. "I will bring creative insight and contribute fresh ideas while working diligently to advance the quality of the educational experience for all students," Mahoney said.

ANNE MAHONEY

Mahoney and her husband, Kevin, are the parents of Maggie (age 10, entering the fifth grade), Liam (age 8, entering the third grade) and Rory (age 3, entering preschool).

"Maggie and Liam are two very different types of students, and we are thankful that each has been provided the environment and support they need to carve out a unique educational path within the Quincy Public Schools. Like all parents, I want each of my children to meet their educational goals and realize their full potential for learning," Mahoney said.

"And," she added, "I am committed to seeing that happen for every child in Quincy."

Mahoney attended Gridley Bryant Elementary, Sterling Middle and Quincy High School. She is a Suffolk University graduate with a BSFA in finance and a minor in marketing. In 1993, Mahoney cofounded Cyclone Design, Inc., a design studio specializing in print and web design for small and mid-sized companies and non-profits.

Mahoney is a member of the Beechwood Knoll Elementary PTO and is a volunteer Docent Art Teacher at Beechwood Knoll. She is currently a Board member of the non-profit Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore – an agency that works with families and individuals on housing initiatives including: low-cost and interest free home improvement loans, affordable housing and first-time homebuyer workshops.

Mahoney is a former member of Quincy Tourism, Inc. She has also volunteered her professional services and worked pro-bono for Community Commitment Fund, Big Brother/Big Sister of Massachusetts Bay, Neighborhood Housing Services of the South Shore and The R.O.S.E. Fund.

Fire Alarm Glitz Evacuates City Hall

Just before the License Board meeting was to begin Tuesday morning, a fire alarm accidentally went off causing the evacuation of the old and new City Hall.

Everyone standing around outside in the hot temperature were all asking each other what happened? No one seemed to know and hoped it wasn't a bomb scare. It wasn't until several firefighters exited the building and were asked what had happened.

One of them answered "just a glitz in the system". Everyone breathed a sigh of relief that it wasn't anything else and returned to work

with PERFORMANCE LEAN

only available at Performance Nutrition

This unique product combination allows you to:

Control Appetite / Increase Energy / Boost Metabolism

There are two glaring and until now unavoidable metabolic barriers that prevent fat loss. First, your metabolism may not be that good to start with due to your body's less than optimal production of thermogenic enzymes. Second, when dieting, your metabolism may diminish further as you reduce calories in the quest for more fat loss. If not for these two barriers, losing fat would be infinitely easier.

Performance Lean is research proven to help you avoid both obstacles. It will improve your output of thermogenic enzymes and increase your metabolic "Set Point". This set point is the level of fat that your body burns throughout the day. Performance Lean has been proven to shift your metabolic set point in favor of burning fat, it supercharges your metabolism.

Performance Lean is only available at Performance Nutrition.

Gardner Withdraws, Cites Husband's Illness

Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner will not seek a second term because her husband, William, has been diagnosed with a "serious heart ailment."

Gardner, in an emotional statement issued Tuesday said: "It is with deep sadness that I announce I am withdrawing from the race for Ward 6 city councillor.

"My family and I have recently learned that my husband has been diagnosed with a serious heart ailment that will require a lengthy treatment and recovery period.

"It has been an honor and a privilege to serve the people of Ward 6 as their city councillor, but the recent diagnosis of my husband's condition will require that all my time and energies be devoted to my husband and family."

The final evaluation of her husband's condition was made Monday.

ALICIA GARDNER

It was expected that Gardner would be unopposed for a second term. She will serve out the remainder of her current term which ends in January.

"It would not be fair to my family or the people of Ward 6, who deserve to be represented by an individual who can respond and spend the time answering their concerns on a daily basis.

"I have always strived to answer phone calls, attend community meetings, meet with constituents and participate in council meetings but the recent turn of events requires that my priorities must be focused only on my family.

"I am deeply thankful to my family, friends and the constituents who have worked with me, believed in me, and voted to make me the Ward 6 city councillor.

"There is just no easy way to say I will be retiring from active politics, other than to say I was extremely humbled and grateful for their help and support."

Phelan Unopposed, 12 Seek Three Open School Seats

will be the only preliminary election Sept. 13.

Two incumbents and three contenders will square off for three city council at-large seats in November.

Joseph Finn and John Keenan filed their papers for re-election.

But Frank McCauley now city council president is retiring after a 32-year political career leaving the third at-large seat open.

School Committee Vice Chairman Michael McFarland, Julie Berberan o 14 Riverview St. and Dominic Paulo of 208-A Quincy Shore Drive hope to succeed McCauley.

Twenty five candidates in all filed their papers by Tuesday's deadline.

Phelan becomes only the fourth mayor in the city's history to run unopposed for re-election. The others were Thomas Burgin, Frank McCauley, once each, and James Sheets, three times.

Four potential candidates - Robert Boussy, Joseph O'Malley, Charles Dennehey, Jr. and John Rodophele had taken out nomination papers for mayor but did not file them.

The 12 school committee candidates who filed Tuesday are:

Atty. Kathryn Gralton Hobin, 40 Sea Ave.; David Smith, 25 Muirhead St.; Celeste B. McGlone, 55 Diswell Ave., former executive assistant to Mayor Phelan; Anne Mahoney, 12 Ferriter St.; Ronald Iacobucci, 430 Adams St.; Michael A. Covais, 23 Pope St.; Sandra Verhault, 183 Highland Ave.; Eileen Mullen, 17 Trafford St.; Atty. Kevin W. Mulvey, 60 Willow St.; Atty. Joseph Keegan, 21 Moreland Rd.; Stephen Golden, 32 Ridgeway St.; and James Timmins, city solicitor under Mayor Sheets.

The three open school committee seat they seek are those of Michael McFarland, Ron Mariano and Jo-Ann Bragg.

McFarland decided to run for councillor at-large.

Mariano and Bragg are stepping down after serving 16 and 12 years, respectively.

The last time there were three open school committee seats was in 1971 which drew a field of 23 candidates.

The McNamee-Bracken match will be the only ward council contest in the Nov. 8 final election with Gardner's withdrawal.

She was expected to be unopposed as the other five ward councillors will be: Ward 1 Leo Kelly, Ward 2 Daniel Raymondi, Ward 3 Kevin Coughlin, Ward 4 Jay Davis and Ward 5 Douglas Gutro.

Ward councillors running unopposed is a political rarity in Quincy.

Stephen Golden Candidate For School Committee

Stephen Golden announces he will run for school committee.

"I am running for school committee because I want to be part of the team that makes the Quincy Public Schools the best in Massachusetts," said Golden. "Above all, to assure quality public education, the school committee has to step up to be a more active organization that will create a smoothly functioning team of elected officials, parents, teachers, administrators, and students."

STEPHEN GOLDEN

Golden, a lifelong resident of Quincy, graduated from Quincy Public Schools in 1984. He later graduated from Suffolk University with a Bachelor of Arts degree in history. He went on to earn a Master's degree in Education from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

He is an educator at the Phoenix Alternative Middle and High School in the Brockton Public Schools.

Golden served as program director of the Teen Get-Away recreational program in Quincy, is past president of Quincy's Ward 5 Community Association and, for eight years, served as a Marine in the United States Marine Corps Reserve before being honorably discharged in 1996.

With more than 11 years of teaching experience in the public schools, Golden said he has a strong belief in public education. "Our public schools have an obligation to prepare all students to reach their maximum potential," he said. "This is especially true in difficult economic times. My years of teaching have provided me with a first-hand perspective on the services that need to be maintained to ensure our children's future success."

He is also a recreational runner and has competed in, and finished, the Boston, Dublin and New York marathons. He is a regular participant in the annual Squirrel Run and the Marshall William Deegan Road Race.

"Running, especially in marathons, requires dedication and determination," said Golden. "I plan to bring these same characteristics to the office of the school committee."

Golden lives with his wife, Jennifer, and sons, Christopher and Aidan, both of whom attend Quincy Public Schools.

"The encouragement I have received for my candidacy from parents, fellow educators, family and friends has been overwhelming," he said. "It would be great to serve the City of Quincy as a member of the school committee."

Appointing Council To Fill Vacancies On College Board

An appointing council charged with filling two vacancies on the Quincy College Board of Governors has been formed, according to Chairwoman Theresa Lord-Piatelli.

Lord-Piatelli has sent requests to Council President Frank McCauley and School Committee Vice Chairman Michael McFarland asking them to nominate two members for the six-member board of governors appointing council. Lord-Piatelli will also pick two members to fill out the appointing council.

The appointing council will seek applicants to fill two vacancies due to the departure of Rev. William Harding, who has been deployed to Iraq, and the death of Frank Buckley.

McCauley has chosen Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro and Councillor John Keenan to sit on the appointing committee. McFarland has chosen himself and School Committee member Ron Mariano, while Lord-Piatelli has picked herself and fellow board of governors member David Dennis to fill out the council.

"I would like to fill the vacancies as soon as possible, because the college is very much in need of high quality, dedicated individuals for these positions," said Lord-Piatelli.

Tips for First-Time Homebuyers

Buying a home can be the most expensive purchase you'll ever make. A first home purchase can be likened to crossing a minefield, with potential disaster at every step unless you're aware of some of the things that can go wrong.

Q. Should I tell the real estate agent how much I have to spend?

A. No. Only tell the real estate agent the price range you're interested in. The reason is that if an agent shows you a house he or she has listed, the agent's first responsibility is to the seller. If you put in an offer much lower than you can actually afford, the agent's duty to the seller will ensure that the information comes out and your low offer will likely be turned down.

Q. Since I'm buying, not selling, does it matter to me what commissions the seller is paying?

A. Yes. It's possible that some listing agents aren't giving a 50/50 split of the commission to other agents who bring in the sales. Therefore you might not be shown all the homes in your price range if your agent doesn't like the commission splits.

Q. Since I can find homes for sale by owner on the Internet, why do I need a real estate agent to help me look?

A. First-time homebuyers need a real estate agent to protect them from third- or fourth-time home sellers. An agent will ensure that you get the right disclosure forms required by law (mold and lead paint, for example), and point out that the "perfect" home you instantly fell in love with is in a flood zone and has water damage in the basement.

Q. Do I really need to spend the money for a home inspection?

A. Absolutely. While there's no guarantee an inspector will find everything wrong with a home, he will find more than you do and know how serious it is. Only with information in hand can you decide if something is worth fixing.

Summary: Even second- or third-time homebuyers can benefit from learning more about purchasing real estate. One book I can recommend is "100 Questions Every First-Time Home Buyer Should Ask," by Ilyce R. Glink (Three Rivers Press, 2005).

Total Dollar Volume $2.3 Billion According To Report From Register Of Deeds O'Donnell

Quarterly Real Estate Activity For Norfolk County

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has issued a report on quarterly real estate activity in Norfolk County.

Total dollar volume of real estate sales in Norfolk County for the period April through June 2005, was $2.3 billion, up 17 percent from April through June of 2004.

A total of 5,598 deeds were recorded at the Norfolk Registry during the period, and the average sales price reported in deeds over $1000 (both residential and commercial properties), was $611,221, up 22 percent from the second quarter of calendar 2004.

Mortgage activity declined on a year-to-year basis, with 15,317 new mortgages recorded showing a total dollar amount of $4.97 billion. The total number of new mortgages was down 26 percent and the total dollar amount down 15 percent from April - June of 2004.

O'Donnell attributed the decline in mortgage activity to the interest rate environment and the decrease in mortgage refinancings since the record years of 2003 and 2004. "It is important to note," O'Donnell said, "that mortgage filings do not necessarily represent an overall increase in indebtedness. "Many mortgages refinance existing debt, or secure equity credit lines that may not be drawn in their entirety."

The Registry of Deeds is the principal office for real property records in Norfolk County. The Registry is a basic resource for homeowners, title examiners, mortgage lenders, municipalities and others with a need for secure, accurate and accessible land record information.

For further information regarding the Norfolk County Registry of Deeds, call 781-461-6116 or visit the Registry website, www.norfolkdeeds.org.

Tips To Make Moving To Your New Home Easy

(NAPS) – Moving to a new home can be stressful from the paperwork to packing and, of course, the several service calls. In fact, movers disconnect and connect up to five services, according to the new Cable Gets Movin' survey.

Leslie Levine, moving expert and author of Will This Place Ever Feel Like Home?, understands mover's common frustrations and has some simple tips to make it as easy as possible for the whole family.

• Make Moving Fun. Kids can commemorate the move by becoming the family photographer. Give them a single-use camera and encourage a photo shoot of the new space. Later, e-mail the photos to family and friends or make a scrapbook of the exciting event.

• Avoid Call-Center Chaos. Miminize the amount of service calls you make by connecting your digital cable, high-speed Internet and phone service with one call to your local cable company, or simply dial the Cable Movers Hotline at 877-9TV-MOVE if you've already moved or want to become a new cable customer. The toll-free hotline processes the transfer between the existing and new cable provider to create a seamless transition without moving heavy hardware, set-top boxes or modems. The cable company will also install all equipment for you in one visit.

• Connect to the Community. One of the best ways to get acclimated to a new community is to learn about it before the move. Check out local news and entertainment online and research fun family activities such as art museum and zoos, which may offer a family membership at introductory discounted rates.

• Phone Home. Family and friends want to know how you're doing after the move, so pick-up the phone and bring them up-to-date. But instead of choosing phone service through a traditional landline operator, try cable phone, the newest service in the cable roster. Call anyone, anywhere, regardless of their phone technology, and see a cost savings, while enjoying all of the same great services you'd expect from a phone company, like caller ID and voicemail.

• Break the Rules. Don't overdo it when it comes to unpacking. Get out of the house to reduce stress, and leave low-priority items to unpack for another day.

Cable companies have teamed up to provide an easy way for movers to connect cable services at their new address without missing a beat. Set up your home entertainment needs with one call to your local cable company or simply dial the Cable Movers Hotline at 877-9TV-MOVE if you've already moved or want to become a new cable customer.

THIS IS A HAMMER

Cleaning a Gunky Showerhead

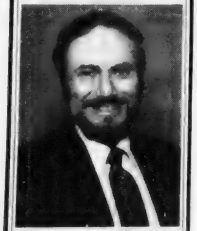
Q: The showerhead in my apartment bathroom has a lot of gunk on it that looks like mineral buildup. The water doesn't spray out very strong and shoots off in every direction. The gunk is built up on the faucet handles, too. The maintenance man says it needs to be cleaned but that he doesn't do cleaning. What are my options? — Clare S., Winter Park, Fla.

A: You've got three options. First, you could talk to the apartment manager or leasing office about the gunky shower. If they don't give a satisfactory answer, you could write to (or call) the management company or the building's owner, and ask for the bathroom hardware to be cleaned or replaced. Sometimes the management will take care of the situation immediately, but often it doesn't happen for weeks.

So that leads to your second option: cleaning the gunk off yourself. The best way to clean the showerhead is to remove it so that it can be scrubbed inside and out. To do this, unscrew the showerhead; you may need to use two adjustable wrenches, one to hold the shower "arm" (the pipe to which the head is attached) and the other to loosen the showerhead. Wrap a couple layers of masking tape around the areas where the wrenches will grip to keep from scratching the surface. Wash the showerhead in hot, soapy water, and then rinse.

Meanwhile, bring a small pan partly filled with half vinegar and half water to a boil, and place the showerhead in it, holes first. Simmer for five to 10 minutes. Remove and cool it off, then scrub away the loosened mineral deposits and open the holes by poking a needle or pipe cleaner through them.

The shower arm and the remaining bath hardware also can be cleaned in place, without resorting to abrasive cleaners. First, stir together a mixture of baking soda and vinegar — yes, it will foam up. Brush or sponge this fizzy mix liberally onto the hardware and gunky ends of the shower arm. Next, wrap plastic wrap around each fixture, holding it in place with a rubber band, so that the vinegar-baking soda mixture doesn't dry up.



Leave it for 10-30 minutes, checking one or two spots to see if the gunk is loosening up. Remove the plastic wrap and rinse the hardware thoroughly — most of the mineral buildup and soap gunk should wash away too. Use soapy water and a soft cloth to finish the cleaning. Then, replace the cleaned showerhead — wrap the threads on the shower arm with plumber's tape first to ensure a tight seal, and then screw the parts tightly together.

Your third option is to replace the showerhead completely. You may have to do this if the cleaning doesn't improve performance. Let the apartment manager or owner know that you are doing this. Replacing a showerhead isn't a big deal, so pick whatever model you like and install it per the instructions. And hang on to the old one, you may be asked to reinstall it when you move out.

THE QUINCY THUNDER 18 and under girls' fast-pitch softball team recently captured its second tournament of the sum..ier. Sitting, from the left, Quincy's Rachel Sorensen, Braintree's Lucia Reed and Quincy's Kim LeBel. Kneeling: Holbrook's Lauren Mahoney, Quincy's Katie Walsh and Leanna Lam, Braintree's Emily Bularzik and Kelsey Souza. Quincy Thunder Win 2 Softball Tournaments

At the beginning of the summer, not many people knew of the Quincy Thunder, a local 18 and under girls' fast-pitch softball team.

But winning has a way of getting people's attention, especially when it's against some of the best teams in the state.

After the Thunder secured its second first-place finish at a recent tournament in Somerset, a half dozen college coaches contacted the Quincy coaching staff with inquiries about players. Now the Thunder is recognized by people in the know as one tough team.

The team was founded three years ago by Quincy High School softball head coach Mike Sedar. It is coached by Rachael Powers, former North Quincy High School and Wheaton College star and current assistant coach at Framingham State. She is assisted by Scott Finn.

The Somerset tournament started with a 5-0 win against the MA Rippers. Braintree pitcher Emily Bularzik, who came back from last summer's ACL surgery to win her second high school Bay State League MVP award this spring, got the team off on the right foot with five no-hit innings.

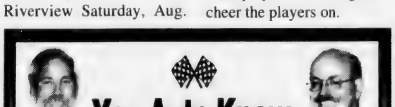
The Thunder only managed one hit in their first five innings, so Powers had her team play small ball with her speedy top of the order up in the sixth. Consecutive bunt hits by Quincy's Leanna Lam and Kim LeBel and Braintree's Kelsey Souza set the stage for a double by Archbishop Williams' Lauren Mahoney, followed by a single by Bularzik. All five scored.

Quincy's All-Scholastic Rachel Sorensen pitched a perfect seventh and her sister, Rebekah, led the team with four assists.

Next up, Quincy knocked off host Somerset Express, 5-1. Alaina Caruso of Sacred Heart started in the circle. The game went slowly until the fourth when the Thunder strung together six hits that led to five runs.

A single by Quincy's All-Scholastic LeBel, a double by Souza, a triple by Mahoney, a single by Bularzik, a double by Braintree's Lucia Reed and a single by Quincy's Katie Walsh did the damage. Rachel Sorensen closed out the game in relief of Caruso.

The final seeding game of the day resulted in a 6-4 loss against undefeated Central Mass Sting. Milton High's star pitcher Melissa Traft got the start. Souza began the game with a hit, Lam walked and Mahoney and Bularzik followed with hits that led to two quick runs.



The Sting came right back with two in the bottom of the inning before forging ahead with three in the third and one in the fourth for a 6-2 lead. A couple of nice catches in right field by Fontbonne's

(NOT) DIRECTING TRAFFIC

The next time you find yourself sitting in a traffic jam, think about this: According to a recent study, 35% of this nation's traffic lights have not been re-timed in a decade. According to one traffic engineering group, two-thirds of 378 traffic agencies in 49 states do not actively monitor traffic lights, or they simply respond to problems as they occur. What this means is that these agencies have not responded to business and residential growth that affects traffic patterns. Had they done so, transportation engineers calculate that ideal management of traffic lights could cut delays by 15% to 20%, reduce travel time by 25%, cut emissions by 22%, and reduce gas consumption by up to 10%.

Keeping your car in tune will also save gas. If you need maintenance or repairs, don't hesitate and bring your car to us. At LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO we want you to be well informed about every system in your car. Our friendly, professional, ASE Certified service staff here at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550) will gladly answer all your questions. Give us a try. We'll earn your trust! Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer."

HINT: According to transportation engineers, it would cost an estimated $965,000 per year to improve the nation's traffic signal operations.

14 Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series To Have International Flair

Once again, a team from Italy has been invited to participate in the 2005 Babe Ruth 14 Year-Old World Series to be held in Quincy Aug. 19-27.

The team is being sponsored in part by the Sons of Italy. They will be housed with host families here in Quincy.

Eight regional winners from across the United States and Canada, the Eastern Massachusetts State Champion, the Western Mass. State Champion, the host team from Quincy, and the invitational team from Italy will battle for the World Series crown.

The Italian team will arrive in Quincy Tuesday, Aug. 16, one day before the American teams. The Italian team will depart Sunday, Aug. 28. Babe Ruth League, Inc. is arranging the team's travel.

"We are pleased to have Italy take part in the 2005 14 Yr. Old World Series," said Babe Ruth League, Inc. President/CEO Steven Tellefson. "Italy has participated in several previous Babe Ruth World Series, and they were 'true champions'."

World Series Host President, Dick Lombardi, was especially excited to hear that Italy had accepted the invitation. Lombardi had lobbied enthusiastically for the invitational team saying "We feel the international exposure, especially from Italy, will provide an added cultural dimension to the World Series that the local community and all of the players will fully embrace.

"We had a team from Italy in the 2003 Babe Ruth World Series held in Quincy, and the Italian team was a huge draw, especially among the youth in our community. There was a true cultural exchange taking place. Now we can't wait for them to return, and for all of the American players, to arrive."

Houghs Neck Post 380 Babe Ruth Champions

Houghs Neck Post 380 recently won four straight playoff games to capture the Quincy Babe Ruth championship at Adams Field.

In the title game, Houghs Neck knocked off Fire Department, 9-7, erupting for five runs on eight hits in the fifth inning to erase a 5-3 deficit and take the lead for good.

In the big rally, Brian Sullivan stroked a two-run triple and Glenn Misho and Matt Rodriguez doubled.

Thirteen-year-old Ed Kirby went 4-for-4 with two RBI. Greg Cahalan singled in the winning runs. Anthony Alibrandi notched his second win of the playoffs, while Sullivan struck out two batters in the last inning with the bases loaded for his second save.

In game three of the playoffs, Houghs Neck defeated Fire Department, 9-6. Houghs Neck scored two runs in the first inning and seven in the second and held on as Fire Department chipped away.

Left-hander Rick Bjork earned his second victory of the playoffs, giving up three earned runs on six hits and striking out five.

Sullivan had three hits, including a long home run over the right field fence. Kirby had a hit and two RBI. For Fire Department, Mike Jay had a single and double.

Houghs Neck topped the Quincy Elks, 12-6, in the second game of the playoffs. Rodriguez had three hits and three RBI while Misho, Kirby and Alibrandi each had two. Kirby also drove in four runs.

Alibrandi was the winning pitcher, going 4 1/3 innings before tiring in the heat. Sullivan closed out the game, giving up two hits and striking out two for the save. Shortstop Joe Lousararian turned in a strong defensive outing.

For the Elks, Pat Totten went 4-for-4 to lead the offense.

In the playoff opener, Houghs Neck downed a well-coached and strong hitting Local 1139 team, 9-4. Bjork allowed two earned runs on six hits and fanned six for the win.

Bjork and Sullivan had two hits apiece and Rodriguez, Sullivan, Kirby, Cahalan and Jeff Mitchell knocked home the runs. Cahalan played a strong defensive game at second base.

Quincy Granite Split, Playoff Hopes Alive

The Quincy Granite Baseball Club split Sunday's meeting with the Brockton Pirates to keep its playoff hopes alive.

Quincy has a 10-7 record with three games remaining in the regular season. It hosted the Dorchester Dodgers Wednesday (7:30 p.m.) at Adams Field and will take on the South Shore Phillies this Sunday at 9 a.m. at O'Rourke Park.

Quincy is part of the Massachusetts Independent Baseball League, an 18-plus league that features 16 teams and plays double-headers on Sundays.

In game one against Brockton, workhorse Brian Deptula pitched six innings, allowing five runs (four earned) on nine hits, walking two and striking out eight.

Conrad Ledger entered the game in the seventh with a 6-5 lead. After allowing the first two batters to reach (walk, single), he recorded the next two outs on a pop-up and strikeout.

With the runners off on the pitch, Brockton's John Joyce ripped a one-hopper to the second baseman, who knocked the ball down but overthrew first, allowing the tying run to score from second. The first baseman retrieved the ball and tried to throw out Joyce at second, allowing the runner from first to cross home plate with the winning run.

"It was an unfortunate ending to a game that was ours," said coach Jason Riley. "We made a few fielding errors as well as mental errors. Deptula pitched a great game. This was one that got away."

Riley was also upbeat of the addition of Ledger to the team. "Conrad's Granite," he said. "It takes time to settle in with a new club."

In the second game, Quincy rebounded with a 13-5 win. Left-hander Rob Celata threw five innings, yielding five runs (two earned) on five hits, walking two and fanning three.

In the bottom of the fifth with the score tied at 5, Celata, John Fidalgo and Chris Walsh reached to load the bases. Joe Flynn knocked home Celata with a single that proved to be the game-winner as Quincy plated three runs in the inning.

Flynn relieved Celata and pitched two hitless innings. "My arm felt good and the ball was moving," Flynn said.

Ledger (3-for-3, run), Fidalgo (3-for-4, run) and Walsh (2-for-3, three RBI) powered the offense.

"Our offense was alive today, but our defense was a bit shaky throughout," said assistant coach and third baseman Matt Graham. "That's why we play the games. You never know what may happen."

Previously, Quincy swept the Pawtucket Black Sox, 6-1, 4-1.

In game one, Deptula pitched six strong innings, allowing one unearned run on six hits while walking one and striking out six. John O'Connell pitched the seventh and fanned two.

In the second game, Celata tossed six innings of shutout ball, walking one and punching out six. Ledger allowed an unearned run on two hits in the seventh to close out the game.

Team sponsors include the Granite Rail Pub, Beacon Sports and Sean's Barber Shop.

10 And Under Travel Softball Wins 3 More

The Quincy 10 and under travel softball team recently notched three more victories.

Quincy overcame an early deficit against Dedham 1 with timely hitting by Meredith Durham and Sara Ryan to secure a 16-11 win.

Strong pitching by Nicole Parry, Sam Briodi and Jacki Hughes led the way in a 24-3 win over Weymouth. Caroline Kelly had three hits to lead the offense.

Quincy rallied for a 5-4 triumph at Dedham 2. Great pitching by Parry and Rachel Selbert kept the game close throughout. Liz Kelly's gutsy at-bat produced an RBI double, scoring Steph DiPietro to tie the game late. Kelly and Ryan combined to push across the go-ahead run in the top of the final inning.

The game ended in spectacular fashion with Quincy catcher Erin Richardson gunning down a steal attempt at third base for the final out.

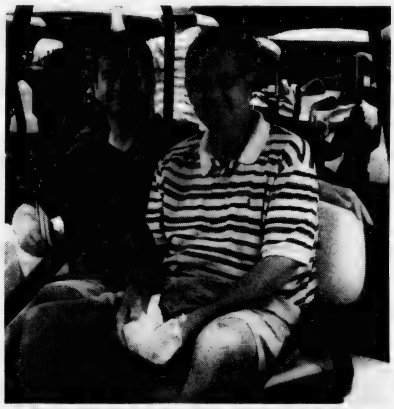
Red Cross Golf Classic Raises More Than $30,000

Money To Benefit Assistance In Local Community, Disaster Victims

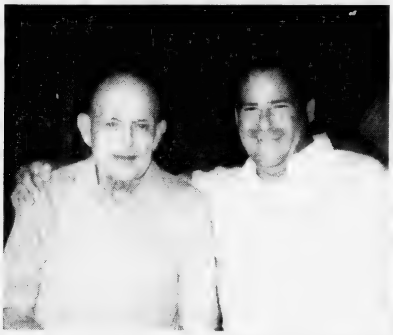


The recent 19th annual American Red Golf Classic held at the South Shore Country Club in Hingham raised more than $30,000.

The money raised benefits the South Area American Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay to ensure it continues its work in the local community, including assistance to numerous disaster victims.

In addition to the golf tournament, the day-long event featured a live auction, raffles, a golf poker game, a box lunch and dinner.

Robert Petrie of South Coastal Bank served as general chairperson. Quincy-based real estate firm Daniel J. Flynn & Co., Inc. served as the primary sponsor of the event for the fifth straight year.



Dan Flynn volunteered to be the auctioneer for the live auction and kept the bidders in high spirits as they bid on sports collectibles and other items to support the American Red Cross. No Pain, No Gain?

Q. I have heard the saying "No Pain, No Gain" over the years when describing how to become fit. I have started to experience pain in several joints when I do certain exercises. The pain is not excruciating, but it is noticeable and sometimes keeps me from doing a few machines. Should I endure the pain and continue to exercise?

A. The popular fitness saying "No Pain, No Gain" has placed a slightly misleading label on what exercise is all about. Pain is not a requirement for becoming healthy, strong and fit. Using pain as a guideline for whether or not a workout program is "working" is not reliable.

Finding the cause of your joint pain is the first priority. Consult your physician to learn the current condition of your joints and whether there is a correlation between your pain and your exercise routine. Certain conditions such as arthritis, ligament and tendon tears, and certain trauma and overuse injuries, such as bursitis, often can cause exercise to become more difficult. Be sure to speak with your physician about the specific pain you feel while performing certain movements.

If you're given the all-clear by your physician and there is no physical limitation that could be causing pain, it's time to investigate your exercise routine and, most importantly, your exercise technique. Poor technique is one of the leading causes of injuries at fitness facilities and among home exercisers. It is extremely important to learn the proper technique when performing ANY exercise, whether it's cardiovascular, resistance training or even flexibility. Consult a fitness professional if you need help learning proper exercise techniques. Safety should be your No. 1 concern.

As you look at your exercise routine, make note of the intensity of your workout. For cardiovascular, resistance training and flexibility exercises you need to be careful not to exceed your body's ability to adapt to the stresses placed upon it. If you're walking on a treadmill at speeds or inclines that require you to hold on for dear life and gasp for air, lifting heavy weights that cause you to lose your technique, or stretching to the point of pain, your workout needs to be modified. You can exercise effectively without working beyond your body's ability to safely complete the workout.

Finally, it is important to make a note of the location of your pain. Concentrate on the muscles and joints being used during any particular exercise and notice any changes. While you may feel discomfort in the muscles you are working, it should be distinct from "pain." Pain should be your alarm that something is not right. A burning feeling within your muscles as they fatigue is different than a sharp, shooting pain in your hip, knee or shoulder joint.

While the phrase "No Pain, No Gain" has caused some people to exercise harder, it also has kept others from continuing to exercise. Be Fit, Be Safe.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

CAN YOUR TONGUE GROW HAIR?

The top of the tongue is covered with millions of tiny "filiform papillae," whose length is limited to less than one millimeter by saliva flow, the movement of food, and good oral hygiene. As papillae are removed by these irritants, they are replaced with new ones. If conditions change, however, and the papillae remain in place and continue to grow (up to lengths of 20 millimeters), they can trap food particles and bacteria. They then darken, earning them the nickname "black hairy tongue." As bad as this condition sounds and appears, it is not serious. It can be corrected by drinking plenty of water; avoiding such medications as antihistamines, antibiotics, antispasmodics, and tricyclic antidepressants; and practicing good oral hygiene.

This informative column on "filiform papillae" has been brought to as a public service. For all your dental concerns, we invite you to come see us. We provide a full range of dental treatments, including preventive, restorative, and cosmetic dentistry. Our entire staff is dedicated to helping you look and feel better. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where you'll find our office to be as pleasant as it is professional every time you visit. From The American Heart Association

Sizzling Tips For A Heart Safe Summer

The American Heart Association recommends simple seasonal tips for keeping your heart healthy.

1. Poolside Protection.

Learning CPR is the number-one thing you can do to make this a safe summer for you and your family. Drowning is a leading cause of death in children. Parents, grandparents, and other caregivers should learn CPR so they will be prepared in case of an emergency.

It only takes a few hours to learn CPR, and the American Heart Association offers classes in every community. To find a class near you, call 1-888-AHA-4CPR or visit americanheart.org and click on "CPR."

2. Fit Summer Fun.

• Physical, fun activities should be geared for early morning or later in the day. If you feel dizzy, nauseated, thirsty or if you develop a headache, stop and find a cooler place to sit down and drink water.

• Wear comfortable, properly fitted footwear and comfortable, loose-fitting clothing appropriate for the activity.

• Don't overdo it. Slowly increase the duration and intensity of your activities as you become more fit. Eventually, work up to exercising three or four times per week for 30-60 minute intervals.

• Keep a record of your activities and reward yourself at special milestones. Nothing motivates like success!

3. Cool Recipes - Healthy Weight Loss, Too!

If you want to shed some extra pounds – and according to current statistics, about 134 million Americans should – there is one simple formula to consider: you need to burn more calories than you consume. The American Heart Association No-Fad Diet was released just in time to help beach goers lose that weight – and keep it off – with tools to help you think smart, eat well and move more. Add it to your summer reading list and try the cool summer recipes, like Citrus Freeze Bars. No-Fad Diet is available from booksellers everywhere.

4. When the Heat is One, Take Time to Chill Out.

• For people living with heart disease or stroke, the elderly, and other high-risk groups, avoiding heat exhaustion and heat stroke is crucial on days when the heat and humidity may soar. Dehydration is also a major concern, as extreme fluid loss can lead to heart and brain damage.

• Watch for symptoms of heat exhaustion, including sweating; cold, clammy skin; dizziness; rapid pulse; throbbing pressure in your head; chills; flushed appearance, and nausea. The symptoms for heat stroke include warm, dry skin with no sweating or heavy sweating; cold, clammy skin; low blood pressure; confusion; becoming unconscious; high fever; slow pulse; and ashen or gray skin. Seek medical help if symptoms continue. Heat exhaustion can progress quickly to heat stroke, and this is a potentially fatal condition.

• Take the time to check on older members of your family or neighbors, particularly those without air conditioning. Sometimes that few minutes we take to place a phone call or make a suggestion to go to a movie or the mall, can make a real difference in a loved one's health and safety, or even their life.

5. This Summer You're the Cure!

You don't have to be a heart surgeon to find a cure for heart disease – just a citizen willing to contact legislators to ask for more funding for medical innovations to stop heart disease and stroke. Become an advocate for the American Heart Association and join a network or concerned citizens dedicated to finding a cure for heart disease and stroke. Join our Grassroots Network at http://heart.grassroots.com.

6. Walk Your Way to a Healthier Lifestyle.

Faith-based organizations are more than places of worship today. Many have active health and wellness ministries that incorporate exercise and physical activity for their members. Work with your organization to start a walking club and invite "charter members" to get your group off on the right foot. Learn more about heart-health and stroke prevention through the American Heart Association's faith-based program, Search Your Heart, which offers hands-on prevention education, including health screenings, workshops and fitness and nutrition activities. For more information about Search Your Heart call 800-662-1701.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A bit of Arian contrariness could be keeping you from getting all the facts. Turn it off, and tune in to what you need to hear. It could make all the difference this week.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Getting an answer to a vital question involving financial matters might take longer than you'd expected. A new factor might have to be dealt with before anything can move forward. Be patient.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Use your good sense to see what might really be driving a colleague's workplace agenda. What you learn could lead to a new way of handling some old problems.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A change of mind might once again turn out to be a good thing. True, most of your co-workers might not like the delay, but as before, they might appreciate what follows from it.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) You revel in golden opportunities this week. One cautionary note, though: Be careful to separate the gold from the glitter before you make a choice. Someone you trust can help.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Marriage is important this week, as are other partnerships. Don't let yourself be overwhelmed by sentiment. Instead, try to steer a path between emotion and common sense.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Dealing with someone who has let you down is never easy. But the sooner you're able to clear up this problem, the sooner other problems can be successfully handled.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) A "friend" who is willing to bend the rules to gain an advantage for both of you is no friend. Reject the offer and stay on your usual straight and narrow path.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) After all the effort you've been putting in both on the job and for friends and family, it's a good time to indulge your own needs. The weekend could bring a pleasant surprise.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) You might want to do something new this weekend. Close your eyes and imagine what it could be, and then do it, or come up with the closest practical alternative.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Your good deeds bring you the appreciation you so well deserve. But, once again, be careful of those who might want to exploit your generous nature for their own purposes.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Trolling for compliments isn't necessary. You earned them, and you'll get them. Concentrate this week on moving ahead into the next phase of your program.

BORN THIS WEEK: Meeting new people usually means you're making new friends. People want to be reflected in your shining light.

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

FORGET FAULTS

If you would increase your happiness and prolong your life, forget your brother's faults. Forget the slander you have heard, forget the temptations, forget the fault-finding, and give more thought to the cause that provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points that make you fond of them. Forget all personal quarrels you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they really are. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday: start with a clean sheet for today, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only the things which are lovely and lovable.

There is an old Chinese proverb which states: "Think of your own faults the first part of the night when you are awake, and the faults of others the latter part of the night when you are asleep."

Something to think about? We think so! . . .

Quincy Thunder Win 2 Softball Tournaments

Katie O'Neill ended the inning.

Sixth-inning doubles by Mahoney and Reed rallied the team to two more runs, but it was not enough.

In the single-elimination portion of the tourney the following day, Quincy topped the Rippers, 5-1. O'Neill started the game and handed Caruso a 3-1 lead to protect in the fifth.

The middle of the Thunder's lineup, Mahoney, Bularzik and Reed, drove in all the runs. Quincy's Rose Bell and Brighid Kyle each chipped in with long triples to the right field fence.

Quincy pulled out a stunning 2-0 victory in its next game against the favorite and No. 1 seed in the tourney, the Fire N' Ice, whose program has been one of the elite ones in New England for years.

The current squad was described by the Boston papers as having the "most feared hitter in the state" at short, an "RBI machine" at third and a pitcher with 245 strikeouts this season against whom "it was a difficult proposition (just getting on base)."

Traft had Fire N' Ice pounding the ball into the ground, the defense played flawlessly and the offense did just enough. A walk to Traft followed by a booming double by Kyle led to the decisive two runs.

It was on to the championship game against the MA Invasion, a team whose core play for the powerful Cardinal Spellman program. A classic tug of war game, the Thunder prevailed with a 3-2 win in extra innings.

Traft kept most of the hitters off-balance and the defense again played errorless ball.

The Invasion took a 1-0 lead in the third. In the top of the fifth, Reed, Kyle, Souza and LeBel had hits to put the Thunder ahead, 2-1, but the Invasion pushed across the tying run in the bottom half.

Leading off the sixth, an Invasion batter smashed a deep drive to center field. Reed turned, ran, leapt as high as she could and somehow held onto the ball as she tumbled to the ground. The defensive highlight of the weekend.

After seven innings, the game was deadlocked at 2 and the international tie-breaker rule was invoked where each team starts an inning with a runner on second base.

In the top of the eighth with two outs, Mahoney laced a triple to drive in the lead run. All that was left was to prevent the Invasion from scoring its runner from second. Three batters, three quick outs and the Thunder celebrated their second championship of the summer.

And now college coaches know this Quincy-based collection of hard-working ball players and its coaching staff is for real.

Quincy will play in a tournament in Lowell this weekend.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency gives notice to the proposed determination of base flood elevations, in accordance with Section 110 of the Flood Disaster Protection Act of 1973 (Pub. L. 93-234), 87 Stat. 980, which added Section 1363 to the National Flood Insurance Act of 1968 (title XIII of the Housing and Urban Development Act of 1968 (Pub. L. 90-448)), 42 U.S.C. 4001-4128, and 44 CFR 67.4(a).

These elevations, together with the floodplain management measures required by Section 60.3 of the program regulations, are the minimum that are required. They should not be construed to mean the community must change any existing ordinances that are more stringent in their floodplain management requirements. The community may at any time enact stricter requirements on its own, or pursuant to policies established by other Federal, State, or regional entities. These proposed elevations will also be used to calculate the appropriate flood insurance premium rates for new buildings and their contents.

Pursuant to the provisions of 5 USC 605(b), the Administrator, to whom authority has been delegated by the Director, Federal Emergency Management Agency, hereby certifies that the proposed flood elevation determinations, if promulgated, will not have a significant economic impact on a substantial number of small entities. A flood elevation determination under Section 1363 forms the basis for new local ordinances, which, if adopted by a local community, will govern future construction within the floodplain area. The elevation determinations, however, impose no restriction unless and until the local community voluntarily adopts floodplain ordinances in accord with these elevations. Even if ordinances are adopted in compliance with Federal standards, the elevations prescribe how high to build the floodplain and do not prohibit development. Thus, this action only forms the basis for future local actions. It imposes no new equipments; of itself it has no economic impact.

Proposed base flood elevations along flood sources studied in detail are shown on the Preliminary Revised Flood Insurance Rate Map. Lessees and owners of real property in the City of Quincy, are encouraged to review these maps and related materials at the address cited above. The proposed base flood elevations for the Weymouth Fore River are as follows:

	Range of Base Flood Elevations #Depth in feet above ground • Elevation in feet (NAVD)
Source of Flooding	Existing	Modified
Approximately 760 feet south of Germantown Point	None	• 11
Approximately 700 feet south of Germantown Point	None	• 14

Cahill Defends SBA Over QHS Project

spokewoman's schedules as well as internal email, comments at public and private meetings and any other correspondence pertaining to Quincy and other projects.

Cahill said his office and SBA will comply with the request, but it will take time due to the number of documents involved.

If the city does sue SBA, Cahill said he is confident the agency has acted within its authority regarding the construction of a new Quincy High School.

"We welcome any inquiries as to how we operate," said Cahill. "We are very transparent and are making the right decisions for the right reasons. A lawsuit hurts the city, and it jeopardizes the reimbursement funds from SBA - it's a lot of money to give up."

Quincy has been approved to receive $72 million for the construction of a new high school. Central Middle School and Sterling Middle School are also projects that will require SBA approval in the future, he said.

Some elected officials said privately they believe the city is searching for inconsistencies in the way in which SBA has dealt with school projects, and suggested this could be the basis for a lawsuit.

The public information requests drew criticism from Katherine Craven, head of SBA, who suggested that the city is wasting taxpayers' dollars.

"Rather than have Tishman focus on blueprints and plans for a new high school, the mayor has them spending time and taxpayer money on things that have nothing to do with building schools," Craven said.

Tishman has not been approved as project manager for the new high school, so the firm's work regarding the search for documents is not reimbursable by SBA, according to Craven. By law, the authority is required to sign off on the forms used by the city to enter into contracts for architects, engineers and other contracting services, including Tishman.

Such a request for documents could cost thousands of dollars "which the City of Quincy would have to incur without state reimbursement," said Craven.

The city's costs associated with the public information request "will not be significant in terms of a $100 million project," Conyngham countered.

She said the city is now in the process of submitting for approval of Tishman.

Earlier this year, state officials warned that proposed design changes would do away with the 90 percent state reimbursement originally proposed for the project. The expected 90 percent reimbursment for the construction of a new Central Middle School was also dead, they said.

Citing difficulties with the environmental permitting process and other problems, Phelan and the school committee signed off on a different plan which they claim would provide greater benefits to Quincy's schoolchildren and surrounding communities.

But Craven and Cahill characterized the new plan as radically different, and directed the city to build a high school on Southern Artery between Coddington St. and Russell Park, a variation of a plan originally approved by the city in 2003.

Conyngham criticized SBA for pushing what she described as an inferior plan.

"We have been told by an agency that has never built a school that we have to put it in a certain location," she said. "And we are talking about a school that is unsound, both educationally and architecturally."

Conyngham also said the plan suggested by SBA would be more costly, by about $7 million, than the blueprint supported by the school committee. The plan backed by the mayor and school committee has broad support from a number of different parties, including the school superintendent, the environmental community and Quincy High School Principal Frank Santoro.

"Simply put, we want to understand why we are not being able to move forward with a project that has strong community support and saves taxpayers' dollars," she said.

The city received state approval to build a specific high school project prior to the 2004 creation of the SBA.

Cahill said the city cannot submit substantial changes after-the-fact and expect to receive the same reimbursement.

"If we approved a community to build a new plan under the old rules there would be 10 other cities or towns wanting to do the same thing," said Cahill. "We are being consistent, but the city wants to be treated differently."

Other cities and towns have decided to go that route, submitting updated plans but willing to take a chance on a lower reimbursement rate from the state, he said.

Currently, there is a moratorium on new projects but communities will be able to apply for state reimbursement funds again in 2007, albeit at a lower reimbursement rate. Quincy's best hope is an 80 percent reimbursement rate after 2007, said Cahill.

"We (SBA) are not stopping a new Quincy High School from being built," he said. "The mayor and school committee have the option of moving ahead with their plan right now, but they won't get the 90 percent reimbursement for it."

Cahill said if the city continues to delay the Quincy High School project it could have a negative impact on the quality of education at North Quincy High School.

"If parents don't like the current facilities at Quincy High they will move their kids to North, and that could create overcrowding problems at North," said Cahill. "A longer delay in this project has the ability to impact every high school student in the city."

New Quincy Museum

MAYOR WILLIAM PHELAN takes a look at an introductory panel which is part of the Quincy Historical Society's new Quincy History Museum, titled "Quincy: Of Stone, Of Ships, Of Minds."

Filling Retirements

Phelan Promotes 20 In Police Dept.

Mayor William Phelan has promoted 20 police officers in the Quincy Police Department.

In a ceremony held Wednesday (yesterday) at City Hall, Phelan promoted several police officers, sergeants and lieutenants.

"I want to congratulate all of the promoted officers and their families on their achievement," said Phelan. "I believe we have one of the best police departments and we will continue to improve the department under the leadership of Chief Crowley."

Promoted to the rank of captain are Lieutenants Paul N. Keenan and John R. Dougan.

Promoted to Lieutenant are sergeants Donald H. Greenwood, John D. Steele, Jeffrey A. Burrell, Kevin G. Tobin, Daniel J. Minton, Brian J. Tobin, Patrick P. Glynn and Charles E. Santoro.

Receiving a promotion to sergeant are officers Mark Foley, Mark Kennedy, John Kelly III, James McNeil, Dan Flaherty, Jennifer Kriegal, Richard Potter, Richard Gilmore, Joseph Lencki and Richard Praetsch.

The large number of promotions are due in large part to the unprecedented retirements from the police force last year. The department was increased significantly in the 1970s and many of those officers reached retirement age at or around the same time.

All promotions will fill positions of officers who have left the police force.

"Our police department is as well-trained and well-educated as any time in city history," said Phelan. "We will continue to implement new initiatives and new training to improve our services to the public. Our goal is nothing less than the best and we will continue to promote those that share that philosophy."

Signage, Reduced Speeds, Street Markings

'Senior Safety Zones' Nearing Passage

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Quincy's state legislative delegation is working with Gov. Mitt Romney's administration to finalize an amendment that will establish "senior safety zones" throughout the city.

If enacted, the legislation would allow Quincy to erect traffic signs, provide signalization and reduce speed limits on roads near senior housing and facilities.

Originally introduced by Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin, the measure was prompted by concerns about the safety of elderly residents who traverse streets near their homes.

The legislation passed in the state Senate and has received preliminary approval in the House. But Gov. Romney's administration has expressed reservations about language in the measure because it may impact state roads in Quincy, according to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

But Morrissey said he is confident the issue can be resolved by the end of the month.

"We can work it out," he said. "We are negotiating with the administration and we hope to have an agreed upon amendment that will alleviate their concerns."

The city council has been pushing for legislation that would protect senior citizens since the late 1990s, when several elderly pedestrians were seriously injured or killed crossing busy intersections in Quincy and neighboring areas.

Coughlin introduced a similar measure two years ago, but it died in the House.

The safety issue hit home for Coughlin last year when his father-in-law, Pasquale Giubilo, 83, was struck by a car on Saratoga St. Giubilo suffered multiple fractures and a cerebral hemorrhage due to injuries sustained in the accident. He now requires a feeding tube to survive.

"My sense of obligation as an elected official drove this," said Coughlin. "But when my father-in-law was hit by a car it became more personal for me."

Coughlin said senior safety zones would follow the model established for school zones: Increased police presence, flashing signalization, reduced speed limits, street markings and signage would identify the area.

Quincy's state delegation said they are solidly behind Coughlin's measure.

"Many seniors are confined to wheelchairs or use walkers and they need extra time to cross the streets," said Rep. Bruce Ayers. "This will provide an extra layer of safety in areas near senior citizen facilities throughout the city."

To Be Repaired, Distributed In Developing Nations

Quincy Lions Club Collects 1,550 Pairs Of Used Eyeglasses

More than 1,550 pairs of used eyeglasses were collected by the Quincy Lions Club recently as part of the service club's annual eyeglass collection drive.

The glasses were collected in specially marked boxes located at local businesses around Quincy, said Lions Club President Jennifer Logue.

"Once again, local residents came through and generously donated the gift of sight to those who are less fortunate," said Logue, who noted that Lions Clubs around the world collect and repair used eyeglasses for distribution in developing nations, where vision care is often unavailable or too expensive for those in need. "Thanks to the generosity of Quincy and South Shore residents, thousands of people around the world will now be able to see better."

Logue thanked Lions Eyeglass Committee Chair Tom Hogan for leading this year's successful collection drive. She also recognized Third Vice President Denis Tardo for his help in counting, boxing and storing the collected glasses for shipment.

Those wishing to donate used eyeglasses may deposit them throughout the year in specially marked Lions Club collection boxes at the following Quincy locations:

Control Appetite / Increase Energy / Boost Metabolism

There are two glaring and until now unavoidable metabolic barriers that prevent fat loss. First, your metabolism may not be that good to start with due to your body's less than optimal production of thermogenic enzymes. Second, when dieting, your metabolism may diminish further as you reduce calories in the quest for more fat loss. If not for these two barriers, losing fat would be infinitely easier.

Performance Lean is research proven to help you avoid both obstacles. It will improve your output of thermogenic enzymes and increase your metabolic "Set Point". This set point is the level of fat that your body burns throughout the day. Performance Lean has been proven to shift your metabolic set point in favor of burning fat, it supercharges your metabolism.

Morrissey, Keating Co-Sponsor Legislation

Crackdown On Those Who Let Illegal Drivers Behind The Wheel

MICHAEL MORRISSEY

WILLIAM KEATING

Sen. Michael Morrissey and Norfolk County District Attorney William Keating are co-sponsoring legislation that would stiffen penalties for those who allow the operation of a motor vehicle by those who have a suspended license.

"In light of recent tragedies, it is clear that the current penalties are totally inadequate," said Morrissey, who is co-sponsoring the bill along with Sen. Robert Creedon (D-Brockton) and Keating (D-Sharon). "The legislation will create some accountability and responsibility to those who give over their keys to a person operating their vehicle when their license has been suspended or revoked."

The bill would increase the fine for an employer who does not perform due diligence and allows an unlicensed driver to operate a vehicle for business purposes from $35 to $500 for the first offense. A second or subsequent offense would carry a penalty of up to $1,000 or a year in the house of correction.

In addition, the bill stiffens penalties for knowingly allowing an unlicensed individual, or a person with a revoked license, to operate any motor vehicle.

Under this proposed legislation, sentences of up to two-and-a-half years in the house of correction, fines of up to $5,000, and a 90-day suspension of a drivers' license would be available to judges to sentence and punish individuals who allow unlicensed drivers to use their vehicle.

"The legislation will give law enforcement additional tools it needs to prosecute individuals who knowingly allow a person who has a suspended or revoked license from driving a car owned or controlled by them," said Keating.

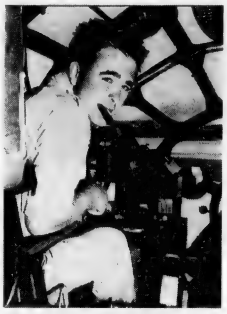
The A-Bombs 60 Years Ago



This is the 60th anniversary of the dropping of the two atomic bombs on Japan that ended World War II.

Saturday marks the anniversary of the first one that fell on Hiroshima Aug. 6, 1945 and next Tuesday, the second one dropped three days later, Aug. 9, on Nagasaki.

There are those today who insist we shouldn't have done it.

But anyone who was out there when it happened will tell you it was the right thing to do at the right time.

One of them was the late Charles Sweeney, a North Quincy High School 1937 graduate who flew the B-29 that dropped the bomb on Nagasaki. That one ended the war.

CHARLES SWEENEY, as a young pilot relaxing with a cigar in a B-29 in August, 1945.

Sweeney was a retired Air Force General when he died at age 84 in July of last year.

He was only 25 when he flew in both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki missions — the only pilot to fly in both.

Sweeney never retreated from critics' flak over the two bombs.

"I would do it again — under the same circumstances," he told me in an interview some years ago on an early anniversary of the Nagasaki bombing.

He never budged from that stance.

The way he saw it, President Harry Truman's decision to use the two atomic bombs saved thousands of American lives (Japanese, too) that would have been lost in an invasion of the Japanese homeland.

Modern day critics and revisionists say dropping the two bombs was inhumane.

But to them defenders say: "You weren't out there in the Pacific at the time. You don't know what it was like."

Soldiers, sailors and marines who were there line up solidly in support of Sweeney on the issue. And note that thousands of Japanese would also have died trying to turn back the invasion.

Pacific war veterans point to the fierce fighting and heavy losses in winning Iwo Jima and Okinawa as a realistic preview of the staggering toll an invasion of Japan itself would have taken.

The Japanese were fanatics about fighting to the death throughout the war and more so at Iwo Jima and Okinawa.

Iwo Jima is about 750 miles south of Tokyo and capturing it, the Japanese knew, would give the U.S. a strategic air base from which to strike the mainland.

The battle for Iwo Jima in February, 1945 was one of the bloodiest and most costly of the war: 21,000 American casualties — 4,500 dead.

WILLIAM CADDY

Among those to give his life was Marine Pfc. William R. Caddy of Quincy, who pounced on and smothered a Japanese hand grenade to save the lives of fellow marines. He was awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously for his heroism. The William R. Caddy Detachment, Marine Corps League here in Quincy was named in his honor in 1946.

Then came the battle for Okinawa in March, only 350 miles from Japan's doorstep. The price of that real estate came even higher: 12,500 Americans killed and over 36,000 other casualties.

The Japanese paid an even higher price to lose it: 110,000 killed.

I was on a destroyer (USS Cogswell) assigned to radar picket duty between Okinawa and the Japanese mainland. Our job was to pick up on radar Japanese planes coming in from Japan and alert our forces on Okinawa.

We had been with the aircraft carriers most of the time and they were the main targets of Kamikaze (suicide) planes.

Now the destroyers on picket duty were the ships they were diving on, trying to knock out that radar warning system.

A number of destroyers were hit. One of them was the William D. Porter, our partner, June 10. A Kamikaze roared down out of the sky that day and the pilot had to pick one of us as his target. He got through the gunfire and crashed onto the Porter and sank her.

The Japanese knew that Okinawa was the last stepping stone to their homeland. And they were ready to die to keep us from reaching there.

So, when the news of the first atomic bomb at Hiroshima and a description of its awesome power reached us, there was no one aboard the Cogswell saying, "Gee, I don't think we should have done that."

And I'm sure there wasn't anyone on any ship in the fleet saying it. Or any soldier or marine on Okinawa or Iwo Jima or any other Pacific island saying it.

The war would soon be over, we felt. And when Sweeney dropped the second bomb, that did it.

Before the formal surrender was signed, I was in a scouting party that landed at Yokosuka, south of Tokyo.

There we got an idea as to what an invasion would have been like. In caves we found hidden suicide speed boats. With — we were amazed to see — 1935 or 1936 American made automobile engines.

The Japanese planned to load those boats up with explosives and ram our ships and landing craft in an invasion that, fortunately, never took place thanks to the two atomic bombs.

It would have been a costly invasion we thought as we examined the boats. And wondered what they could have done to destroyers like the Cogswell with hulls so thin they were affectionately nicknamed "tin cans."

The Cogswell was anchored in Tokyo Bay with other ships of the fleet when the Japanese formally surrendered to General Douglas MacArthur aboard the battleship USS Missouri Sept. 2.

If there had been an invasion that historic surrender would not have happened that day. Thousands of more lives would have been lost before it finally did.

I have yet to hear anyone who was in the Pacific at the time say we should not have dropped those two bombs.

The fact that it took not one — but two atomic bombs — to convince the Japanese to surrender gives you an idea of how willing they were to fight on.

Critics today argue that it was wrong.

Those of us who were out there felt that under the circumstances of that time, the bombs were justified. And, still do.

And hope that circumstances will never again rise for a third such bomb to ever be used.

Critics are entitled to their opinion. But you seldom hear them mention Pearl Harbor when they argue about Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Do they ever think of the more than 2,400 Americans killed in that attack Dec. 7, 1941? Or the sailors still entombed in the battleship Arizona at the bottom of Pearl Harbor?

If there hadn't been that sneak attack at Pearl Harbor, there would not have been atomic bombs at Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A real photo postcard view of Wollaston Beach about 1915. This scene near Sachem Street was just a few years after the old Metropolitan Park Commission built the Boulevard and beach. This stretch along here previously was salt marsh to the water's edge. The crowd in the middle of the view are standing and sitting on one of a number of rafts placed off the beach for swimming. On the sand, striped canvas beach chairs were obviously very popular. It must have been a warm day with all the bathers in the water, but notice the women in long dresses and the men with suits, ties and hats. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy's Yesterdays

Three Major Fires In Five Days

This Week
50 Years Ago

The third big fire in five days, the worst series of fire losses in Quincy in years, ravaged the Memorial Granite Co. at the foot of Weedon Place, South Quincy, causing an estimated $60,000 damage.

Earlier the same day, fire destroyed the offices of the Forbes Granite Co., 149 Brook Road, South Quincy.

Five days before, fire gutted the interior of Most Blessed Sacrament Church in Houghs Neck with damage estimated at a half a million dollars, sending 4,000 parishioners to services in Atherton Hough School.

HURRICANE WATCH

The Weather Bureau was keeping a wary eye on Hurricane Connie, the third tropical storm of the season, which was hovering over the ocean some 200 miles off Wilmington, N.C., with 135 mph winds near the center.

Thomas F. MacDonald, director of Civil Defense in Quincy, hurried home from vacation in Marblehead to place his unit on alert and Quincy yachtsmen, recalling the devastation of Hurricane Carol of 1954, secured boats in the bay.

REFERENDUM UNCHALLENGED

George A. Yarrington, executive director of the Quincy Taxpayers Association, said the QTA will not take the trouble to challenge the validity of signatures on a petition asking a Plan A referendum in the fall election.

"I think the Plan A referendum will be defeated on its merits at the polls," he said.

Marie's Kitchen

Chicken Cutlet And Zucchini

Remember that cool day we had one day? I found this great recipe with zucchini and tried it on that day and it is so easy that I want to share it with you today. If you do not like zucchini, egg plant can be substituted.

Chicken cutlet, zucchini bake
4 or 5 cutlets (or more if needed)
1 zucchini
grated parmesan or romano cheese
3 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons butter (or margarine)
1/4 cup white wine
2 cups marinara sauce

Pre-heat oven to 500 degrees.

Dredge the cutlets in flour. Set aside. Cut the zucchini on the bias a little more than a quarter inch thick, and dredge those in flour also.

In the hot oil and melted butter, sauté the cutlets turning until golden brown. Drain and set aside. In the same pan, sauté the zucchini until golden brown also. Set aside. In the same pan, add the wine and blend. Add the marinara sauce. Then back in the pan, layer the cutlets with the zucchini pieces on top of each, sprinkle the grated cheese. Cook for a couple of minutes. Then gently take out each layered piece and place in a slightly greased baking pan side by side and bake uncovered in that hot oven between 10-15 minutes.

If you choose to use the eggplant, follow the same procedure.

Quincy Artist Marilyn Reisberg Exhibit In Cyberspace Gallery

The gold-leaf and acrylic art work of Marilyn Reisberg of Quincy will be on display on the Internet for the next year over cyberspace's Art Treasure Galerie, based at 1500 Main St., Weymouth.

Reisberg, once the co-owner with her late husband, Bernard, of Bernie's Formal Wear in downtown Quincy, is an artist of national reputation.

She has exhibited throughout the US and Canada, including the Board of Jewish education in Washington and the Del Bello Galleries in Toronto.

A 15-painting collection is in the permanent collection at Issacs Francke Public Library in Rockville, Md.

This time you can view her work from an easy chair in your living room by visiting www.artreasures.net or www.artreas.com any time of the day or night.

Attracted to art as a young girl, Reisberg attended children's classes at the Museum of Fine Arts where, at age 13, she spent hours "copying the techniques of the masters."

Her own technique incorporates fragments of 18-23 karat gold leaf within her acrylic paintings

She attended the Massachusetts College of Art and studied under such well-known local artists as the late Doris Ferrara, Anne McRae McCloud, Michael Domina and Robert Douglas Hunter.

"Art was always a part of my life," said Reisberg, who teaches painting from a home studio in Quincy.

MARILYN REISBERG stands beside one of her gold leaf and acrylic paintings that is being exhibited on Cyberspace's Art Treasure Galerie.

MEMA Tips To Protect Property From Hurricanes

During this year's Atlantic Hurricane Season (June 1 - Nov. 30), the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency (MEMA) urges homeowners to protect their property from strong winds, damaging rains, and flooding that hurricanes or tropical storms can bring to New England.

"There are several steps we can all take to help make our homes more storm resistant," said MEMA Director Cristine McCombs. "Early preparation is key."

Here are some examples of how to protect your property:

• Keep trees and shrubbery trimmed. Remove diseased or damaged tree limbs that could be blown down during a storm.

• Clear clogged rain gutters. Hurricanes/tropical storms often bring heavy rain. Providing clear drainage will help prevent misdirected flooding.

• Make sure storage sheds or other outbuildings are securely anchored, either to a permanent foundation or with straps and ground anchors.

• Make a list of outdoor items to bring inside in case of a storm. A list will help you remember anything that can be broken or picked up by strong winds.

• Make temporary plywood covers to protect windows and sliding doors. Drill holes for screws or lag bolts in each cover and around each window. Use a numbering or lettering system that shows which cover goes with which window. Store the mounting screws or lag bolts with the covers in a place where they are readily accessible.

• Buy flood insurance. Unlike damage from hurricane winds, water damage from coastal or inland flooding is not covered by homeowners insurance. Contact your local insurance agent or call the National Flood Insurance Program at 1-800-427-4661.

For more information about MEMA or hurricanes, go to www.mass.gov/mema.

Celeste McGlone Candidate For School Committee

Celeste McGlone is a candidate for one of the three open seats on the Quincy School Committee.

McGlone appeared before the Norfolk County Central Labor Council recently to announce her candidacy and received the council's unanimous endorsement.

A lifelong resident of Quincy, McGlone grew up in Quincy Point, and now lives on Dixwell Ave. with her husband, Jack, and their two sons, J.J. and Scottie. She has more than 20 years experience in the public sector as an executive assitant to Congressman William Delahunt while he served as district attorney and most recently to Mayor William Phelan.

CELESTE McGLONE

In addition, McGlone is a member of the PTO, the Quincy Planning Board, the City of Quincy Downtown Redevelopment Committee, Flag Day Committee and the Quincy Medical Center Cancer Walk Committee. She is also a member of the Mayor's Cup Golf committee which benefits QPS literacy programs.

"I have first-hand knowledge of how the process works and I know how to get things done. I will put my experience and skills to work for our children," said McGlone.

McGlone listed her priorities as a low student to teacher ratio, school safety and programs that not only meet academic standards, but also enhance a child's learning potential. In addition to these objectives, she will be a strong advocate for full-day kindergarten.

"With a strong foundation already in place, we are presented with the opportunity to continue to develop our school system into a model of educational excellence. Out children deserve the best," she said.

Michael Covais Candidate For School Committee Seat

Michael A. Covais of Quincy announces he is a candidate for Quincy School Committee.

His campaign committee will sponsor a kick-off reception at the Adams Inn Tuesday, Aug. 9.

"It is my belief that nothing is more important in our free society than the education of the next generation of Americans," Covais said.

"Here in Quincy, we are at an important crossroad. A new Quincy High and Central Middle School are to be built. New families with diverse needs are moving into our city. Our national, state and city finances are tight. An overseas war and the fear of terror are part of our dinnertime conversation.

"More than ever," Covais continued, "we need a School Committee brave enough to think of out of the box, be creative, and come to timely decisions about the future of education in our great city."

MICHAEL COVAIS

Covais said he is firmly committed to public education. "My wife Lisa and I have an active 13-year-old, Dio, who is about to enter the eighth grade at Atlantic Middle School. I believe that it is our duty to educate the whole child. For example, we have to include more arts for our children. Education is more than just passing the MCAS," he said.

Covais, an attorney with an office in Marina Bay, has been active in the community. He is past president of the Board of Directors, Greater Quincy Child Care Center, community business representative on the School Advisory Council at the Bernazzani Elementary School, co-chairman of the School Advisory Council at the Montclair School, a director of Quincy Youth Basketball, and a sponsor of youth baseball, softball and basketball teams.

Covais is a member of several business and community organizations, including: Quincy 2000 Squantum/Marina Bay Business Partnership Steering Committee, member; BNI International, past president Weymouth Lunch Chapter; Montclair/Wollaston Neighborhood Association, secretary; and Quincy Democratic City Committee, Ward 3 chairperson.

Covais is a graduate of Harvard University and Suffolk University Law School. He is a member of the Bar in Massachusetts and New York, and is a member of the Massachusetts Real Estate Bar Association.

Women's Senior Golf Tour

Inaugural BJ's Charity Championship At Granite Links This Weekend

Kathryn Young-Robyn will try to become the first player to win two events in a single season on the Women's Senior Golf Tour when the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship unfolds Friday to Sunday at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills.

Young-Robyn, who claimed her first Women's Senior Golf Tour victory at the recent Hy-Vee Classic in Johnston, Iowa, has committed to play the BJ's Charity Championship and bolsters a field that promises to feature many of the legends of women's golf.

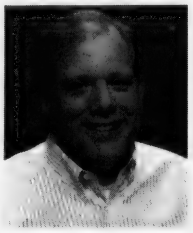
LPGA Hall of Fame member Sandra Haynie also recently committed to the BJ's Charity Championship.

She will be joined by Shelley Hamlin, who won the Women's Senior Golf Tour's last stop in New England, the 2002 Fidelity Investments Classic at Waverly Oaks Golf Club in Plymouth, and Cindy Miller of The Golf Channel's "Big Break III" reality series.

Previous commitments to the BJ's Charity Championship included four prominent players with New England roots and a combined 135 LPGA Tour wins: Pat Bradley, Patty Sheehan, JoAnne Carner and Jane Blalock. LPGA stars Jan Stephenson, Sally Little and Tammie Green are also scheduled to compete. In addition, Nancy Lopez will play in Friday's Pro-Am.

The BJ's Charity Championship is the final event and one of three stops on the 2005 Women's Senior Golf Tour, which is the official Senior Tour of the LPGA Tour. Sponsored by BJ's Wholesale Club, the BJ's Charity Championship comprises a one-day Pro-Am on Friday, followed by a 36-hole best-ball tournament featuring 24 two-player teams vying for a $400,000 purse.

Single-day tickets are available for $10 and three-day passes are available for $25. Tickets can be purchased by calling the BJ's Charity Championship tournament office at 617-721-3931. For more information, visit www.wsgtour.com.



Proceeds from the tournament will be administered through the BJ's Charitable Foundation to support community-based programs benefiting children and families.

Jim Timmins Candidate For School Committee

Attorney Jim Timmins, 48, announces his candidacy for School Committee.

He joins the field seeking to fill the three vacancies following the decisions of committee veterans Michael McFarland, Jo-Ann Bragg and Ron Mariano not to seek re-election.

Timmins lives with his wife, Paula (McViney), and three children, Katie, Christopher and Courtney, on Reservoir Road in Ward 3. Both Jim and Paula are lifelong residents of the city. All three children graduated from Wollaston School. Katie went on to graduate from Central Middle School and North Quincy High School and now attends Brown University in Providence, R.I. Chris also graduated from Central Middle School and now attends B.C. High. Courtney will begin at Central this fall.

JIM TIMMINS

"My wife and I consider ourselves most fortunate for our experience with the Quincy Public Schools," Timmins said. "Our daughter is at one of the finest colleges in the country and she is doing great there; her foundation for success was forged in the Quincy Public Schools. We've received so much from the school system, my wife and I agreed it was time to contribute back."

Timmins graduated from Montclair School and Central Junior High and went on to B.C. High, where he graduated with honors and was a class officer and president of the student council; all while playing varsity basketball and participating in other sports and activities. He then graduated from Brown University. After graduation, he taught high school mathematics for five years at St. Clare High School in Roslindale.

While teaching, he coached girls' basketball at North Quincy High School and attended Suffolk University Law School evenings – "working my way through" — and graduated with his law degree in 1985, after which he began working as a lawyer. After working in a litigation firm in Boston, Timmins served as a solicitor to Mayor Jim Sheets for 12 years, handling a host of matters while at City Hall.

"I feel that with my experience, both as an attorney for the city and a parent in the school system, I can contribute right away to the school committee," said Timmins, adding he was concerned that the loss of McFarland, Bragg and Mariano came at a time when "we don't really have the luxury of losing three such experienced members."

Timmins serves on the Board of Directors of QATV and Quincy After School Child Care, two entities that have helped keep him "plugged in" to the city. In addition, he has been coaching since 1990 in Quincy Youth Soccer, Junior Farm, Little League and Babe Ruth baseball, and Sacred Heart Basketball.

"I have been involved, and I feel like I have a good sense of what is important to the families of Quincy," Timmins said. "I look forward to sharing with voters my thoughts and hopes for the school system over the next few months, and hope that on election day, I can count on people to support me with their vote."

Patrick Morrissey Appointed Harbormaster

Quincy resident Patrick Morrissey has been appointed as the new harbormaster for the City of Quincy, Mayor William Phelan announced Tuesday.

Morrissey assumes the position overseeing waterways in and around Quincy's 27 miles of coastline.

"Pat Morrissey is a lifelong boater who understands the issues facing the boating community," said Phelan. "He will bring his experience and perspective to the position and I look forward to working with him. I believe he will be of great help to my administration and the boating community."

Morrissey, the brother of Sen. Michael Morrissey, succeeds Andrew Ayer, who resigned earlier this year.

Pat Morrissey said he is honored to be considered for the appointment.

"I have spent my entire life on the waters of our bays and rivers and I believe that I can bring that experience in a constructive manner to the position of harbormaster. Water safety is a priority as is compliance with state regulations and I look forward to working with the boating community," he said.

The harbormaster is an annual appointment made by the mayor.

Morrissey's father, Arthur, served as harbormaster under the Hannon administration.

Morrissey and his wife Deborah have three children Megan, Patrick and Brenna.

Megan Grasselli On Dean's List

'Quincy: Of Stone, Of Ships, Of Minds'

New Quincy History Museum Opens At Historical Society

The Quincy Historical Society has opened its new Quincy History Museum at the Adams Academy at 8 Adams St. in Quincy Center.

The museum is open to visitors Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and Saturday from noon to 4 p.m.

The museum, titled "Quincy: Of Stone, Of Ships, Of Minds," encompasses the major points of Quincy history from Native American times to the present. It is, according to Historical Society Executive Director Edward Fitzgerald, the first exhibit anywhere to take this comprehensive approach to the city's history. Fitzgerald continued:

"The aim is to highlight the numerous ways in which Quincy has made an impact on American history and also to chart the distinctive development of the Quincy community."

Various sections focus on the controversial Thomas Morton and Anne Hutchinson, the Revolutionary generation of the Adams, Hancock, and Quincy families, the importance of the granite industry, the achievements of Fore River Shipyard, and the business genius of Howard Johnson and the Grossman family.

Interwoven are segments on ways of life in early Quincy, the community's immigrant heritage, and growth and change in the City of Quincy.

"Quincy: Of Stone, Of Ships, Of Minds" was created by Historical Society personnel and Bailey Donovan Museum Design of Manchester, N.H. Donovan had previously designed exhibits for, among others, the MIT Museum, the House of the Seven Gables, Canterbury Shaker Village, and the Currier Gallery of Art.

Fitzgerald noted that actual work on the museum took nearly two years of planning and working. We are grateful to all those who gave their talent, their time, or their support to make the museum a reality."

Admission to the exhibit is $3 for adults, $1.50 for seniors, and free for children. Admission is free for members of Quincy Historical Society.

JAMES EDWARDS, president of the Quincy Historical Society, offers his thoughts at the opening of the Society's new Quincy History Museum.

stead application.

"We consulted with experts on several of the topic area," he said. "Betsy Bailey, the chief designer, had to create a plan that would present this very rich material in an orderly, visually striking manner. And we created several interactive components."

The museum was funded almost entirely by voluntary contributions, said Historical Society President James Edwards, in a fundraising campaign begun by previous President Joyce Baker.

More than 250 people attended the museum's recent grand opening reception, catered by Alba's Restaurant.

Edwards remarked, "This is the culmination of years of

A Diversity Of Businesses Within South/West Quincy

With its labor intensive quarrying, the granite industry brought many immigrant workers to this area, many of whom maintained a permanent presence long after the industry faded. The legacy of many service-related enterprises that catered to the needs of the quarry workers and the industry is still evident throughout the area.

However, new residential and commercial development has dominated the area in recent years. Crown Colony and Batterymarch office parks has located West Quincy, providing employment for thousands of Quincy and South Shore families. Such well known companies such as Arbella Mutual Insurance, Boston Financial Data Services, Harvard Pilgrim, the Quincy Marriott, J. Jill, and the National Fire Protection Association reside within these two premier office parks.

West Quincy is also home to Highpoint condominiums and apartments on Quarry St., which is the cities largest residential development.

The Quarry Hills area is home to a world-class, 27-hole championship golf course, as well as many recently constructed soccer and baseball recreation facilities. The area will soon be transformed further with the addition of several residential developments as well as the planned Marion Manor 360-unit assisted living and independent living facility.

The area continues to see a high level of economic investment, by both small and large businesses. Prime examples of recent investments in the area include Fallon Ambulance, the UPS Store, and Regus Business Center.

MEMBERS OF THE South/West Quincy Business Partnership recently received a $1,000 check from Fallon Ambulance. Brian Tobin, Quincy Police Department.

Fallon Ambulance

Fallon Ambulance Service, the region's largest independent, family-owned ambulance service provider, recently moved into its new headquarters in West Quincy.

Fallon is the primary 911 provider for Milton, Quincy, Brookline, Weymouth, Dedham and Braintree, and is now located at the site of the former New England Steel Tank building, 111-115 Brook Rd., West Quincy.

For the third generation, family-owned ambulance company, this represents an expansion to three times the size of its previous headquarters in Milton. Fallon received a Tax Increment Finance (TIF) agreement from the City of Quincy, which provides local and state tax incentives to companies bringing jobs and economic investment to targeted areas within the city.

"Quincy's location and proximity to Boston made it an ideal place to relocate our headquarters," said Peter Racicot, vice president of Business Development at Fallon. "The city's willingness to work with us made the move very easy, and the TIF lessened the burden of real estate taxes."

Mayor William Phelan praised the TIF agreement.

"Bringing a quality company like Fallon Ambulance to Quincy is a good example of how a comprehensive tax incentive program can stimulate economic investment and create tax revenues and jobs for the community," said Phelan.

Fallon invested approximately $4 million to refurbish the existing structure to create a new 43,000 square foot facility.

"The state-of-the-art facility will enable us to have an on-site training facility, expanded dispatch capabilities, and greater opportunities for expansion," said Racicot.

The relocation to West Quincy represents significant dollars to the City of Quincy both in property taxes and excise taxes, as Fallon will house 60 of its vehicles in Quincy.

As part of the TIF agreement Fallon will also donate $1,000 a year for the next five years to the South/West Business Partnership of Quincy 2000 for improvements to the Brewer's Corner business area.

"Fallon is a great company to have in Quincy and their generous donation to Brewer's Corner will help us undertake needed betterments to the area," said Dean Rizzo, executive director of Quincy 2000 Collaborative.

The UPS Store

The UPS Store opened a short time ago in the Adams Plaza, located at 550 Adams St. in West Quincy.

The store provides shipping, packaging, receiving and moving supplies, mailbox rentals, computer time rental, as well as postal, printing, finishing and copying services.

The Quincy UPS Store will also be a full service Ebay selling and shipping outlet.

"I am a local, I have lived in Quincy for more than 30 years and I am excited to have opened my business in the city I live," said Tom Bagley, owner.

Document services include black & white copies, color copies, binding, laminating and high-volume copying. The store sells stamps and meter mail.

Other services include fax and notary services.

"As a one-stop shop for shipping, postal and business services, I look forward to serving the business and consumer communities," said Bagley.

Regus Business Center

Regus Business Center, an internationally known company recently opened its newest facility on 859 Willard St. in West Quincy.

With more than 150 in attendance the new service was received with rave reviews.

Regus, which officer temporary office space for growing businesses as well as a virtual office feature for home-based businesses, will be a great asset to developing businesses along the South Shore.

"We are excited to open a Quincy office, which gives our clients tremendous accessibility to Boston, the South Shore and the 128 Technology Belt," said owner Fran Perdisatt.

Quincy Environmental Network Receives $2,000 Grant

The Quincy Environmental Network received a $2,000 grant from the New England Grassroots Environmental Fund (NEGEF) to hire an intern to help with administrative tasks in the organization.

"This funding allows us to delegate to another person some of the routine tasks of running the group so that we can dedicate more time to strategic planning," said Steve Perdios, a QEN spokesperson.

Future projects for QEN include exploring ways to receive more state funding for open space preservation.

"There are several programs, such as the Community Preservation Act, that might help Quincy save the precious few remaining acres of open space in the city," Perdios said. "We have already lost so many large parcels of land to development that we need to act on this issue with urgency."

NEGEF was created in 1996 and is designed to support grassroots activists working on hometown environmental issues.

What's Cooking

(NAPS) — The recipe for adding international flair to meals has more to do with kitchen stables than it does with having a world of cooking skills.

That's the advice of professional chef and restaurant owner Norman Van Aken. His barbecued Ropa Vieja, for instance, used economical chuck steak, tomato sauce and other pantry staples that, in combination, fill the house with the aroma of a Cuban kitchen.

Home Ideas

(NAPS) — Acidic soil with low pH, or sour soil, is not conducive to healthy plant growth. If tests show your soil is acidic, consider using hydrated lime. According to Dave Jackson of Oldcastle, the lime helps neutralize acid in the soil and helps make nutrients more available. If also helps detoxify naturally occurring elements such as aluminum that are often found in soil. For more information, visit www.yardright.com.

Homeowners who are looking for ideas to personalize their home may want to check out Wood Beautiful, a free magazine from the Minwax Company. The publication inspires and guides do-it-yourselfers of all skill levels with innovative yet achievable wood-finishing and home-improvement projects. The idea-filled magazine can be obtained by visiting minwax.com.

Are You Ready For Rising Interest Rates?

(NAPS) — Many families may be shocked by higher monthly bills as interest rates rise in coming months, but yours doesn't have to be among them.

Here's how to prepare:

Assess Your Exposure

To test your mortgage's vulnerability to interest rate shock, take this quick quiz.

• What is the worst case scenario for your mortgage in terms of the highest interest rate you can pay? This month? Next month? Next year?

• What is the interest rate cap on your mortgage loan? How often can it rise and by how much? What will your new payment be?

• Can you afford to pay these increases from your current income?

If your answer is no, don't panic. Instead:

Take Steps To Protect Yourself

You'll want to focus on your mortgage — likely your single biggest financial obligation.

The table above compares how three of the most popular loan types — interest only, Piggyback and 30-year fixed — would fare if the prime rate rose only 2 percent after five years.

"While the initial monthly payment is lower on an interest-only or piggyback loan than on a fixed rate mortgage, this advantage evaporates quickly when interest rates are rising," says Steve Smith, president of PMI Mortgage Insurance Co., the nation's second largest provider of private mortgage insurance.

"In fact, by the fourth year, the monthly payment for the 30-year mortgage has decreased by 7 percent because in many cases mortgage insurance can be canceled once your equity ownership reaches 25 percent — and you're still protected from rising rates by the stable, consistent payment.

"After the fifth year, the payment on the interest-only loan jumps a whopping 81 percent. The piggyback payment has jumped 42 percent. The 30-year, in comparison, stays the same at 7 percent less than the original payment. At the end of the fifth year, the borrower has paid more on the balance with the 30-year fixed compared to the piggyback, while the interest-only borrower has paid noting toward the balance at all."

Financial advisor Paul Grace from Mill Valley, Calif., says, "One of the biggest potential benefits to owning your home is the security you can have with a fixed monthly mortgage payment. If you give up that security for the short-term gain you might get from a loan that leaves you vulnerable to rising rates, you're giving up a lot. Refinancing into a fixed rate mortgage or a traditional hybrid ARM where the interest rate is fixed for a set time period such as five, seven or 10 years, can protect borrowers from the effect of rising rates by making payments consistent and predictable — and right now, those loans are still available at very competitive rates."

"By looking ahead and calculating the costs — not only today, but tomorrow when interest rates rise — you can take the surprise out of your future and protect your family," says Smith.

Warning Signs When Buying A Home

(NAPS) — Most home buyers pride themselves on knowing how to spot a solid home or one that needs serious work.

Aside from the obvious warning signs — such as damp spots on walls or missing roof shingles — many home buyers may remain unaware of serious yet hard-to-spot problems such as foundation damage.

What should you look for? Dan Steward, president of national home inspection service provider, Pillar To Post, offers seven warning signs to heed when buying a home:

• Water damage: Porous grout and cracks less than one-sixteenth of an inch in a ceramic tiled shower can allow enough water through to do thousands of dollars of damage over time.

• Improper wiring: This includes such situations as amateur (often dangerous) wiring, ungrounded receptacles, lack of ground fault circuit interruptors in wet locations, over-loaded breakers, etc. The home buyer will be informed of the presence of aluminum wiring which was common in houses built in the 1960s and 1970s. These installations could be problematic and should be fully evaluated before closing the sale.

• Attic issues: Home buyers almost never look in attics but inspectors always do, paying special attention to signs of roof leaks, missing support trusses, pest infestation, illegal venting, illegal electrical wiring, inadequate insulation, etc.

• Chugging drains: Drains that "chug" like an upturned soda bottle or toilets that don't flush correctly could be signs that the plumbing system isn't adequately vented.

• Roof damage: Eighty percent of new construction litigation is said to involve the roof. If the roof is bad, the rest of the house is in danger of damage too.

• Heating and cooling systems danger: Gas-fired furnaces have the potential to introduce deadly carbon monoxide gas into the living area. If the gas company decides your furnace is unsafe prior to your move-in, they may lock it out and require replacement before turning on the gas to your new home.

• Foundation problems: Flower beds planted too close to exterior walls could draw too much water to the home's foundation, causing damage. A damp basement might also be an indication that the foundation needs work — it's one of the most expensive home repairs around.

Before you buy, be sure that you are not going to be in the market for expensive home repairs down the road. The best way to be safe is to get a complete home inspection from a reputable and established company such as Pillar To Post.

Electrical Safety Precautions During Hurricanes

The Electrical Safety Foundation International (ESFI) warns consumers to be aware of the dangers hurricanes cause when water comes in contact with electricity.

"Electrical safety guidelines are always important," said Anne Mayberry, ESFI program manager. "During clean-up following a flood, electrical safety precautions can help avoid further loss and tragedy."

To protect against the hazards of the aftermath of hurricanes and floods, ESFI offers this safety advice:

• Take care when stepping into a flooded area, and be aware that submerged outlets or electrical cords may energize the water, posing a potential lethal trap.

• Do not use electrical appliances that have been wet. Water can damage the motors in electrical appliances, such as furnaces, freezers, refrigerators, washing machines and dryers. For those that have been under water, have them reconditioned by a qualified service repairman.

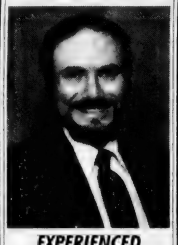
• Take special care with portable electric generators, which can provide a good source of power, but if improperly installed or operated, can become deadly.

• Do not connect generators directly to household wiring. Power from generators can backfeed along power lines and electrocute anyone coming in contact with them, including lineworkers making repairs. A qualified, licensed electrician should install your generator to ensure that it meets local electrical codes.

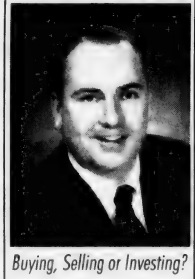
• Make sure your generator is properly grounded.

• Keep the generator dry.

• Do not plug appliances directly into the generator.



• Make sure extension cords used with generators are rated for the load, and are free of cuts, worn insulation, and have three-pronged plugs.



• Do not overload the generator.

• Do not operate the generator in enclosed or partially enclosed spaces. Generators can produce high levels of carbon dioxide very quickly, which can be deadly.

• Use a ground fault circuit interrupter (GFCI) to help prevent electrocutions and electrical shock injuries. Portable GFCIs require no tools to install and are available at prices ranging from $12 to $30.

Electrical safety tips are available at the www.electrical-safety.org.

STATE CHAMPS — The Quincy Babe Ruth 15-year-olds recently won the Eastern Massachusetts State Championship in Danvers. Advance To New England Regional Tournament

Quincy 15-Year-Olds Babe Ruth State Champs

BASEBALL

The Quincy Babe Ruth 15-year-olds recently captured the Eastern Massachusetts State Championship in Danvers.

The championship advanced them to the New England Regional Babe Ruth Tournament, with the winner earning a ticket to the Babe Ruth World Series in Louisiana.

The N.E. Regional began last Friday and ended Wednesday at Michele Memorial Park in Salem, N.H., featuring state champs from Maine, Vermont, New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Connecticut, Western Mass. and host Salem.

Quincy's state title culminated a three-year quest for the hardware. Two years ago it lost in the 13-year-old state finals to Easton and last year it finished third to Easton in the 14-year-old state finals at Adams Field.

Quincy qualified for the state tournament by winning its third consecutive district championship in South Boston.

Quincy opened the double-elimination state tournament in Danvers with a 5-4 win against Peabody.

Quincy jumped to a 3-0 lead in the first inning on Steve Kussman's RBI single and Mike Jay's two-run double. Peabody tied the game in the third with two runs off pitcher Steve Connolly.

In the fifth, Jay's double drove home Tom Conley and a sacrifice fly by Joe Lousararian scored Sean Kearney.

That was all Connolly needed as he allowed a two-out run in the seventh but ended the game with his fifth strikeout. Chris Boyd returned from an injury to spark the team with a single, walk and solid defense.

In its next game, Quincy dropped a 12-11 heartbreaker in 11 innings to Norwood, which eliminated them from last year's tourney.

Trailing 1-0 in the third, Kyle Tobin walked, pinch-runner Mike Leone stole second and scored on Pat Totten's single.

Quincy grabbed a 5-1 lead in the fifth as Conley, Jay, Brian Mahoney and Boyd drove in runs. Norwood responded with two to make it 5-3.

In the sixth, a bases-loaded walk to Mahoney made it 6-3. In the bottom half, starter Doug Myers left the mound with one out and two on and Dan Myers retired the side in relief.

Norwood pushed across three runs in the seventh to even the score at 6 and force extra innings. Quincy scored an unearned run in the eighth but Norwood answered in its half with a two-out run to tie the game again.

Quincy looked to put the game away with a four-run outburst in the 11th. Leadoff hits by Connolly and Totten (five hits, three runs) set the table. A wild pitch scored Connolly and walks to Conley and Kussman loaded the bases. Jay delivered a two-run single and after a walk to Mahoney, Lousararian singled home Kussman to make it 11-7.

But a gritty Norwood team was not to be denied. With two outs and two on, there was a double, a game-tying three-run homer, two singles, a walk and the game-winning single.

Facing elimination, Quincy pulled out a 4-3 win against Peabody. With ace pitcher Glen Misho sidelined with an arm injury, Conley took the mound.

Quincy scored a run in the first when Connolly reached on an error, stole second, advanced to third on a groundout and scored on a wild pitch. Peabody responded with three in the bottom half.

In the fourth, Kussman singled, pinch-runner Misho advanced to third on Jay's double and both scored on RBI singles by Mahoney and Lousararian.

With two outs in the sixth, Conley tripled and scored on Kussman's single to give Quincy a 4-3 lead.

In the seventh, Peabody's leadoff man reached first and the next batter hit a ball to left-center field that appeared to tie the game. But Quincy appealed the runner had

Local Families Still Needed To House Babe Ruth Players During World Series Here

Organizers of the Babe Ruth 14-Year-Old World Series hosted by Quincy are still seeking 10 to 15 families interested in housing players during the tournament Aug. 19-27 at Adams Field.

The players spend much of their time practicing, playing and touring so a host family's responsibilities are not over-burdening, organizers said.

"Housing was a great opportunity for my family to share in the Babe Ruth experience," said Kathy Bowes, who housed in the 2003 event. "I thought it would be a much bigger time commitment than it was.

"Most days you drop the boys at the field fairly early in the morning and pick them up later in the day. You don't need to have children in your home to keep the boys busy. The boys have full schedules. We had a lot of fun going to their games and cheering them on."

Those interested in housing players can contact Marie Sullivan at 617-407-5053. For more information visit quincybaberuth.com.

George Foster To Speak At Babe Ruth World Series Banquet

George Foster, former Major League Baseball great, will be the guest speaker at the 2005 14-Year-Old Babe Ruth World Series banquet to be held Thursday evening, Aug. 18, in Quincy.

Quincy 10-And-Under Girls Win Two In Play-Off Tune-Up

SOFTBALL

Quincy's 10 and under girls' softball team, Davis Club, headed to the playoffs on a high note by closing out the regular season with recent wins over Newton and Norwood.

Davis Club (10-1) benefited from the solid pitching of Nicole Parry and Liz Kelly to limit Newton's offense in a 20-3 victory. Erin Chiocchio led the offense with a double and three runs scored.

Great clutch hitting and outstanding pitching by Parry led Quincy to a hard-fought, 4-2 victory in Norwood. Jacki Hughes' two-run homer in the fourth inning put her team on the board. Sarah Ryan followed a two-run single in the next inning.

Norwood fought back with two runs and loaded the bases with one out in the bottom of the final inning. Parry saved her best for last, striking out the final two hitters to end the game.

Wollaston Sr. Babe Ruth Bows

With the playoff series against South Boston tied at one game apiece, the Wollaston Senior Babe Ruth team called on ace Mike MacPherson to advance to the semifinals.

MacPherson (6-2) didn't disappoint with his one-hitter, but Wollaston's offense fired blanks in a 1-0 loss that ended its season.

Wollaston had a couple of chances but couldn't push across any runs. In the first, Chris Mercurio singled and Ryan Barter doubled with two outs but the inning ended with a flyout. In the seventh, Mike Crifo singled with two outs, stole second and third but the game ended on a strikeout.

Wollaston dropped the opening game, 5-2, but bounced back with a thrilling 11-9 victory in the second game behind the clutch relief pitching and hitting of Matt Giordani.

Already trailing 3-0 in the first, Joe Griffin singled, Barter reached on an error, Crifo ripped an RBI single and Joe Ceurvels stroked a two-run double to tie the game at 3.

Down 5-3 in the third, Griffin led off with a walk and scored on Mercurio's triple. Barter followed with an RBI single. After Crifo singled, Giordani plated both runners with a single for a 7-5 lead.

Wollaston grabbed a 9-6 lead when Crifo singled home two in the fourth inning. South Boston tied the game with three runs in the sixth. In the bottom half, Giordani (two hits, four RBI) knocked home Crifo (walk) and Ceurvels (single) to go up 11-9.

Giordani earned the win with excellent relief pitching, shutting down South Boston for the final 1 2/3 innings.

In the regular season, Wollaston wrapped up play by winning two of three games to finish 12-6 overall. It lost to Wollaston II, 4-2, as Wendell Cosgrove allowed only five hits while striking out five. Joe Ferris and Jon Pelletier each had two hits and two runs to lead Wollaston II's offense.

Wollaston defeated Hingham, 10-4, as Crifo allowed six hits and struck in seven in seven innings. Jim Callahan (3-for-3, four RBI), Anthony Gilbody (double, single, two RBI) and John Orlando (triple, single) powered the offense. Richard Sweeney made two great plays at second base.

Joe Griffin earned his first victory with a 12-4 win over Hyde Park. Griffin pitched the first four innings with Mercurio and Callahan closing out the game. Mercurio (three hits, five RBI), MacPherson (two hits, two runs) and Giordani (hit, two RBI) were the hitting heroes.

Coach Steve Reardon noted catcher Evan Harrington backboned the defense and pitching staff all season.

He also thanked all the players and their parents, the Quincy Park Department and coaches Peter Delgardo, Rich Zapata and Bob Griffin for another successful season.

DRIVE WITH CONFIDENCE

Technologies such as anti-lock brakes (ABS), traction control, and four-wheel-drive may help optimize the acceleration and braking capabilities of the vehicles outfitted with them. However, it is the tires that provide the actual gripping ability at the point where the vehicle makes contact with the road. ABS helps prevent the tires from locking and skidding by releasing pressure and pumping the brakes. For its part, traction control helps prevent tire spin by applying the brakes and/or reducing the power sent to the tires. As for four-wheel-drive, it has the ability to divide power among all four wheels, providing a significant advantage then accelerating in slippery conditions. The more tire traction these systems have to work with, the better.

For safety sake it is also important to routinely check the condition of your car's braking system. The safety of our customers and their families is very important to us here at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO. We are small enough to provide friendly, personal service and large enough to have the latest, most modern equipment and outstanding ASE Certified technicians. We also use the AllData CD-ROM based system for the very latest in maintenance and service bulletins for all makes of cars. You can trust your auto repairs to us at 258 Quincy Ave., E. missed third and the umpire agreed. The next two batters flied out to end the game.

The next day, Quincy held on for a 7-5 win against Plymouth. Quincy scored a run in the first when Conley singled home Connolly (walk). In the second, Tobin, Connolly, Totten, Conley and Kussman knocked in runs, and Kearney added a two-out RBI single in the fourth for a 7-0 lead.

Lousararian kept Plymouth off the board until the sixth when it scored three runs. The damage could have been worse but Leone and Dan Myers made spectacular catches with the bases loaded.

Plymouth added a two-run homer in the seventh before Dan Myers came on in relief and retired three of the next four batters to seal the victory.

At this point, the same three teams that finished last year's tournament were still alive: Norwood, Easton and Quincy. Easton had defeated Norwood so Quincy had to beat Norwood and Easton twice for the title.

Connolly made sure Quincy would make the finals by firing a brilliant three-hit shutout in a 5-0 win against Norwood.

The game was scoreless until the fourth when Jay led off with a double, advanced to third on Mahoney's groundout and scored on Tobin's two-out single.

In the sixth, Mahoney ripped a two-out single scoring Leone (single) and Jay (walk). Lousararian drove home Mahoney with the fourth run. In the seventh, Connolly's second triple of the game and Leone's double made the score 5-0.

Lousararian stood out at shortstop with eight assists and Kearney made a great scoop in the seventh to prevent a throwing error.

In the first Easton game, Quincy was hampered by a flu bug that hit Connolly, who started but left with a high fever.

Doug Myers, who had risen to the occasion the last three years in the state tournament, pitched his team to a 5-4 victory.

In the first, Totten singled and moved to third on Conley's ground-rule double. After Totten was thrown out at the plate on a groundball, Jay plated Conley with a hit.

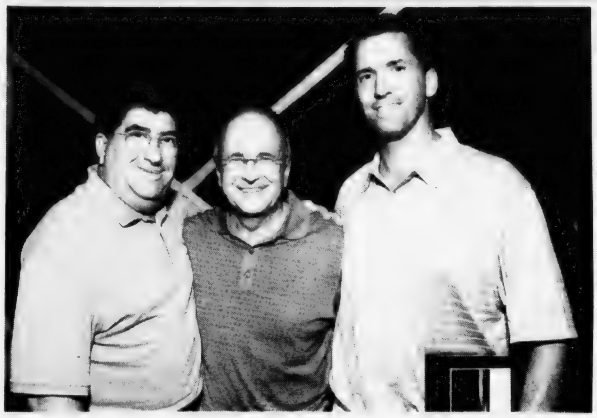
Easton tied the game in the third, but Quincy scored two runs in the fourth for a 3-1 lead. Mahoney and Lousararian singled and Misho pinch ran and stole second. The next two batters struck out but Boyd made contact and an errant throw on his grounder scored the runs.

In the sixth, Totten drove in a run with a single and Easton answered with a run in the bottom half.

Jay singled, stole second and scored Quincy's fifth run in the seventh. Easton scored a pair to make it 5-4, but Doug Myers hung tough for the win.

Quincy triumphed, 5-3, in the second game against Easton to finally secure the elusive championship.

With Connolly still sick, Leone was inserted into the lineup and paid immediate dividends with a double. After Totten singled and Conley walked to load the bases, Kussman and Jay had RBI groundouts for a 2-0 lead.



Easton came back with a run in the first but a caught stealing prevented any more damage.

In the third, Conley doubled and Jay brought him home with another two-out single. Easton responded with one run in the bottom half.

Dan Myers' one-hit pitching and two great catches by Tobin in left field kept the score 3-2 in favor of Quincy heading into the top of the seventh.

Totten led off with his tournament-leading 14th hit. Misho pinch ran and stole second with one out. Kussman singled to left to score Misho and hustled into second on a misplay by the fielder. Jay drove home pinch-runner Kearney to make it 5-2.

In the bottom half, Leone tracked down a long fly to left. A double, a pop-up and an RBI single left Quincy with a 5-3 lead and one out from victory. With the tying run at the plate, Dan Myers induced a grounder to Lousararian, who threw to Boyd for the force at second to end the game.

QMC Golf Classic Raises $175,000 For Imaging Center

The recent 16th annual Quincy Medical Center Golf Classic turned out to be a highly successful and enjoyable day despite threatening skies at Granite Links Golf Club at Quarry Hills.

With widespread support from South Shore business and civic leaders as well as QMC physicians, trustees and employees, the event raised more than $175,000 to benefit the Simon C. Fireman Diagnostic Imaging Center at QMC.

"By all accounts, it was a spectacular day," said Gary Gibbons, MD, interim QMC president and CEO. "It is extremely gratifying to receive such strong support from the extended members of the QMC family as well as our expanding circle of friends in the community. Their gifts will help further our efforts to bring advanced, high quality care to South Shore residents in partnership with Boston Medical Center.

"I would like to extend my thanks and congratulations to Golf Committee co-chairs Peter Racicot, senior vice president of Fallon Ambulance, and Arthur Connelly, chairman and CEO of South Shore Savings Bank, and their volunteer committee for their outstanding efforts in making this fund-raising tournament another spectacular day for our South Shore patients and their families."

In partnership with Alliance Imaging, Inc., the center also houses QMC's Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) and advanced Positron Emission Tomography or PET Scanning, a non-invasive imaging technology used to detect minute abnormalities in cell growth and activity. PET Scanning is shown to enhance the diagnosis and treatment of conditions including cancer, heart disease and neurological disorders.

Quincy's Pauline McNeil Competing In Hershey National Championship

Pauline McNeil of Quincy is representing Massachusetts at the 28th annual Hershey's Track and Field National Championship, which began Wednesday and will end Saturday in Hershey Park, Pa.

She won the standing long jump state championship in the girls' ages 13-14 division, but had to wait for the invitation to the National Championship. The winners of the five New England states had results compared with the best picked for the New England regional team. Boys and girls from all 50 states and Canada are competing.

McNeil qualified for the national program by winning a local meet at Veterans Memorial Stadium sponsored by the Quincy Recreation Department. She was invited to compete in the state championships along with 36 other Quincy champions.

In addition to McNeil, other Quincy state champions were the 4x100-meter relay teams of Laura Nee, Leigh Okoye, Bridget Carey and Jaclyn Scuzzarelli in the ages 9-10 division and Jesse Howlett, Samantha Barkowski, Lil Man and Akilah Mateen in the ages 13-14 division.

McNeil is an eighth-grade student at Central Middle School where she participates in cross country and spring track. She has been the middle school standing long jump champion in spring track.

She competed in the state Hershey's championship last year in the 1-mile run. She is a longtime member of the Quincy Track Club coached by Geoff Hennessy. She has participated in many track meets, including the Junior Olympics. She also likes to play the saxophone.

"This free program is designed for children to have fun and be introduced to lifelong physical fitness activities through track and field," Recreation Director Barry Welch said of the Hershey Program. "Quincy youngsters have benefited enormously over the past 20 years by the generosity of Hershey's Chocolate Company. Most notable was Olympic bronze medalist and Quincy native Karen Cashman, who qualified for the National Championship five years.

"Our kids know when they participate in the local Quincy meet that there is a real possibility they could be heading towards the North American Championships. We are appreciative of the opportunity Hershey's provides."

Exercising After Summer Ends

Q: My exercise routine consists of many outdoor activities such as running, cycling, hiking, swimming and a few recreational sports such as volleyball and softball. When summer is over, I find it hard to stay motivated to exercise. In the past, I have slacked off during the colder months because I haven't found indoor activities that I enjoy as much as outdoor ones. How can I develop a year-round exercise program that keeps me motivated?

A: Outdoor activities aren't just great for keeping fit, they also provide a great landscape for a variety of exercises. Developing an exercise program that incorporates some aspects of these outdoor activities can keep you in shape and motivated throughout the year.

When faced with having to move your workout routine indoors, focus on what you enjoy about your outdoor activities — not what you can't do indoors. If you like the challenge of cycling or hiking, find an activity that may give you that same type of adventure. Indoor rock-climbing walls are a good example of an indoor activity that can give you a feeling of being outdoors.

Instead of just finding something to keep you busy until warm weather arrives, why not use your time to work on becoming better at the sports and activities you enjoy outdoors? Developing a cardiovascular and strength-training routine that focuses on the outdoor activities you enjoy can change the way you view indoor exercise. By becoming stronger, faster and increasing your flexibility, you'll find you perform better and reduce your risk for injury while participating in your favorite outdoor activities.

Another option is to participate in your favorite activities indoors. Cycling, swimming and volleyball can all be completed indoors, and you can hit the batting cage to keep your softball skills intact. Find a league or club that organizes recreational games, rides, clinics and meetings. Staying involved with these activities can keep you motivated, and before you know it, it will be time to head outdoors again.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. First Step: Schedule A Doctor's Visit

Respiratory Therapists Say Plan Now For An Asthma-Free School Year

Getting the kids ready to head back to school is always hectic for parents, but if your child has asthma, respiratory therapists from the American Association for Respiratory Care (AARC) suggest adding a couple of additional items to your "to-do" list.

The first order of business, says AARC member Ed Conway, RRT, clinical manager in the division of respiratory care at Cincinnati Children's Hospital in Ohio, is to schedule a doctor's visit.

"Parents should be sure their child has been seen by their doctor prior to returning to school so they'll be sure they have the right medications and also to get an Asthma Action Plan," Conway said.

Medications – both those that control the disease over the long haul and those that provide quick relief when symptoms get out of hand – can keep kids breathing easy at school.

An Asthma Action Plan provides clear instructions on how to handle escalating symptoms. With the medication list and Asthma Action Plan in hand, parents should then set up a meeting with school personnel.

"Prevention is the key factor with children and asthma," says Conway, and visiting with key adults in the child's life will ensure everyone understands how to keep asthma under control.

The school meeting is also a great place to cover the child's allergies and asthma triggers and come up with a plan to minimize exposure.

"Some of the common allergens that children face at school are inhaled irritants, such as chalk dust, and strong fumes from chemistry labs, perfumes and after shaves, cleaning liquids, and art supplies such as markers and glues," says Conway.

Some kids may have food allergies as well, and classroom pets can also be a problem. "Pets like hamsters or rabbits will have dander from their fur, and their droppings could also cause an asthma episode," Conway said.

Even a simple fish tank can pose problems. "If a classroom has an aquarium there are chances that mold can build up if it is not cleaned frequently."

Exercise-induced asthma can be a issue for kids too, and the registered respiratory therapist says the best strategy here is to have the child use his quick relief medication prior to going to gym class or out on the playing field.

In fact, continues Conway, kids need to have access to their asthma medications at all times, and that's another point to address with school staff. "If the child is not able to carry his medications with him at school, then they should be close by."

Quick access to medications, he continues, can keep asthma symptoms from ever progressing to a full blown asthma attack.

Following these simple steps, says Conway, will pave the way to fewer asthma symptoms during the year and less missed school for kids and work for parents.

Respiratory Therapists (RTs) are specially trained and licensed respiratory health care professionals assisting physicians in diagnosis, treatment, and management of respiratory diseases. RTs provide care in hospitals, outpatient centers, physicians' offices, skilled nursing facilities, and patients' homes.

The American Association for Respiratory Care (AARC) is a not-for-profit, professional organization, consisting of 37,000 respiratory therapists, physicians, and other health care professionals. AARC is dedicated to assisting persons with respiratory diseases receive safe and effective respiratory care.

You can learn much more about childhood asthma and what can be done to ensure it doesn't interfere with your child's life on the AARC's consumer web site, www.YourLungHealth.com.

Community Blood Drive Aug. 22 At Sons Of Italy

The American Red Cross will hold a community blood drive Monday, Aug. 22 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

The summer months are a traditionally challenging time for the American Red Cross Blood Services to collect the 2,000 units of blood needed a day just to meet the basic needs of area patients. People are away on vacation, schools and colleges are not in session, and businesses are understaffed - all factors that inhibit the ability to recruit blood donors or conduct blood drives.

In spite of these challenges, however, the demand for blood continues to be higher than ever and can only be met by caring volunteer blood donors. The difference that a blood donor can make in the life of a patient simply cannot be overstated.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health.

Appointments are strongly encouraged. Call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (800-448-3543) or visit www.newenglandblood.org

Milton Hospital Transfusion Service Earns Accreditation

The Milton Hospital Transfusion Service has been granted accreditation by the American Association of Blood Banks (AABB), according to Jon L. Keller, MD, MPH., Chief of Pathology and medical director of the hospital's clinical laboratory.

Accreditation follows an intensive on-site inspection, performed every other year by specially trained AABB assessors, who document that the level of medical, technical, and administrative performance within the facility meets or exceeds the standards set by the AABB.

AABB accreditation represents an important designation for transfusion medicine services because it demonstrates an organization's commitment to advanced learning, continuous improvement, and innovation by striving to sustain the highest possible level of patient care.

"This level of excellence would not be possible without the daily efforts of all individuals involved in the transfusion service," said Valerie Farretta, Transfusion Service Supervisor.

"Dr. Keller and administrative director Martha Casassa help ensure that our policies and procedures are compatible with both AABB standards and a variety of other state and federal regulations. The professional judgment of the medical staff in determining the need for transfusion, and the clinical monitoring of the patient by nursing staff are critical elements of safe transfusion practice.

"And last but not least, we rely on the hard working medical technologists who always get the job done and often work long hours on a moments notice. Congratulations to all for a job well done," she said.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

THE ROOT CAUSE OF SENSITIVE TEETH

Sometimes sensitive teeth are a symptom of age-related gum recession. This occurs as a result of the tooth root becoming exposed. Because it has a softer surface than the rest of the tooth, it is more vulnerable to heat, cold, or pressure. When this happens, a switch to desensitizing toothpaste can help. This product works by shielding the nerve endings and disrupting the transmission of pain signals from the nerves. The active ingredient in desensitizing toothpaste that makes this possible may either be strontium chloride or potassium nitrate. If a produce with one ingredient does not work to stem tooth sensitivity, a switch to a desensitizing toothpaste with the other active ingredient may be all that is needed.

A dental checkup is first on the agenda to determine if there is evidence of a problem with the tooth. Treatment of the cause is always more effective than treating symptoms. The best time to see your dentist is before you have a problem. The most valuable service we can provide is a thorough and complete examination. Virtually all dental problems – decay, gum disease, jaw joint difficulties and loose teeth – are easily detected in their early stages and can be treated economically and comfortably at that time. We are located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we're currently accepting new patients. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. We offer the services of anesthesiology with a fully trained and qualified anesthesiologist. Visit us on the web at www.quincydentist.com.

P.S. Gum disease, which is so often the cause of tooth sensitivity, should be addressed before problems arise.

SCOTT DEWARE

A Thought For The Week

We all know that it is seldom easy to thoroughly understand another person. In fact, the actions, thoughts, and emotions of others often leave us baffled. We find this to be especially true when they are so contrary to "our way of thinking and doing."

It is a sad fact that many people sometimes go through life misunderstanding associates, friends and family. Much misunderstanding is due to the fact that a few drops of kindly understanding are not allowed to fall into cups that would be brimming with happiness if a little understanding were present. A little understanding can go a long way toward solving most serious situations.

Practically everyone has some right and virtue in his point of view. Resentment flares up if we refuse to accord this right and probability.

Couldn't if be said that attempting to understand, tempered with a great deal of patience and tolerance, can at least prevent the differences in viewpoint from being needlessly distorted and exaggerated?

At least it is a start . . . A worthwhile endeavor . . .

HERE IS A PLEASANT LITTLE GAME that will give you a message every day. It's a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner and check one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Don't gnash those pearly whites because you might have to delay your plans. This could give the Lucky Lamb a better perspective of what's been done, and what still needs doing.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Scoring financial bull's-eyes is easy for the focused Bovine who knows the ins and outs of the marketplace. But even with your success record, caution is still the watchword.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Watch that tendency to over-romanticize a situation that should be given closer scrutiny. Better to be suspicious now and ask for an explanation, or face a sad surprise later.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Bruised self-confidence can make things difficult unless you accept the fact that you have what it takes. Ignore the critics and concentrate on believing in yourself. Good luck.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Congratulations on what you've accomplished. But this is no time to curl up for some serious catnapping. Your rivals are probably already working on plans to overtake your lead.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Your adventurous side wants to play a more dominant role this week, and you might want to oblige. Try to arrange for some get-away time with that special person.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Taking logical approaches to pesky workplace issues can help resolve even long-standing problems. A shift in policy might catch you by surprise. Be alert to signs of change.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Your kindness and compassion are exactly what are needed in dealing with an awkward situation in the early part of the week. Share the weekend fun with family and friends.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Keeping your focus straight and true is a good way of getting your points across. Save any variations for a later time. The musical arts are important this weekend.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Reject advice to cut corners in reaching your goal. Better to take a little more time to do the job as you promised. You'll gain new respect for your honesty and integrity.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) Don't allow a troublesome situation to grow so big that it will be increasingly difficult to deal with. The sooner you speak up, the sooner everyone will be able to benefit.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Confronting someone who is making a lot of mistakes could be the kindest thing you can do both for that person and for anyone who could be adversely affected by the errors.

BORN THIS WEEK: You absolutely glow when you see beautiful things, and everyone around you is warmed by your light.

STEEPLEJACKS CHRIS BURGESS and Bill Doneck of Pembroke look like midgets Monday as they painted at the top of the main steeple of St. John's Church, Quincy Center, some 150 feet in the sky. The cross at the very top was restored and gold-leafed. The two smaller steeples were also painted and the pineapple finials – a symbol of welcome and hospitality – at the top of each were gold-leafed, too. Barry Mulls Appeal, Search To Begin For His Successor

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

As former Quincy College President Sean Barry mulls whether to appeal his termination, the college board of governors will take the first step toward picking his successor on Sept. 12.

Barry is "keeping his options open," on whether to appeal his Aug. 2 termination by the college board, according to his attorney.

But based on the language in Barry's contract, "they are not the greatest options," said Attorney David Cunningham.

"We are keeping our options open," said Cunningham. "It all boils down to Sean and what he wants to do. He hasn't made up his mind yet."

Barry was fired by the college board after allegations surfaced that he mismanaged the college's fundraising foundation. The board voted 8-2 in favor of discharging Barry without any compensation. Only board members Dan Raymondi and Walter White backed him.

Board member Simon Chan, an apparent supporter, did not vote because he had not filed a financial disclosure form by the time of the meeting.

Barry, a 12-year college employee, did not attend the meeting, citing health problems. Recent back surgery left him too ill to show up, according to Cunningham.

Barry's contract affords him no recourse for appeal, although he could appeal the fact he was dismissed without a severance package.

Cunningham said Barry could also file for arbitration based on the results of the meeting. He must file for ar

Mariano Indicates Support

Morrissey Co-sponsors Bill To Have Churches Open Their Books

Asking churches to open their financial books to the public may help restore the Catholic Church's standing in communities, according to Sen. Michael Morrissey.

A lifelong Democrat and Catholic, Morrissey is co-sponsoring legislation that requires all churches to disclose their financial records. Thirty-one other lawmakers have signed on to the legislation, which was filed by Sen. Marian Walsh (D-West Roxbury).

Rep. Ron Mariano expressed initial support for the measure, although he said he wants to take a closer look at the bill before making a firm commitment.

"This appears to be a good idea, because people who make contributions have a right to know where their money is going," he said.

Gov. Mitt Romney indicated Monday he was open to arguments that religious organizations should be subject to the same requirements as charities.

A joint House/Senate committee was expected to hold a hearing on the legislation yesterday (Wednesday).

"The Catholic Church may be the largest charity in the Commonwealth, so we are not asking for anything that we would not ask of other non-profit organizations," said Morrissey. "It's not a matter of being for or against the church."

The bill is opposed by the Archdiocese of Boston and major Protestant denominations in Massachusetts, which contend that the measure would violate the separation of church and state.

Overall, the Catholic Church may benefit from having to open its books to the public, said Morrissey.

Tour Of NQHS Solar Panels Planned For Public Aug. 18

Mass Energy will lead a promotional tour of the solar panels that were installed 14 months ago on the roof of North Quincy High School and have since been turning out 2,700 kilowatt hours of electricity a year.

The tour, open to all, will take place Thursday, Aug. 18, beginning with a visit to the roof panels between 6 and 7 p.m. and following up with an array of expert speakers from 7 to 9 p.m. in the high school auditorium.

The speakers will include an electrician familiar with solar panels as a source of energy, and a representative of the Massachusetts Technology Collaborative's Clear Energy Choice program.

Also on the speaking agenda is Larry Chretien, the former city councillor who is now executive director of the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance.

The object of the tour is to demonstrate to people who may be unaware that the panels are there just what is being done at the school and how the same thing can be done at other schools or programs.

The energy produced by the solar panels at North Quincy High is fed into the Northeast Grid System and returned to the school as part of its regular allotment so power will remain constant even on cloudy days.

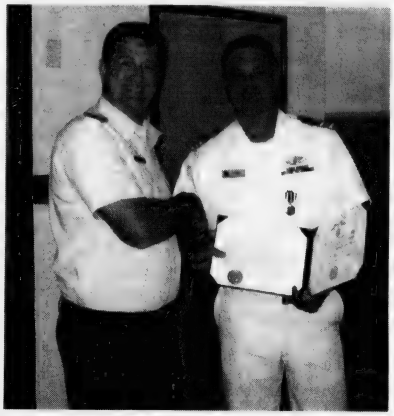
Coast Guard Gives Commendation To Former Quincy Resident

Lt. Cmdr. Michael Hussey Cited For Anti-Terror Work

Former Quincy resident Michael Hussey, a lieutenant commander in the Navy, recently received the U.S. Coast Guard Commendation Medal for his work in boosting the nation's security post-9/11.



Hussey, who grew up in Merrymount, has served as the Officer in Charge (OIC) of a U.S. Navy Tactical Maritime Intelligence Team, supporting the Department of Homeland Security in securing our nation's maritime frontier. He and his team are based in Virginia and have been deployed in several Department of Defense missions in the Atlantic and the Gulf of Mexico.

Hussey's support in this area has been the lynchpin on several operations with the US Coast Guard, according to officials.

Hussey's "dedication, judgment, and devotion to duty are in keeping with the highest traditions of the United States Coast Guard," said Vice Admiral Vivian Crea, Coast Guard Commander, Atlantic Area.

"Lieutenant Commander Hussey's intimate knowledge and command experience are exceptional and invaluable resources to our country and the Navy's post-9/11 maritime defense mission," said Captain Pete O'Brien, the Navy's director of Fleet Forces Command Intelligence.

Hussey called his deployment "challenging," yet essential to the war on terror.

LT. CMDR. Michael Hussey (right) is congratulated by Capt. Daniel A. Laliberte, commander officer of the U.S. Coast Guard Maritime Intelligence Center, after receiving the Coast Guard's Commendation Medal. Hussey, a former Quincy resident, leads a U.S. Navy Tactical Maritime Intelligence team in support of the Department of Homeland Security.

"This deployment was challenging on multiple fronts, and my wife has done a tremendous job holding the fort down," he said of his wife, Sharon. "While our contribution to the overall collective Homeland Security mission may be small, it is significant in the domestic war on terrorism also for those who suffered losses on 9/11."

He is scheduled to return home next week when he is placed on reserve duty.

Hussey lives with his wife and four children in Marshfield.

He is the son of Regina Hussey of Quincy, and the late Paul Hussey, a former Quincy Police officer.

West Quincy Resident Plans Sticker Campaign For Mayor

West Quincy resident Charles Dennehey Jr. said Tuesday he will run a sticker campaign for mayor against incumbent William Phelan.

Dennehey, 57, of 610 Willard St., said he would submit a letter of intention on Wednesday (yesterday) to City Clerk Joseph Shea's office.

Dennehey took out nomination papers for mayor but did not return them before the July 26 deadline. He said foot surgery prevented him from gathering the 50 necessary signatures to qualify for the election.

"People do have a choice," he told The Sun. "My name is out there, people know who I am, and they will know where I stand on the issues."

Dennehey criticized Phelan on several fronts, saying the mayor has failed in his bid to build a new Quincy High School, presided over large property tax hikes, and has allowed the city's streets and sidewalks to fall into disrepair.

"We need a change, and they need someone with common sense," said Dennehey. "Bill Phelan promised a new high school, and where is it?

"Property taxes are through the roof, the streets and sidewalks are deplorable, and what has been done about places like Brewer's Corner?" he asked.

Dennehey, a part-time employee at Quirk Auto Dealerships, said several volunteers are already gearing up to go door knocking and push the sticker campaign.

McGrath Parkway Meeting Aug. 17

A public hearing regarding preliminary design work for the reconstruction of McGrath Parkway will be held Aug. 17 at 7 p.m. in the Thomas Crane Public Library.

This work is part of the Quincy Center Concourse project and is expected to go out to bid in the fall, with construction slated to begin next spring, according to city officials.

The city's designer, Rizzo Associates, will be in attendance to present plans and field questions from the public.

The McGrath Parkway portion of the work includes widening sidewalks, replacing street lights, crosswalks, traffic signals and adding a median.

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Aug. 13, 1521, after a three-month siege, Spanish forces under Hernando Cortés capture Tenochtitlán, the capital of the Aztec empire. Cortés' men leveled the city and captured Cuauhtemoc, the Aztec emperor. Tenochtitlán was founded in 1325 A.D. by a wandering tribe of hunters and gatherers on islands in Lake Texcoco, near present-day Mexico City.

• On Aug. 14, 1935, during the Great Depression, the Social Security Act is passed by Congress. The bill mandated the now familiar "contributory system" in which workers put part of their salaries into a joint pension fund.

• On Aug. 8, 1945, in the final days of World War II, the Soviet Union officially declares war on Japan, pouring more than 1 million soldiers into Japanese-occupied Manchuria in northeastern China.

• On Aug. 10, 1954, workers at the Studebaker factory in South Bend, Ind., agree to take a pay cut to help the struggling company. Despite the agreement, which trimmed workers' salaries from $20 to $12 an hour, Studebaker soon went belly-up.

• On Aug. 11, 1965, in the predominantly black Watts neighborhood of Los Angeles, racial tension reaches a breaking point after two white policemen scuffle with a black motorist suspected of drunken driving. The incident touched off five days of rioting that left 34 dead, 1,032 injured, nearly 4,000 arrested and $40 million worth of property destroyed.

• On Aug. 12, 1973, golfer Jack Nicklaus wins the PGA championship for his 14th major title, surpassing Bobby Jones' record of 13 major championships. The "Golden Bear" shot a 7-under-par 277 at Canterbury Golf Club in Beachwood, Ohio.

• On Aug. 9, 1985, Arthur Walker, a retired U.S. Navy officer, is found guilty of espionage for passing top-secret documents to his brother, John, who then passed them to Soviet agents. Walker was sentenced to life in prison and fined $250,000.

Phelan Has Come A Long Way

You could say Mayor William Phelan has come a long way politically in just four years.

And may have a long way to go yet.

He was a virtual unknown in 2001 when he decided to challenge James Sheets, one of Quincy's all-time political giants.

PHELAN

Sheets had been elected to an historic six terms as mayor, half of them unopposed.

He was considered unbeatable by most observers and mayoral hopefuls shied away from battle. The only way anyone was going to get Jim Sheets out of City Hall was with dynamite, some jested.

SHEETS

When Sheets announced for a seventh term in 2001, no challenger stirred in the city council.

But one did in the school committee.

Phelan, a political newcomer in only his second year on the school committee, stepped forward as an underdog contender.

He made the controversial proposed Quincy Ave. site for the new Quincy High School a campaign issue.

Phelan stunned the city, defeating Sheets by a scant 17 votes in the closest mayoral race in the city's history and one of its biggest political upsets.

There was also an interesting footnote: he was the first mayor in 79 years not to have served in the city council where Quincy's mayors have traditionally been baptized.

And this year, another footnote: seeking a third term, he will be only the fourth mayor in the city's history to be re-elected unopposed. Four potential challengers — none with a major political name — had nomination papers but did not file them. One may run on stickers.

The first free ride went to Thomas Burgin in 1940; the second to Frank McCauley in 1983 and three to Sheets in 1991, 1993 and 1997.

From virtual unknown, to upsetting one of the city's all-time political powers, to a free ride to a third term is definitely a long way to come in four years.

Phelan indicated in the past that he has no intentions of making a career out of being mayor of Quincy or trying to match Sheets' six terms.

He seemed to be thinking three terms would be long enough.

But now, some around City Hall are wondering if he might consider a fourth term.

The fact is, he likes being mayor. And when you like a job, it's hard to leave it.

There's the prestige that goes with being mayor. The power. The everyday challenge. The opportunity to do what you think is best for your city. And doing it your way. Even if it means a few skirmishes or battles along the way.

Phelan has his own style and personality. He's a hands-on mayor running the show. He's not the buddy-buddy type.

Like mayors before him, he has his fans — and his critics.

The critics, for example, point to higher taxes. And the fact that the proposed new Quincy High School which was an issue in the 2001 election, is still an issue four years later. And, they say, a lot of good, talented people have left City Hall since Phelan moved in.

His fans and supporters say his political inexperience showed in the early months of his first term but that he has definitely grown with the job.

They point to his accomplishments and goals:

Putting the city in healthy financial shape. Increasing the school budget. Securing acres of precious open space. Beautifying the city. His roadbuilding program now underway. The ambitious plan to revitalize the downtown area which include 15-story buildings. And his goal to extend the Quincy Center concourse across Hancock St. to Southern Artery.

He sounds and acts like a mayor with enough on his plate that a fourth term would be needed to see it all completed.

There's speculation he has higher political aspirations but he dismisses it as just that — speculation. And says he loves being mayor.

However, some City Hall observers still think he might be interested in district attorney if incumbent Bill Keating runs for attorney general. And some feel he could be thinking higher. Like lieutenant governor.

The lieutenant governor rumor doesn't seem to make too much sense if they are talking about next year's state election.

State Treasurer Tim Cahill will be running for re-election. Two Quincy candidates on the same ballot would be quite unlikely from both a geographical and political standpoint.

CAHILL

Where and how far Phelan's political career takes him, remains to be seen.

But again, whether you are a supporter or critic, he has come a long way in just four years. And at age 45, still has a lot of time to go a lot further.

But you always have to keep an eye out for one of those political unknowns who come along every now and then and suddenly changes the landscape.

Community Blood Drive Aug. 22 At Sons Of Italy

The American Red Cross will hold a community blood drive Monday, Aug. 22 from 1 to 7 p.m. at the Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St., Quincy.

The summer months are a traditionally challenging time for the American Red Cross Blood Services to collect the 2,000 units of blood needed a day just to meet the basic needs of area patients. People are away on vacation, schools and colleges are not in session, and businesses are understaffed - all factors that inhibit the ability to recruit blood donors or conduct blood drives.

In spite of these challenges, however, the demand for blood continues to be higher than ever and can only be met by caring volunteer blood donors. The difference that a blood donor can make in the life of a patient simply cannot be overstated.

In order to give blood, potential donors must be at least 17 years of age, weigh at least 110 pounds and be in good health.

Appointments are strongly encouraged. Call 1-800-GIVE-LIFE (800-448-3543) or visit www.newenglandblood.org

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1920's postcard view of Quincy Square showing the old Bethany Congregational Church on the site of today's Bank of America building. The tree would be in the doorway of Rogers Jewelry Store. Trolley tracks ran down what is now Christmas Island in the middle of Hancock Street. On the right the peaked roof was the top of the Greenleaf Hotel. The roof was destroyed by fire and never replaced. The three-story Greenleaf building remains there today. Also on the right is the barely discernible marquee of the Alhambra Theater. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Christian Faith Community Of Squantum Reborn

The Christian faith community of Squantum has been reborn! This familial community, which felt the stinging pain of death on Oct. 24 of last year, is now alive and well, and destined to grow stronger than ever.

Symbolically resurrected on Easter Sunday of this year, Star of the Sea church in Squantum was officially reopened by Boston Archbishop Sean Patrick O'Malley on July 17. The opening Mass, complete with cantors and piano accompaniment, was a welcome celebration for those who "packed the house" - many of whom has lost hope in a flawed process.

Although our house of worship has been reopened for one Sunday Mass, the work of the Friends of Star of the Sea is not over.

We will continue outreach to Archbishop O'Malley, in order to convince him that, because Squantum has a very stable Catholic population and because Squantum is a village, there ought to be a sacramental presence at Star of the Sea for weddings, funerals and baptisms.

May the intercession of Our Lady of Good Counsel conclude this reconfiguration process in a spirit of wisdom and compassion.

Do You Think Your Property Is Safe?

I recently inherited property in Quincy that my grandmother purchased in 1926. It has been passed down through the generations. Each era has responsibly paid property taxes in a timely manner, no matter how outrageously they have increased. It is appalling that the U.S. Supreme Court in Kelo vs. City of New London, CT allowed the city to rob the owner of private property by eminent domain for private development.

When a government has the almighty power to take anything it wants on a whim, is that not communism? Why are troops fighting in Iraq for democracy when our federal government isn't practicing what it preaches?

Do you think your property is safe? Think again. The State of Massachusetts needs to ensure hard working people do not lose what they have toiled to obtain. Governor Romney needs to pass state laws to protect homeowners against unscrupulous politicians out to make a buck at your expense.

Contact Governor Romney at the State House, Room 360, Boston, MA 02133. Call him at 617-725-4005. Do it now, before it is too late.

Quincy's Yesterdays

City Whoops It Up On V-J Day

This Week
60 Years Ago

Official Quincy was shut down for two days in response to President Truman's call for a holiday observance of V-J Day, marking the end of three and a half years of war against Japan in the Pacific.

Church bells pealed, cars with honking horns jammed Quincy Square, City Hall and the Fore River Shipyard closed down for two days and City Councillor Carl Anderson and Guy Faiella organized an impromptu parade in Quincy Point.

A few barrooms were closed after the celebration erupted into fist fights and eight persons were treated at City Hospital for holiday mishaps but Quincy residents generally behaved themselves during the holiday.

"Never before has Quincy seen such spontaneous enthusiasm with so little vandalism," said Police Capt. George W. Fallon.

Perhaps the feeling in Quincy was best expressed by Bruno Ranieri, a Quincy Point grocer and veteran of World War I, when he said, "Very nice. It means my two sons will be coming home."

The three sons of Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Whitman of 56 West Elm Ave., Wollaston, already were home to the surprise and delight of their parents.

Cpl. H. Rowan, 24, Cpl. William H., 21, and Seaman Vernon C., 20, sat down to family dinner together with mother, father and sister Alice for the first time since June 3, 1942.

Meanwhile, the Navy Department ordered work on the heavy cruisers USS Northhampton, Cambridge, Bridgeport and Kansas City haltered at the Bethlehem Fore River Shipyard where they were calculated to be from 21 to 54 percent completed.

"The immediate effect in the next month or two will be relatively minor with the exception of the structural trades," said William H. Collins, who was in charge of Bethlehem's Boston district. Some 20,000 men were working at the shipyard.

Mathewson Machine Works in North Quincy laid off about 200 of the 350 men working in its shops due to the cancellations of war contracts to build outboard motors for the Navy's landing craft.

Nancy's Scallop Surprise

If you love scallops the way our family does, you will absolutely go crazy over this recipe from our daughter Nancy. She invited my husband and I over for dinner last week, and what a delicious combination she prepared with scallops.

With a business to run and husband and family to feed, she likes to prepare simple entrees as today's recipe will show you.

Scallop Surprise

1 1/2 pounds large scallops
2 cloves garlic (chopped)
2 tablespoons olive oil
2 tablespoons butter
2 cups fresh spinach (chopped)
3/4 cup chicken stock
smidgen of flour for thickening
1 pound linguine (or favorite pasta) parmesan cheese for topping juice of half lime (her secret ingredient)

In hot oil and butter, sauté the garlic, add the scallops and cook for a couple of minutes. Add the chicken stock and the spinach and cook until spinach is wilted. At this point add a little flour to thicken the sauce just a bit. Add the cooked pasta and when this is all blended together add the juice of half a lime over the top. This juice gives such a different taste that makes the dish super. Sprinkle the parmesan cheese on top and serve.

P.S. You certainly can cut down on the amount of scallops and cook accordingly.

'Jaws' Is Shown Under The Stars

The movie was presented by Mayor William Phelan and the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission.

Marlo Tersigni Graduates Lawrence Academy

Marlo Tersigni recently graduated from Lawrence Academy during the school's 212th commencement exercises in Groton, Mass.

Tersigni earned a place on the academic honor roll for two terms, one of them her final spring term, which she achieved while enrolled in an Advanced Placement class in environmental science.

Her career in varsity athletics included four seasons each of field hockey and lacrosse and three seasons of skiing. She served as a captain of this year's field hockey team that, with a 14-1-1 record, earned its second consecutive year at the New England Class C tournament and lost in the semifinals.

As a member of the ski team, she was recognized in her sophomore year as the team's Most Improved Player.

Tersigni enjoyed her team's 13-5 lacrosse season this spring, one of the best records in its history. An avid lacrosse player, she competed off campus as well as on, participating in the Bay State Games in the summer of 2004.

MARLO TERSIGNI

She also attended the Team Revolution developmental program for dedicated lacrosse athletes.

Tersigni appeared on the Lawrence Academy stage in the one-act Voir Dire and performed her original choreography in a dance concert last fall.

In her final appearance as a dancer this spring, she co-choreographed and performed a duet entitled "Paradox."

During her senior Winterim, a two-week experiential learning session that takes place every March, Tersigni participated in volunteer efforts in the Dominican Republic, working with the people of a Haitian community to construct recreational facilities. In previous Winterims, she kayaked, bicycled, and hiked from coast to coast in Baja, Mexico; traveled from the rainforest to the coral reefs of Honduras, where she used her scuba diving skills to study the marine life with professionals at the Roatan Institute of Marine Science; and studied photography as a means to illustrate emotions and ideas.

Tersigni also participated in the school's government, serving as a class officer for three years, as well as serving terms on the Student Government and Faculty-Student Senate. She supported the student community as a peer counselor during her senior year and was also president of the Spanish Club.

The daughter of Michael Tersigni of Quincy and Mary Aframe of Worcester, Tersigni plans to attend Goucher College in the fall.

Joseph Keegan Candidate For School Committee

Joseph Keegan of 21 Moreland Rd. announces his candidacy for school committee.

Keegan graduated from North Quincy High School in 1989. Upon graduation, he enlisted in the U.S. Army as an infantryman where he served 10 years in both an active and reserve capacity. Keegan served his country in both Operation Desert Shield and Operation Desert Storm and was deployed in Saudi Arabia, Kuwait and Iraq.

After returning home, Keegan attended Quincy College and graduated with a Bachelor's degree in Criminal Justice.

In 1994, Keegan became an MBTA police officer after graduating from the Boston Police Academy. He served as an MBTA police officer for three years before being hired as a Quincy Police officer in 1996 by then-Mayor James Sheets.

Keegan served as a Quincy Police officer for eight years and was awarded a City Council commendation for his efforts in helping to save a drowning woman from Quincy Bay. Then-Police Chief William Falco said of the incident, "He put his safety aside in this heroic rescue."

While serving as a Quincy Police officer, Keegan attended the New England School of Law where he was selected to write for the Journal of Criminal and Civil Confinement, and was the recipient of the Mark Charbonnier Scholarship.

Keegan left the police department in 2004 to pursue a career as a private practice attorney, and to help those in need who cannot afford an attorney. He opened Keegan & Flanagan LLP, which is located at 1495 Hancock St. in Quincy.

JOSEPH KEEGAN

"It has been very rewarding to be able to work for myself and truly help people who need it," said Keegan.

Keegan said some of the most pressing issues facing the school committee including keeping class sizes small while providing teachers and students the necessary resources, improving the overall education system while keeping children safe and pushing for the construction of a new Quincy High School.

"While there is a good education foundation in place we need to improve upon that and make Quincy a model school system where everyone is able to get an excellent education," he said.

Keegan said he is undertaking an aggressive door-knocking campaign and hopes to meet as many people as possible.

"One of the most things we can do for our children, teachers, and taxpayers is to start construction on Quincy High School and be sure to guarantee ourselves the 90 percent reimbursement that the state has guaranteed us," he said.

Keegan is planning to hold a campaign kickoff event in the next few weeks. For more information call Keegan at 617-472-7083 or email jkeegan66@hotmail.com.

South Shore Hospital, Mass. Medical Society Honor WJDA 1300 For Public Service

The monthly, live program about selected healthcare and medical issues broadcast as one of WJDA's "Party Line" programs, the station's Monday-through-Friday call-in talk show hosted by Joe Catalano, WJDA program director.

The physicians each presented station owner Jay Asher and program director Joe Catalano citations on behalf of their respective organizations, thanking them for their continuing role in educating their listeners about key topics in health and medical care.

In part, the citations read "On behalf of our physicians and their patients, the Massachusetts Medical Society and South Shore Hospital express their recognition and gratitude to WJDA President Jay Asher and Program Director Joe Catalano for your willingness, enthusiasm, and dedication in improving the healthcare of Massachusetts citizens."

It has covered a wide range of topics, including health literacy, end of life care, Alzheimer's and Parkinson's diseases, geriatric medicine, allergies and respiratory disease, emergency medicine, fitness and preventive health, infectious disease and noise and hearing loss.

$700,000 Raised By Purchasing 'Hero Bands'

Stop & Shop Customers Supporting The Troops

Customers of Stop & Shop and Giant Food stores are supporting the troops.

In a little more than a month, customers at Stop & Shop and Giant stores have raised more than $700,000 to aid wounded veterans who served in Iraq or Afghanistan during the War on Terror.

They have purchased more than 350,000 "Hero Bands" wristbands emblazoned with the American Flag motif. Costing $2 each, the bands promote awareness of American soldiers wounded in both Iraq or Afghanistan.

All proceeds from Hero Band sales will go to the Coalition to Salue America's Heroes, a non-profit organization providing aid to severely wounded War on Terror veterans. Funds will aid veterans in the states where Stop & Shop and Giant operate.

"These soldiers have given so much to us, and we're very fortunate to have the opportunity to give back," said Marc Smith, president and CEO of Stop & Shop/Giant. "These brave men and women, some of them now disabled, are trying to lead a normal life back home. Whenever customers purchase a Hero Band, they are helping to make that happen."

Hero Bands are still available at all Stop & Shop and Giant stores in Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Connecticut, New York, Maryland, Virginia, Delaware and Washington, D.C.

Donations collected will provide disability-adapted homes for war heroes, emergency financial aid, family support services, job training, and placement services, and annual recovery conferences. Hero Bands can also be purchased at the Coalition to Salute America's Heroes web site, www.saluteheroes.org.

Quincy August Moon Festival Aug. 21 At President's Plaza

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) will host the 18th Annual August Moon Festival at President's Plaza, Quincy Ave., on Sunday, Aug. 21 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Planned activities include vendor exhibitions, performances of Asian music and dance, games and activities for children and seniors, and there will also be a raffle highlighted by prizes including domestic and international airline tickets. The festival is a free event, everyone is welcome.

"The festival has grown as the Asian community in Quincy has grown. We are happy to feature many Asian cultures at the event; every year there is something different for people to enjoy" said Gene Lee, the Event co chair. "We are also happy to feature many Quincy entertainers."

This year's event will showcase talents from different communities. For the first time the popular Gund Kwok Asian Women's Lion Dance Troupe will be joining the festival. In addition, contributing to the events will be Samuri Taiko and Japanese Drumming and Martial Arts, Dance Philippines, Eastern Rhythms, performing Indian classical and folk dances and Korean and Chinese Martial Arts Groups. A highlight of the festival will be the fashion show performed by the North Quincy High School Asian Culture Club.

Organizers this year added performances for those individuals interested in Chinese Opera and Karaoke. A second stage will provide an opportunity for local groups to share their talents with the audience. Additionally, guests are also invited to debut their singing voices during the time allotted for karaoke.

In the spirit of the harvest moon, festival goers this year will also be receiving samples of traditional Moon cake and free gifts from two of the grand sponsors, Expressway Toyota and Mohegan Sun/ Sunshine Travel. The third grand sponsor, Kam Man Marketplace will offer food samples and gift coupons for its new store.

"Our Grand Sponsors and the City of Quincy have provided invaluable support to the festival", said John Brothers, co-chair of the festival and Executive Director of Quincy Asian Resources. "They have established themselves as the business community's leading supporters of QARI's mission to serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American Community."

August Moon is the second biggest holiday in China and also one of Chinese's most favorite traditional holidays. No matter who is working far away from home, as the August Moon is approaches, Chinese family members return home and to gather together to celebrate August Moon. Therefore, August Moon also called a family reunion holiday. QARI is very honored for the opportunity to host this special event again.

"Quincy is a multiethnic and a multi-cultural community, we hope that the celebration of this Asian holiday will open the doors for non Asian people residing in Quincy to understand more about Asian traditional cultures and also to participate in them," Brothers said.

As in previous years, sponsors and volunteers are essential to the success of an event. QARI's goal is to build partnerships with these organizations, businesses and individuals in the future. The cooperative relationships give QARI opportunities to offer important projects such as multilingual Information and Referral services, a Cultural Competency Program with the Quincy Medical Center, English for Living and Employment, Computer Classes, and the Lunar New Year Festival and August Moon Festivals to the community.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community and aim to benefit the entire community. The organization has staff and volunteers fluent in English, Cantonese, Mandarin and Toisanese.

For more information about the QARI's programs and projects or the festival, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.qari.info.

PERFORMANCES OF ASIAN music and dance will be among the attractions featured at the 18th annual August Moon Festival Sunday, Aug. 21 from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at President's Plaza on Quincy Ave. The event will be hosted by the Kam Man Marketplace.

Brian McNamee Candidate For Ward 6 Council Seat

BRIAN McNAMEE

Brian McNamee announces his candidacy for the open Ward 6 seat being vacated by Alicia Gardner.

McNamee, the 25-vote runner-up to Gardner in the 2003 Ward 6 race, is the Chief Financial Officer for the South Essex Sewer District. McNamee is also a member of the Quincy Zoning Board of Appeals, appointed by Mayor William Phelan last year.

McNamee's decision to run comes after Gardner's July 26 public announcement that she was not seeking a second term because her husband has been diagnosed with a serious heart ailment.

"No one wants to enter a political race under these circumstances," said McNamee. "My thoughts and prayers are with the Gardner family, we all hope for Billy's speedy recovery."

Gardner's announcement was made the same day nomination papers were due for the fall elections. Despite learning about the announcement at 2:30 p.m., McNamee was able to submit more than 175 nominating signatures by the 5 p.m. deadline.

McNamee has already outlined his political platform, which emphasizes community control and input over traffic and development, stabilization of real estate taxes, street and sidewalk repairs, and preservation of open space.

McNamee is a graduate of Villanova University with a Bachelor of Arts degree in Government. In addition, McNamee has an MBA in Accounting & Finance from the University of Massachusetts at Boston.

McNamee's community affiliations include the Atlantic Neighborhood Association, Knights of Columbus Council 2259, Quincy Elks Lodge 943, Irish Cultural Center, Quincy Environmental Network, and the Quincy Citizens & Wollaston Park Association, Inc.

Professional affiliations include the Massachusetts Government Finance Officers Association, UMass/Boston's College of Management Advisory Board, the Association of Government Accountants, and the Board of Technical Advisors for Integrated Financial Transactions Services, Inc.

The public is invited to meet Brian on Wednesday, Aug. 17 from 6 to 9 p.m. at the Best Western Adams Inn, Hancock St. Questions can be directed to the Committee to Elect Brian McNamee at 617-770-0678 or via email at brian@brianmcnamee.org.

Brady Sullivan Properties Launches New West Quincy Condominium Development

Brady Sullivan Properties, New Hampshire's leading real estate agency for condominium development, announces its most recent condominium conversion in Quincy is complete and units are available for sale.

The property, The Condominium at Brae Well, 230 Willard St., offers two-bedroom units starting at $220,000.

"The Condominium at Brae Well is a tremendous value in this usually high-priced market," said Arthur W. Sullivan, principal and partner of Brady Sullivan Properties. "We still continue to seek out properties in Massachusetts that have the potential to be effectively and efficiently converted into condominiums — with the greater goal of helping more Massachusetts renters to become first-time homeowners."

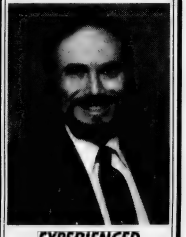
Originally built in 1988, the building is eight stories high, offering views of the Boston skyline. Amenities available include fully remodeled common areas; an Internet-based camera security system (with memory); central air conditioning; washer/dryer hookup in units; exercise and billiard room; plenty of on-site parking; a pet-friendly environment; and quick access to I-93 and the Quincy Adams T station on the Red Line.

New owners have the option of upgrading their units with cherry cabinets, stainless steel appliances, granite countertops, Berber carpets and hardwood floors.

Because the property was converted from apartments to condominiums, existing tenants may choose to buy their unit or eventually move to another location.

According to Massachusetts General Laws, Chapter 527, tenants choosing not to buy their units have one year to vacate the building, or until the lease expires, whichever is longer, before being required to move. If the unit is occupied by a handicapped or elderly tenant, or one of a low or moderate income, the period of notice should not be less than two years from the date of receipt of the notification. The burden of proving qualifications with respect to age, handicap and income rests with the tenant. Chapter 527 further identifies tenant rights to relocation benefits, dependent on a variety of factors.

"We know it is often difficult for tenants to find a new place to live, should they decide they cannot purchase their unit, so we are trying to do our part to help with relocation," Sullivan said. "For example, we're offering some cash incentives to help with moving expenses and are striking a deal with moving companies for discounted or free services for those relocating."



The Condominium at Brae Well has an on-site sales office open daily from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Or interested parties can call 617-774-0450 to speak to the property broker, Patricia Simpson.

Morrissey Co-sponsors Bill To Have Churches Open Their Books

"This may serve the church well and restore confidence in people's minds," he said. "People don't want to get into the day-to-day business of the church, but they want to know where their money is going and where it is being spent.

"I would welcome the scrutiny if I wasn't doing anything wrong," he said.

The legislation would force the Catholic Archdiocese and all other religious organizations to file annual financial reports and a list of real estate holdings with the state Attorney General's public charities division.

Morrissey said the concept of financial disclosure is particularly important now that the Catholic Church is selling properties worth millions of dollars.

"People have a right to know the value of a property and what the church received for the sale of that property," he said. "This is nothing radical - it is something that other non-profits like the United Way and the Salvation Army must do."

In a related story, Secretary of State William Galvin has filed an administrative complaint regarding the Catholic Church's use of monies earmarked for its Perpetual Care Fund. According to state law, all cemeteries must utilize a fund earmarked for the continued upkeep of grave sites and cemetery grounds.

A portion of funds from the purchase of burial plots is supposed to be used for the continued upkeep of a particular cemetery and its grave sites.

But according to Galvin, the church should have approximately $17 million in its fund, but only $4 million can be documented.

Galvin said it is possible that the church has been siphoning off monies from the Perpetual Care Fund to other entities within the church.

"We have been doing quite a lot of research on this issue and it appears that quite a few cemeteries in the area have problems," said Galvin. "This is a very important issue because people who buy graves expect their graves to be cared for," he said.

Galvin said the Catholic Church has been unresponsive to his requests for more information about the fund.

To Expand Membership

Quincy Municipal Credit Union Granted Community Charter

The Quincy Municipal Credit Union Board of Directors at a recent special meeting voted for a by-law change that would expand its present operating charter.

With recent approval from the Massachusetts Banking Commissioner, the credit union has begun offering membership to any person and any of their family members who reside or are employed in the communities of Norfolk County, Plymouth County and Dorchester.

As a result of the charter expansion, Quincy Municipal Credit Union's name will change to Quincy Credit Union to reflect its roots and primary geographical location. The name change is expected to take place Aug. 15.

"These amendment changes pave the way for the Credit Union to continue to build on its solid foundation," said Chairman of the Board, Paul O'Connell. "The adoption of these measures allows the credit union to serve generations to come."

Quincy Municipal Credit Union was founded in 1937 and currently serves over 19,000 members.

New Owners Plan Changes In Victory Super Market

Hannaford Brothers of Scarborough, Maine, the new owners of the Victory Super Market, have launched plans for major renovations and improvements to the North Quincy store.

"Over the next several weeks, customers will see many changes and upgrades to the store, including the addition of Hannaford branded products and hundreds of new items," said Victory Vice President and General Manager Rick Meyerkopf.

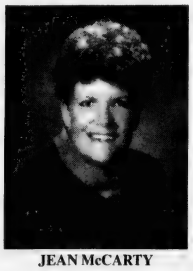
"Additional changes to the store's interior will include signage, cases and shelving, designed to provide customers with better information."

Renovations will feature the addition of a Nature's Place Department, Hannaford's natural and organic food department, which offers a variety of products ranging from juice and cereal to lotions and vitamins and including products for the allergy sensitive.

A large salad bar will be added and the wine offering will be expanded. Customers will also see new tables and fixtures in the bakery that will give the area a whole new look.

"One thing that will remain the same is that customers can expect to receive he same exceptional service from the people they know and rely on," said Meyerkopf.

"We have been actively promoting our 'no cards, no gimmicks, no hassles' message. What this means to customers is that they can receive low prices that stay low week after week so that they don't have to stock up, clip coupons, or run around town comparing prices."



"This remodel will allow us to provide our customers with additional products, conveniences and services," said Store Manager Steve Beane.

"By adding these new sections and expanding our offering, we hope to better serve our customers in the area. I'm sure the customers and associates will really enjoy the results."

Hannaford Bros. Co. operates 144 supermarkets and food and drug combination stores in Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, New York and Massachusetts, employing more than 24,000 associates.

FIRE SAFETY

by Captain Tom Lyons
Fire Prevention Bureau
Quincy Fire Department

Check Out The Exits At Hotels, Motels

Well summer's fully upon us while I'll leave you with a couple of thoughts before returning again in September.

I've written to you about grill safety so you're well prepared for a safe summer of outdoor grill use. Though I can't help much with the quality of your cooking, I have in the past recommended safe procedures when using grills! Please supervise children around a heated grill and never use gasoline to ignite charcoal.

I've written about fueling your boat at marine fueling facilities. The waterways are my favorite while I frequently remind myself of their pitfalls as well. Boating requires a great deal of common sense and can become quite hazardous if taken for granted. Respect the water, equip yourselves with all the safety gear your boat requires and have the best summer out there yet.

I urged you to leave the fireworks to the professionals on the Fourth of July and enjoy some of the statewide displays and avoid a potential tragedy with illegal fireworks.

I have also advised you that open burning of leaves and other materials is not allowed.

One last suggestion and not one typically considered: Whenever the family and I arrive for an overnight stay at a hotel, motel or guest house, I make a point of scouting out the premise to determine exit locations. My wife is used to me coming back into the room and sharing my pre-fire evacuation plan. I'm not quite certain she actually listens while I believe she's content knowing emergency arrangements have been made if needed.

As I have said so often, the time to prepare for an emergency isn't during one. Take the time to examine your evacuation options while lodging at a resort.

I write these and sometimes wonder if it appears that I'm always anticipating a tragedy. Don't forget my job is to attempt to minimize as many potentially tragic scenarios as time and energy allow, before they can manifest. The fact is, I'm a true believer in doing what's within your control, and letting the rest happen. Prepare for a great, safe summer, and leave plenty of lighthearted thought to enjoy it.

Susan Schroepfer Honored As 'Home Healthcare Hero' By Boston VNA

The Visiting Nurse Association of Boston (VNAB), the oldest and one of the largest providers of home healthcare and hospice services in Greater Boston, recently honored Susan Schroepfer of Quincy for her outstanding dedication to home healthcare and to the VNAB.

Schroepfer was recognized, along with 40 of her colleagues, for continued employment of at least 20 years with the VNAB. She will celebrate her 20th anniversary with the VNAB later this year.

During the ceremony at Nurses Hall in the State House, Joanne Handy, President and Chief Executive Officer of the Visiting Nurse Association of Boston, presented Schroepfer with a certificate proclaiming her as a "hero in home healthcare" as part of the "120 Heroes in Home Healthcare" campaign. The Campaign, which kicked off in April, will honor a total of 120 "heroes" at a series of events throughout the year, culminating in a formal 120th Anniversary Gala next winter.

SUSAN SCHROEPFER

"As home healthcare nurses, we practice a very personal, and often challenging, aspect of patient care by providing treatment in our patients' homes, regardless of illness, income or insurance," said Handy. "The level of continuous devotion demonstrated by VNAB clinicians and staff, is unequaled, and we are extremely proud to recognize that devotion as part of the '120 Heroes in Home Healthcare' campaign."

The Visiting Nurse Association of Boston is a non-profit, community-based, home health care agency, committed to providing residents of Greater Boston and surrounding communities with care that will maximize their health, independence and quality of life regardless of illness, income or insurance.

15-Year-Olds Go 2-2 In New England Regionals

The Quincy Babe Ruth 15-year-olds posted a 2-2 record in last weekend's New England Regionals in Salem, N.H., to come up short in its quest for a trip to the World Series in Louisiana.

"We had a great season," said manager Frank Totten. "I'm proud of all the kids. They really have an attitude of never giving up when they're down. The core of the team has been together since they were 8 years old. So its kind of a great way to end their last year of Babe Ruth."

Quincy opened the tourney last Friday with a 3-2 victory over Connecticut and dropped a 2-1 heartbreaker to Worcester the following day. On Sunday, it rebounded with a 3-1 win over Portsmouth before being ousted by eventual champion Connecticut, 12-2.

Quincy won its third straight district championship in South Boston to qualify for the state tournament, where it finally captured the elusive trophy. Catcher Tom Conley was named MVP of the state tournament.

Quincy's season isn't over as it now focuses its attention on the playoffs in the Suburban League.

This year's title capped Manning's 10-year career of coaching youth baseball, softball and basketball in Quincy. He is moving and is thanked for his dedication to the youth of Quincy and is wished well in his future coaching endeavors.

Davis Club County Champs

10-And-Under Softball

Davis Club, Quincy's 10-and-under travel softball team, recently captured the Norfolk County Girls Softball League championship.

The team capped off a tremendous season by cruising through the playoffs, winning three straight games en route to the title.

In the championship game, Davis Club pulled out a 3-1 victory over Norwood as strong defense kept them in the game.

In the fourth inning, Sara Ryan's unassisted double play snuffed a Norwood scoring threat. In the fifth, another rally was turned away when Erin Richardson fielded a bunt and threw to second baseman Sam Briody covering first to end the inning with a runner on third.

Quincy trailed 1-0 until the bottom of the sixth. With one out, Richardson came through with her biggest hit of the year, doubling down the left field line to score Molly Meehan and Meredith Durham (single) with the tying and go-ahead runs. Ryan drove home Richardson to make it 3-1.

In the last inning, Milton had runners on second and third with one out. But ace pitcher Nicole Parry stepped up big, striking out the final two hitters to lead her team to the championship.

In the semi-finals, Davis Club defeated rival Milton, 6-3. Milton had knocked Quincy out of last year's tourney in the semis and had also handed Quincy its only loss this season.

Quincy got on the board first. Liz Kelly led off with a double and came around to score on groundouts by Caroline Kelly and Jacki Hughes. In the third, Ryan knocked home Steph DiPietro (single) for a 2-0 lead.

In the fourth, Emma Ainsley led off with a walk and Liz Kelly, Caroline Kelly, Hughes and Briody singled to produce four more runs.

Parry held the strong Milton batters hitless through the first five innings. In the sixth, Milton scored three runs and had the bases loaded with one out before Parry dug deep and struck out the next two batters to preserve the 6-3 lead.

In the final inning, with Liz Kelly pitching in relief of Parry, Milton loaded the bases again with no outs. After a popup to third baseman Rachel Selbert, the defense refused to bend. The next batter hit a scorching grounder to Ainsley at short, who fielded it cleanly and fired home to Richardson for the force. Liz Kelly finished off the emotional victory with a strikeout to advance her team to the finals.

Davis Club started its playoff run with an impressive display of power and defense in its 19-4 home victory over Newton. With the bases loaded, Ryan's fielding of a smoking line drive turned a possible Newton grand slam into an unassisted double play that scored none.

The next inning, Caroline Kelly's hustling catch of a soft liner in right field turned into another double play when she smartly threw to the heady Hughes covering first before the runner could get back.

Both Richardson and Ryan scored three times while Erin Chiocchio delivered the knockout blow with a two-run triple. Richardson ended the game with flair by fielding the final popup on her knees from the catcher position.

The players and coaches thanked their sponsor, city councillor Jay Davis, Mary and Kyle Ainsley for the work they put into the team and league, and the parents.

VICTORIA VIRTUE, formerly of Quincy, helped the Assabet Valley girls hockey team win the 12 and Under Girls National Hockey Championship in Centennial, Colo. The team went undefeated during the season and won the state championship. The girls also took home the trophy in the Westborough League, where they were the only girls in the league. Accompanying Virtue and her family to Colorado was her grandmother, Ann Connolly of Quincy.

BJ's Charity Championship Ends In Thrilling Tie

WOMEN'S GOLF

The twosomes of Jan Stephenson and Cindy Rarick, and Pat Bradley and Patty Sheehan shared the title at the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship presented by OLAY after play was called due to darkness following five playoff holes Sunday evening at Granite Links Golf Club.

In a thrilling finish, filled with outstanding shots on both sides, each team birdied the 484-yard par-5 18th on each of the five playoff holes. Without any light remaining, the teams were declared co-champions of the Women's Senior Golf Tour and will share a first-place prize of $50,000.

"It was so exciting," Rarick said. "There was just no give-up for anyone out there. That's the great thing about this tour. That's what it's all about: Just being out there and fighting for it."

Bradley and Sheehan, New England natives and LPGA Hall of Famers, started the day three strokes behind Rarick and Stephenson but forced the playoff by shooting a 61 and getting to 17-under par in Sunday's scramble format.

The playoff offered plenty of highlights. On the first, Bradley got up-and-down out of a greenside bunker. On the third playoff hole, Rarick drained a nine-foot putt to extend the match. On the fifth, competitors went back to the black tees, and both were able to get up-and-down from off the green.

"It would have been tough to see a loser because there was so much great play," said Bradley, a Westford native.

With the shared victory, Stephenson and Sheehan became only the second and third players in tour history with multiple victories. Stephenson won the 2000 Hy-Vee Classic, while Sheehan won the 2002 Copps Great Lakes Classic.

Plays Last Competitive Round At Granite Links

Kathy Whitworth Retires From Professional Golf

Kathy Whitworth, whose 88 LPGA Tour victories remain the most by any player male or female, retired from competitive golf Sunday at the BJ's Charity Championship at Granite Links Golf Club.

Whitworth, 65, retired from the LPGA Tour in 1990 but continued to compete in events on the Women's Senior Golf tour over the last few years.

"It's just time for me to move on, and I'm thrilled to do it here," Whitworth said. "It was a great week, and I got to play with one of my dear friends over the years in Susie Berning. It was fitting for us to play together and for this to be the last time."

In Whitworth's last competitive tournament, she and Berning teamed to shoot 72-65, tied for 21st at the inaugural BJ's Charity Championship.

"I felt less pressure because I don't have anything else to prove," Whitworth said of her final round. "I had my chance and I had my chances. I felt pretty relaxed today. This is going to be the end. I'm really kind of happy about it because I feel like the decision has been made."

The seven-time LPGA Tour Player of the Year, Whitworth's career includes at least one victory in every season from 1962 to 1978, three major titles and a staggering 35 victories from 1965 to 1968. Whitworth joined the LPGA Tour in 1959 and won her first event in 1962 at the Kelly Girls Open. She won her last title in 1985 at the United Virginia Classic.

"The record book is going to show my career, but how they feel about me personally, I really don't know," Whitworth said. "I know Jack (Nicklaus) was making a few comments when he played the British Open. When they remember you, if they remember you at all, that I was able to play the game and conduct myself in a nice manner. I hope they think kindly of me, but I don't know how they'll remember me."

Whitworth, who was born in Monahans, Texas, and currently resides in Flower Mound, Texas, has six more wins than Mickey Wright, who sits second on the LPGA Tour list with 82. Whitworth also has six more than Sam Snead, the PGA Tour's all-time leader with 82.

Spotlight On Health & Fitness

Ask Dr. Gilbert: Cosmetic Eyelid Surgery

DR. KENNETH GILBERT

Cosmetic eyelid surgery, or blepharoplasty, is an operation designed to remove excess skin and fat on upper and lower eyelids.

It can eliminate conditions that give an individual a tired appearance, such as wrinkled folds of skin on upper eyelids, "bags" under the eyes, and sagging eyebrows. These changes occur due to hereditary factors or as part of the normal aging process.

The eyes are the focal point of the face and an improvement in their appearance can be beneficial to one's self-image and esteem. A consultation with a surgeon is the first step, at which time you and your doctor will decide if the operation is safe for you and will accomplish the desired changes.

Your eyes and eyelids will be examined, and the surgeon will take your general medical history and perform a physical examination.

Eyelid surgery is normally performed on an outpatient basis, involving sedation and local anesthesia. It usually takes 1 1/2 to 2 hours.

Excess skin is marked on the upper eyelids. When removed, the resulting suture line and scar lies hidden in the normal sulcus, or fold, of the upper eyelid. Excess fat is removed from behind the eyelid to eliminate "bags".

Much less skin is excised from the lower eyelids, since pulling down on the lower eyelid should be avoided. The incision is located either just below the eyelashes or just inside the lower eyelid. Again, fat is removed from behind the eyelid to eliminate "bags".

Sutures are in place for only three to five days. The resulting scars usually fade nicely and are usually barely visible after several months. Some bruising and swelling is expected and slowly resolves over the two-week period after surgery.

There is mild to moderate discomfort, which is easily tolerated with the use of pain pills. Most patients can return to work and normal activities in about seven to ten days.

Complications are rare and generally include the risks of any surgery, such as bleeding, infection, and poor scarring. Your surgeon will discuss these in detail with you at the time of the consultation.

Since blepharoplasty is considered a cosmetic procedure, insurance companies usually will not cover the costs of the surgery unless there is so much loose skin hanging down on the upper eyelids that the vision is impaired.

Fees will be discussed with you at the time of the consultation. They are usually paid in advance of surgery and will range from $2000 to $6000. Prices for cosmetic procedures are often available over the telephone from the surgeon's office.

Finding Energy For A Longer, Healthier Life

(NAPS) — Between juggling work, family and other demands, many busy women find it hard to make healthy habits part of their daily routines.

Although 76 percent of respondents in a recent American Heart Association survey said physical activity is important, only 28 percent said they get the recommended amount of physical activity each week.

Joan Lunden, award-winning television journalist, author and busy mother of seven children, understands the challenge and has signed up for the Choose To Move program.

"As a journalist, I reported on health stories and certainly knew what I needed to do to be more fit and lower my risk of heart disease, but I wasn't incorporating it into my life," she said. "The more I learned about eating healthy and staying fit, the better my life became."

Choose To Move is a free 12-week program to help women increase physical activity and build healthy habits to lower their risk for heart disease and stroke. It's part of the American Heart Association's Go Red For Women movement to raise awareness of women's risk for cardiovascular disease and what they can do to prevent it.

"Women know that physical activity is a key component of a healthy lifestyle, but our survey findings indicate that they struggle to incorporate it into their daily lives," said Rita F. Redberg, M.D., M.Sc., F.A.H.A., F.A.C.C., professor of medicine in the cardiology division at the University of California San Francisco National Center of Excellence in Women's Health and an American Heart Association volunteer.

According to Lunden, Choose To Move offers simple ways to get women back on track:

- Be conscious about what you eat. Rather than eating a candy bar on the run, plan ahead by carrying a healthy snack (a handful of roasted almonds, fruit or homemade snack mix made with low-sodium seasonings).
- Get family members to go on a play date with you. It's great for family togetherness, while fitting in fitness.
- When you get home from the grocery store, chop your fresh produce right away and store in airtight containers in the fridge. It eliminates prep work for the rest of the week and you'll be much more likely to use them.
- Think about your childhood and what you enjoyed doing and bring that back into your life. Play a little.

Carpel Tunnel Syndrome

By Dr. JAY PROVENZANO

Carpal Tunnel Syndrome (CTS) results from compression on the median nerve between the flexor sheath and other structures within the carpal tunnel of the wrist.

It may result from direct pressure on the nerve or from vascular deficiency of the median artery. In primary CTS the median nerve will show decreased nerve conduction velocities through the carpel tunnel.

Possible causes of increased pressure in the carpel tunnel can include swelling of the common flexor tendon sheath, wrist fractures, accumulation of scar tissue or lunate (a wrist bone) dislocation. It may also be the result of a "double crush" syndrome which is entrapment of the nerve at two different sites, i.e.: neck and elbow.

Graston Technique (GT) is an instrument-assisted soft tissue mobilization for scar tissue adhesions and restriction which results in pain, weakness and functional limitations. The instruments are made of stainless steel and have a beveled edge to allow for deeper penetration of the soft tissue structures.

CTS is a very treatable condition. By utilizing the GT tools we can break up scar tissue and muscle tension in the forearm. This allows for decreased compression of the nerves and normal flow of nervous tension. Most patients notice a difference after their second and even first treatments. However, this treatment involves patient participation as well. The patient must exercise and stretch on a regular basis for optimal results.

With any injury the least invasive treatment should always be the first choice. Medications have multiple side effects that can lead to liver and kidney dysfunction. Surgery is not always 100 percent successful and can lead to other problems in the future.

Dr. Jay Provenzano is a chiropractic physician and has extensive training in several muscular techniques. Dr. Ann Doggett is a chiropractor, licensed nutritionist and the owner of South Bay Chiropractic, 110 West Squantum St., Suite 27, North Quincy. Aches and Pains

Q. Although I have been active for many years, occasionally my knees hurt, my back aches and, despite years of exercise, I still seem to get sore. I thought exercise and eating properly were supposed to prevent all of these ailments. Is there a different type of exercise I should do, or is this par for the course?

A. I commend you for remaining active and maintaining a healthy lifestyle. Exercise and proper nutrition will help keep your body healthy; however, exercise cannot cure or prevent all medical conditions and ailments.

If certain aches and pains continue to escalate, consult your physician to rule out an injury or serious medical condition. It is important not to ignore signs of pain and discomfort, as they may be an indication of a condition that needs a doctor's care.

Once cleared by your physician, it's time to look at your daily activities and your weekly exercise routine to help identify the possible causes of your aches and pains.

Check your workout program and go through the correct technique for the exercises you are completing. Excessive squatting, improper technique when performing exercises such as lunges, and incorrect weight loads can contribute to overloading joints and making them sore. Ask a fitness professional for the proper exercise workloads and techniques to make sure you're exercising safely and not placing yourself at risk for injury.

Next, evaluate your daily activities. Do you sit all day at work or in the car? Are you standing for hours at time? Are you required to lift, pull or push heavy objects? Answering these questions and others like them can help pinpoint non-exercise activities that could be contributing to your aches and pains.

After evaluating your daily activities, monitor your posture while completing those activities. Sitting slouched in a chair at work or in the car, lifting heavy objects without the proper muscular support, and excessive movements that place your joints at risk can all promote poor posture. Remember when possible to maintain strong posture through your back, shoulders, neck and head.

Continue to take care of yourself by staying active, exercising and eating right. Although you may feel some aches and pains, your body will appreciate your keeping it strong both inside and out.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

Dentistry for the 21st Century

by Steven A. Brustin, D.M.D.

OVERSTAYING THEIR WELCOME

When a primary ("baby") tooth falls out long before a permanent tooth has developed sufficiently to replace it, it can cause problems that require attention. The same may be said of primary teeth that fall out too late. Over-retained teeth stand in the way of underlying permanent teeth to the point where they hinder eruption and may cause them to emerge out of their proper positions. Primary teeth may stay in place too long due to roots that do not resorb properly or that become fused to the jaw (ankylosed). Whatever the reason, over-retained teeth should be removed if they stand in the way of permanent tooth eruption. This may help avert further problems.

The management of missing teeth varies on a case-by-case basis. We can help your family experience dental excellence by trusted, caring professionals. Our approach to dentistry is comprehensive; we concentrate on the whole individual, not just teeth. Our ultimate goal is to save your and your children's teeth for the rest of your or their life, considering that your family's well being is greatly influenced by oral health. Let us help you make the decision that is right for those special dental needs. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street. Please call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) Avoid adding to the tension around you. Even a well-meant reaction against something you perceive as unfair could be misunderstood. Let things calm down, and then talk about it.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) It's a good time for romance for unattached Bovines, and a good time for reinforcing the bonds between partners. Children's needs are important during the latter part of the week.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) A compliment from a surprising source sends you wafting way up into the clouds, where — sorry to say — your view of what's going on is obscured. Come on down and face some reality.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Even a family-loving person like you can sometimes feel you're at the end of the line with contentious kinfolk. But things can work out. Remember that it's better to talk than walk.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) A job-related move might hold more positive surprises than you'd expected. Go into it with confidence, and look for all the advantages it offers. Then decide what you'll do with what you find.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Driving yourself too hard to get something done on a deadline you set up can backfire. Ease into a more realistic finish date, and add more breaks to your work schedule.

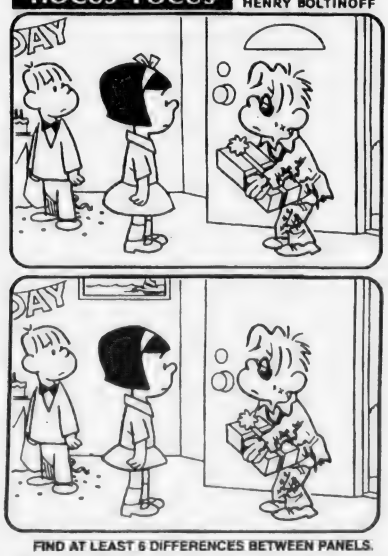
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Your sense of humor can brighten any dark period, and your laughter can dispel those gray clouds swirling around you. The weekend presents a surprising but welcome change.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Be careful about the words you use, especially in touchy situations. The old Chinese saying that the spoken word is silver, but the unspoken gold could well apply here.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Some facts could emerge to shed light on unresolved past problems. What you learn might also help explain why a once-warm relationship suddenly cooled down.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Don't let your pride get in the way of checking into what could be a great new opportunity. Get the facts first, and worry about procedure and protocol later.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A health problem in the family might have other relatives assuming that, as before, you'll take over the health-care duties. Surprise them and insist they share in the caretaking.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A series of changes can be unsettling, but in the long run, it can pay off with new perspectives on what you plan to do. Keep your mind open to the possibilities that might well lie ahead.

BORN THIS WEEK: You might be under a "royal" sign, but you have a wonderful way of embracing everyone as an equal.

Barry Mulls Appeal, Search To Begin For His Successor

bitration within 30 days of the termination.

"Basically, Barry's contract makes him an at-will employee," said Cunningham.

Meanwhile, Theresa Lord-Piatelli, chairwoman of the college board of governors, said she would appoint the first members of a presidential search committee to begin the process of finding a new college president. On Sept. 12, during the board's annual meeting, Lord-Piatelli will choose five board members to sit on the search committee.

The board members will determine the makeup of the overall search committee, which could have as many as 15 members, she said.

Lord-Piatelli said it is her hope that the search committee will be complemented by college faculty, representatives of the student body and members of the business community. She did not rule out the idea of having city representatives or officials on the search committee.

Eventually, the presidential search committee will outline criteria for finding a new college head.

Sue Harris has been appointed acting president pending the outcome of the search. She has served as acting president since Barry was placed on administrative leave May 25.

Barry was criticized by opponents for reimbursing himself for business expenses through the college foundation without board members' permission.

In addition, Barry took considerable heat when the school's surgical technology program was suspended for at least a year due to a fraud scandal involving the former program director.

The former program director allegedly ran a five-year payroll scam that a city-commissioned audit blamed Barry for failing to notice. As an offshoot of that scandal, several students are suing the college for more than $1.5 million, claiming they received insufficent instruction.

Originally, the board placed Barry on paid administration leave pending the outcome of an investigation into his use of the college's fund-raising foundation. But Barry's opponents did not wait for the outcome of the investigation to push for a vote on whether he should remain president.

Cunningham criticized the board for acting prior to receiving the results of the audit.

"It is outrageous," he said. "The board placed him (Barry) on paid administrative leave and let everyone believe that the results of the audit would determine a course of action. They didn't have the results of the audit at the board meeting before they voted to terminate him. The majority of the board doesn't appear to be concerned with the results of the audit."

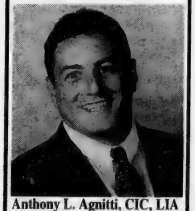
But Lord-Piatelli said Barry's problems went far beyond his alleged misuse of foundation funds.

"The president has responsibilities beyond how he handles the foundation," she said. "He is also a liaison from the foundation to the board, and in this capacity he is entrusted with ensuring that the foundation operates within its bylaws.

"The president never reported to the board on the financial status of the foundation," said Lord-Piatelli. "No audit would be necessary to determine these undisputed facts."

In addition, Lord-Piatelli said Barry was at least partially to blame for allowing college enrollment to dip 16 percent over the past two years.

Cunningham said the board's treatment of Barry could hamper the college's search for a successor.



"The board's conduct limits its ability to recruit quality people," said Cunningham. "Would you move to the area to take this job, knowing you could be terminated on a whim?"

But Lord-Piatelli laid blame for the public spectacle at Barry's doorstep.

"The only thing that hampered the college is that President Barry put us in this position," she said. "It's disappointing that Barry took a scorched earth policy and elected to put the college through this public process, instead of thinking about what was in the best interests of the institution."

Only Minor Flooding, Power Outages

Quincy Escapes Wrath Of Storms

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

In general, Quincy escaped the wrath of a series of powerful thunderstorms that rolled through the region on Sunday afternoon, dumping up to five inches of rain and causing moderate flooding in some areas.

The line of intense storms moved through the area Sunday afternoon and into the evening, causing flooding in Quincy, Braintree and Weymouth, and damaging homes and businesses.

Although the thunder, lightning and heavy rains caused havoc in many South Shore communities, Quincy was spared the brunt of the storms, according to city officials.

"It was brutal but we fared very well," said DPW Commissioner Stephen O'Donnell, noting that his office received roughly 23 calls from residents complaining of flooding.

He said most of the complaints originated from the West Quincy and South Quincy areas. In several instances, DPW crews assisted residents by utilizing temporary pumps to move water to catch basins in the streets.

"We can handle five inches of rain over a 10-hour period, but five inches in one hour is tough," said Tom Gorman, director of the city's Emergency Management Department.

Portions of Elm St. and Miller Stile Rd. were flooded, according to residents.

Typically, low-lying areas in North Quincy and Wollaston are hit hard during a torrential storm, according to O'Donnell. But the thunderstorms caused such localized flooding that it turned the normal pattern on its head, he said.

Quincy Police said a few streets were closed temporarily due to the onslaught of water, but motorists were not forced to abandon their vehicles.

The intersection of Independence Ave. and Franklin St. was shut down for a short period of time due to torrential downpours, police said. The Southeast Expressway near the Quincy/Milton line was also temporarily closed, police said.

Power outages were kept to a minimum in Quincy, although on several occasions residents reported temporary losses of power and flickering lights.

About 500 residents in the Penn's Hill area of South Quincy lost power for roughly nine hours, said Gorman.

"We did have some power outages which caused some traffic tie-ups," said O'Donnell. "Power outages always play havoc with traffic signals."

McNamee Resigns From Zoning Board

Brian McNamee has resigned from his position on the Zoning Board of Appeals to devote his time to campaigning for the Ward 6 council seat, he announced recently.

"Due to my recent decision to run for the open Ward 6 City Council seat, I no longer feel I can devote proper attention to my duties on the Zoning Board of Appeals," McNamee wrote in a letter to Mayor William Phelan.

McNamee will face off against Mark Bracken in a bid to succeed Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner, who decided not to run for re-election.

Phelan appointed McNamee to the board and will be responsible for filling the vacancy.

Detours, Traffic Delays Expected

Water Main Project Starts On Beale St.

Motorists may experience some traffic delays for the next few weeks along Beale St. and Lakian Square as work crews begin to replace a 100-year-old water main in the area.

Work commences this week and the project is expected to last roughly three to four weeks, depending on weather conditions.

Residents should expect traffic impacts and should plan accordingly, according to Mayor William Phelan's office. Traffic will be detoured at times between Lakian Square and Summit Ave. to allow for construction and excavation.

Beale St. will be re-paved as part of the city's Pavement Management Plan.

Phelan said the work is necessary in order to perform much-needed pavement improvements along Beale St.

"The benefits of this project will long outweigh the construction impacts," said Phelan.

The city will replace water mains along Hancock St., Standish Ave. and Sumner St. later this fall. Sewer system and water main improvements will also be addressed along Edgewater Dr. in Hough's Neck.

Phelan said the upcoming work will alleviate long-standing problems in these areas.

"We've had two main breaks on Sumner St. in the past two years that have caused residents significant inconveniences," he said. "The residents that live near Edgewater Dr. have suffered sewer backups for far too long."

Residents Urged To Watch Children, Small Pets

Coyote Sightings On Increase Through City

Residents are being urged to keep small pets inside the home after reports of numerous coyote sitings have surfaced.

Donald Conboy, the city's animal control officer, is urging residents to keep small animals inside and to keep a close watch on children after several coyotes have been seen throughout the city.

Coyotes have been spotted in several locations, including Commander Shea Blvd., Ricciuti Dr., and Bryant Ave., according to Conboy.

QMC Mammography Services Receives Top Accreditations

Quincy Medical Center's state-of-the-art mammography services recently received significant quality accreditations from the American College of Radiology and the Massachusetts Department of Public Health.

The American College of Radiology (ACR) awarded QMC a three-year accreditation in Mammography following a peer review and evaluation of staff, equipment, and quality assurance standards.

Mammography services at QMC also were proclaimed "deficiency-free" with 100% accuracy and compliance, during a recent Massachusetts Department of Public Health (DPH) survey. The Massachusetts DPH survey measured quality assurance standards, as well as compliance with state and federal regulations.

Quincy Medical Center patients have access to some of the most advanced imaging equipment available, including advanced MRI scanning, PET/CT scanning, and multi-slice CT scanning. In addition, the Simon C. Fireman Imaging Center for Women at QMC offers women a comfortable, private atmosphere in which to undergo testing such as mammography, ultrasound and bone densitometry.

For more information about diagnostic imaging services at QMC, call 617-376-4135. Quincy Medical Center (www.quincymc.org) is a 232-bed acute care community-teaching hospital providing South Shore residents with comprehensive medical and surgical services.

The medical center's Alliance for Quality with Boston Medical Center, formed in 1999, brings academic medicine to the community. At Quincy Medical Center, physicians from Boston Medical Center direct the departments of medicine, surgery, anesthesia, emergency medicine, and psychiatry.

Additionally, physicians from BMC who are board-certified in a range of medical and surgical specialties work alongside community physicians to ensure the continuity of patient care.

FORTY-THREE FIFTH grade students from Quincy schools recently completed a two-week DARE summer camp, designed to educate kids on the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse. DARE Summer Camp: Fun Time, Serious Message

It was a fun day with a serious message.

The Quincy Police Department's 13th annual Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) summer program marked its completion last week, with a variety of activities at Pageant Field in Merrymount Park.

The free progam, provided for 43 fifth-grade campers who completed an in-school DARE class during the spring, reinforces skills that students learned during the spring program.

DARE Officer Don Sautter and his partner, officer John Grazioso, used field trips and guest speakers throughout the two-week program to reinforce their message to students, who come from elementary schools throughout Quincy.

Speakers at last Friday's event included professional musician Johnny the K, a doctor from Quincy Medical Center, ambulance drivers and martial arts instructor Johnny Jenkins.

"This is a way to reinforce the information we've given them during the school year," said Sautter. "The more education you provide the more likely they will stay away from the wrong people and the wrong activities."

Accompanying the fifth graders during the summer camp are seven high school students who act as chaperones.

"We pair them up with high school students who are role models," said Sautter. "They just love hanging out with the high schoolers."

The camp is made possible through donations from private companies and individuals.

In addition to the summer camp, the Quincy Police Department DARE program is conducted throughout the school year in elementary and middle schools.

Health Dept. Advises On Preventing Heat Exhaustion

In order to prevent heat stress, heat exhaustion or heat stroke, Health Commissioner Drew Scheele is recommending the following advice:

• Drink plenty of water.

• Eat light and choose foods high in water content, such as fruits, salads and soups.

• Avoid alchoholic and caffeinated beverages which increase water loss and can dehydrate the body.

• Cool the skin with cool cloths and take cool baths or shower.

• If your living quarters appear too difficult to ventilate, try to seek comfort in an air conditioned shopping mall, senior recreation area, library or movie theater.

• Cut back on physical activity and rest at the first sign of fatigue, lightheadedness, or feeling hot.

DREW SCHEELE

• Wear loose, light-colored and lightweight clothing. If outdoors, wear a hat and try to stay out of the direct sun as much as possible.

Residents are urged to recognize the symptoms of heat stress, heat exhaustion and heat stroke:

• Heat Stress: Early warning signs are general discomfort, lack of energy, and loss of appetite.

• Heat exhaustion: Severe cramping of muscles due to excess sweating and loss of salt from the body due to exertion and/or high temperatures. Rest in a cool place and replenish lost fluids and salts unless on a sodium-restricted diet. If left untreated, heat exhaustion can lead to heat stroke.

• Heat stroke: an extreme and serious condition where the body temperature rises sharply. Symptoms can include delirium, disorientation and coma. Heat stroke is life-threatening and is most likely to develop during a heat wave where the humidity is high and the temperatures are at or above 90F for three or more consecutive days. A person suffering from heat stroke needs to have their body temperature lowered by cooling the body surface with water and be transported to the hospital for immediate treatment.

THREE QUINCY RESIDENTS were among the four cafeteria workers at Archbishop Williams High School, Braintree, who spearheaded a three-week cafeteria fundraiser which collected $963 from students for the Jimmy Fund in honor of 20-month-old Avery Glennon of Hanover who is recovering from cancer. Those Five Open Ward Seats

Five ward councillors will be re-elected unopposed this election year for what might be the first time in the city's history.

The five represent almost two-thirds of the nine-member council.

GARDNER

And, it would have been two-thirds if Ward 6 Councillor Alicia Gardner was running for re-election.

She, too, was unopposed but decided not to seek a second term because of her husband William's discovered heart ailment requiring a lengthy treatment and recovery period.

Brian McNamee and Mark Bracken, both of whom ran against Gardner two years ago, are the only candidates for that seat. And it will be the only ward contest this year.

McNAMEE

BRACKEN

The five incumbents running unopposed are: Leo Kelly (Ward 1), Dan Raymondi (Ward 2), Kevin Coughlin (Ward 3), Jay Davis (Ward 4) and Doug Gutro (Ward 5).

KELLY

GUTRO

Longtime observers and politicians can't recall a similar election.

City Council President Frank McCauley, who is also the city's political historian, shakes his head:

McCAULEY

"I've never seen it like this before. I can't remember anything quite like it."

Ward council races have been long-time traditional hot spots on the ballot. But they may be cooling off.

There may have been a sign in the 2003 election.

Three open seats were up for grabs in Ward 1 (Greg Hanley's), Ward 4 (Bryan Connolly's) and Ward 6 (Joseph Newton's).

It was like old times in Wards 1 and 6, with five contenders in each race. Leo Kelly came out of retirement to win the Ward 1 seat and Gardner took the Ward 6 seat, the first woman elected to the city council in 10 years.

But in Ward 4, long a political hot-bed, things were quite different.

Jay Davis, making his first run for office, was the lone candidate and walked in. This year he will be re-elected unopposed again.

"There seems to be a growing lack of interest for people to run for public office," notes McCauley.

He thinks many may not have the time to campaign or the time to serve.

"Maybe they are too busy trying to make a living," he says.

But he also notes that voters appear to be losing interest, too.

"Voter turnouts aren't what they used to be. People don't get out to vote as much anymore."

The 2001 and 2003 elections are examples.

Despite the Bill Phelan-Jim Sheets mayoral thriller in 2001, the voter turnout was only 47 percent. Some 61 to 63 percent was expected.

In 2003 with a mayor's race (Phelan-Newton) and the three open ward seats the voter turnout was only 35 percent. Two incumbents, Raymondi and Gutro, were unopposed that year.

McCauley, a former ward councillor himself, also gives credit to the incumbents running unopposed this year.

"They work pretty hard at it," he says. "They hold community meetings and keep their constituents up to date through mailings. They get the job done."

Although he can't remember five ward incumbents running unopposed, he does recall five new ward councillors being elected the same year. That was in 1973.

It was the biggest turnover in the council since five ward councillors were elected in 1933 — 40 years earlier, McCauley says.

LYDON

Kelly defeated Paul Harold by 48 votes to win the Ward 1 seat vacated by Edward Graham.

John Lydon, Jr. took the new Ward 3 seat.

SHEETS

James Sheets, a young professor at Quincy College, upset Ward 4 incumbent Albert Barilaro. Sheets would hold that seat for 16 years before being elected mayor in 1989.

POWERS

In Ward 5, Atty. Warren Powers, who lost to William Delahunt two years before, won the seat when Delahunt did not seek re-election.

DELAHUNT

Both went on to higher office, Delahunt as congressman and Powers as presiding justice of Wrentham District Court.

Atty. Dennis Harrington took the Ward 6 seat away from four-term incumbent J. Vincent Smyth by 71 votes.

HARRINGTON

Unlike this year, there were quite a few ward candidates on the preliminary election ballot: Four in Ward 1, six in Ward 3 and six in Ward 4.

Times seem to be changing.

Worst Rainstorm Floods 700 Cellars, Submerges Cars

Aug. 18-24
1955
50 Years Ago

The worst rainstorm in Quincy's history, the aftereffects of Hurricane Diane, dropped about a foot of rain on the city in two days, flooding 700 cellars, submerging hundreds of cars in streets and parking areas and forcing the evacuation of scores of families.

The U.S. Weather Bureau in Boston recorded an official level of 11.91 inches of rain in 40 hours, with 8.24 inches coming down in 24 hours to break the one-day record of 6.04 set on July 11, 1921. The Blue Hills Observatory reported 11.95 inches in 46 hours.

"That means a three-month average rainfall in 36 hours," said Public Works Commissioner Charles R. Herbert. "Our drainage system was not designed to handle it. We will keep on pumping as fast as we can." Quincy drains reach capacity when four inches falls in 24 hours, he said.

Town, Furnace and Sachem brooks all overflowed their banks and 80 percent of the families living on Brook Road, South Quincy, had to be evacuated from their homes. A fleet of small private boats were pressed into service to take residents of Furnace, West Quincy, to safety.

City manager Donald H. Blatt warned parents not to allow their children to wade in the flooded streets for fear of health hazards and he asked sightseers to stay out of flooded areas. He also authorized food and building supply stores to stay open on Sunday in the emergency.

More than 150 cars were submerged to their rooftops in the South Street parking area; a landslide dropped a granite wall into the home of Sarah Dalabon, 131 School St.; and a power line fell across a chain link fence at the Atherton Hough School, Houghs Neck, charging it.

SCHOOL DELAY STUDIED

The School Committee asked Dr. Charles Djerf, a committee member, Dr. Brooks Ryder, the health commissioner, and Dr. James Cameron, a city pediatrician, to study the advisability of delaying the September school opening due to the prevalence of polio in the area.

Conducts Metropolitan Wind Symphony

John Digiacomo Maestro For A Day

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

John Digiacomo's family and friends jokingly refer to him as "maestro," and for at least one day, he certainly felt the part.

On July 20, Digiacomo conducted the Metropolitan Wind Symphony at Boston's Hatch Shell while the group performed "Stars and Stripes Forever."

His chance to lead one of the area's foremost musical ensembles came about in an unlikely way: He was the winning bidder in an eBay auction.

For $179.50, Digiacomo stepped up to the conductor's spot and led the ensemble for a rousing rendition of the American standard.

It was a dream come true, he said.

"I was thinking it was a good opportunity because I enjoy the symphony and I've always loved that type of music," said Digiacomo, a longtime Quincy Point resident who moved to Natick last year. "I never thought I would win."

The Metropolitan Wind Symphony is a non-profit entity, so the group's publicist believed a good way to raise funds was to allow an amateur to conduct the ensemble.

Among the musicians under Digiacomo's direction was a very familiar face - his girlfriend, Jennifer Mabb, a substitute flutist for the symphony. It was through Mabb that he initially found out about the eBay auction, which drew six bidders.

It appeared as though his desire to wave the baton would be dashed because his eBay bid was outbid early on. But the high bidder eventually withdrew, allowing Digiacomo to claim the prize.

"My girlfriend just checked to see how much the winning bid was, and she told me I won," he said. "I was a bit surprised."

Prior to his performance, he received some tips from the symphony's regular conductor, Lawrence Isaacson. He gave Digiacomo pointers on how to keep pace, starting and stopping, and increasing and decreasing intensity.

The performance itself went off without a hitch.

"It couldn't have gone any better," he said. "Initially, I was a bit anxious, but once I got on stage the adrenaline kicked in. I kept thinking this is the place that Arthur Feidler, John Williams and Keith Lockhart conducted from."

Although he lives in Natick, Digiacomo calls Quincy his home. He stays connected to the community by visiting family in his native city and staying active in church activities at St. Joseph's Church in Quincy Point.

He comes home nearly every weekend to participate in church activities and attend Mass on Sundays. He sits on the parish council and is the president of the church's Holy Name Society.

"I've been going there (St. Joseph's) my entire life and I feel comfortable there," he said. "They've done so much for people, and I'm just happy to do my part."

Digiacomo, 30, said his brief stint as a conductor was especially heartwarming because many family members attended the concert at the Hatch Shell.

His mother and father, Charlotte and Anthony, were there, despite the fact that they don't venture out often in the hot and humid weather. Charlotte Digiacomo served on the Quincy Park and Recreation Board for 14 years.

As for his experience on stage, was it worth the $179.50?

"Yes, I think I got off cheap," he said. "This is a memory that I'm going to keep forever. For a minute there I felt like it was the 4th of July."

Quincy August Moon Festival Sunday At President's Plaza

Quincy Asian Resources, Inc. (QARI) will host the 18th Annual August Moon Festival at President's Plaza, Quincy Ave., on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Planned activities include vendor exhibitions, performances of Asian music and dance, games and activities for children and seniors, and there will also be a raffle highlighted by prizes including domestic and international airline tickets. The festival is a free event, everyone is welcome.

"The festival has grown as the Asian community in Quincy has grown. We are happy to feature many Asian cultures at the event; every year there is something different for people to enjoy" said Gene Lee, the Event co chair. "We are also happy to feature many Quincy entertainers."

This year's event will showcase talents from different communities. For the first time the popular Gund Kwok Asian Women's Lion Dance Troupe will be joining the festival. In addition, contributing to the events will be Samuri Taiko and Japanese Drumming and Martial Arts, Dance Philippines, Eastern Rhythms, performing Indian classical and folk dances and Korean and Chinese Martial Arts Groups. A highlight of the festival will be the fashion show performed by the North Quincy High School Asian Culture Club.

Organizers this year added performances for those individuals interested in Chinese Opera and Karaoke. A second stage will provide an opportunity for local groups to share their talents with the audience. Additionally, guests are also invited to debut their singing voices during the time allotted for karaoke.

In the spirit of the harvest moon, festival goers this year will also be receiving samples of traditional Moon cake and free gifts from two of the grand sponsors, Expressway Toyota and Mohegan Sun/ Sunshine Travel. The third grand sponsor, Kam Man Marketplace will offer food samples and gift coupons for its new store.

"Our Grand Sponsors and the City of Quincy have provided invaluable support to the festival", said John Brothers, co-chair of the festival and Executive Director of Quincy Asian Resources. "They have established themselves as the business community's leading supporters of QARI's mission to serve the needs of Quincy's Asian-American Community."

August Moon is the second biggest holiday in China and also one of Chinese's most favorite traditional holidays. No matter who is working far away from home, as the August Moon is approaches, Chinese family members return home and to gather together to celebrate August Moon. Therefore, August Moon also called a family reunion holiday. QARI is very honored for the opportunity to host this special event again.

"Quincy is a multiethnic and a multi-cultural community, we hope that the celebration of this Asian holiday will open the doors for non Asian people residing in Quincy to understand more about Asian traditional cultures and also to participate in them," Brothers said.

As in previous years, sponsors and volunteers are essential to the success of an event. QARI's goal is to build partnerships with these organizations, businesses and individuals in the future. The cooperative relationships give QARI opportunities to offer important projects such as multilingual Information and Referral services, a Cultural Competency Program with the Quincy Medical Center, English for Living and Employment, Computer Classes, and the Lunar New Year Festival and August Moon Festivals to the community.

Quincy Asian Resources Inc. is a not for profit organization dedicated to promoting the development of the Asian-American community and aim to benefit the entire community. The organization has staff and volunteers fluent in English, Cantonese, Mandarin and Toisanese.

For more information about the QARI's programs and projects or the festival, contact QARI at 617-472-2200 or visit www.qari.info.

To Benefit QPS Early Literacy Program

Mayor's Golf Tournament, Fundraiser Oct. 3

The 2nd annual Mayor's Cup Golf Tournament and Fundraising gala will be held Monday, Oct. 3 at the Granite Links Golf Club, Mayor William Phelan announces.

Once again, the event will benefit the Early Intervention Literacy Program in the Quincy Public Schools.

Last year, the event raised $70,000, which allowed the Quincy Public Schools to implement a summer literacy program for students in the 3rd through 5th grades.

"Last year's event was a success not just for the amount of money raised, but also the fun everyone had and the quality of the event itself," said Phelan. "Even if you are not a golfer, you can support this cause and event by attending the gala fundraiser."

Sponsors and golfers are being sought for this year's tournament. Space is limited and is available on a first-come, first serve basis.

The Mayor's Cup Golf Tournament Committee includes Celeste McGlone, School Committee member Dave McCarthy, Jim Mullaney, Peter O'Connell, Dan Flynn, School Supt. Rick DeCristofaro, Ron Donovan, Kathy Hussey and Dave Murphy.

For more information call the mayor's office at 617-376-1990.

QMC's Asian Health Services Showcased At Open House

The Asian Health Services Department at Quincy Medical Center (QMC) recently hosted an open house for 40 members of the Asian American Services Association at Wollaston Senior Center in Wollaston.

"The event was designed to showcase the advanced, high quality health care services available at Quincy Medical Center and to introduce the medical center's full range of interpreting and outreach services," said Allen So, Medical Interpreting and Outreach Coordinator.

QMC's Moon Lam, Rebecca Young and Sharon Mann, RN, joined So in leading the seniors on guided tours of the hospital, conducted in both English and Cantonese. The tour groups visited QMC's Emergency Department, and medical and surgical nursing units, as well as the Rehabilitation Department and Cancer Resource Center.

A highlight of each tour was a walk-through of QMC's diagnostic imaging services, including the MRI facilities and newly renovated CT Suite.

Timmins Names Committee, Website

Jim Timmins, a candidate for the School Committee, announces the formation of his election committee, headed by Barbara Isola, and the launch of his website, www.votetimmins.com.

"I am delighted to announce that Barbara Isola has agreed to serve as the chair of the Timmins Committee," said Timmins, "and Bruce Wood will serve as treasurer.

"Both are active, dedicated people and their involvement will give my campaign a big boost."

Isola, who serves as co-president with Sue Sheridan of the Quincy Citywide Parents Council, has been actively involved in school issues for a number of years.

She is an attorney and mother of two, married to Tim McAloon; they live near the Beechwood Knoll School.

Bruce Wood serves on the Quincy Youth Arena Board and the Deegan Road Race Committee and is a former member of the Zoning Board of Appeals.

He works for his wife, Cathy, at Wood Commercial Paint and Wallcovering, a West Quincy business with more than 20 employees.

Timmins said he is really excited over his campaign website.

"It gives me a vehicle to get our campaign message out, to communicate with voters, and to allow voters to get to know me and my family, the nuts a bolts of any campaign," he said.

The citywide preliminary election is Tuesday, Sept. 13, at which time the number of candidates will be reduced from 12 to six for the final election, Tuesday, Nov. 8.

English Teacher, Drama Director

Quincy's Kevin Kynock Retires From BC High

Kevin Kynock of Quincy, an English teacher and drama director for 40 years at Boston College High School, has announced his retirement both from the classroom and the theater.

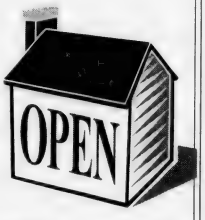
In BC High tradition, students, faculty and administrators gathered around his classroom offering a thunderous applause to mark his last class taught at BC High.

Kynock's impact on the lives of his English students is immeasurable. But the impact on the lives of his actors and actresses in a way is measurable.

It was Kynock who brought the Spring musical to BC High, who created the one-act play writers workshop, who produced an annual Shakespearean play, who taught set-design, who made BC High a name in High school Drama, winning the State and New England Drama Festival twice in the 70s.

It was also Kynock who sparked the interest in drama for several local talents: writer Joe Keenan of "Frazier" fame, actor-directors Diego Archinegas, Dan Bolton, Matt DiBattista, Tony McLean, former President of Broadway in Boston.

The Parents' Association for the Performing Arts honored Kynock by naming an award after him. From this year on, the award, which they present annually to various faculty and staff members for their support of the Fine and Performing Arts, will be called the Kevin Kynock Faculty/Staff Arts Appreciation Award.



"For the past 40 years, Kevin Kynock has been the face of drama," said Vice-principal Patrick Ruff. "Our young men have learned more than simply lines and blocking during their time in Dever Hall; they have learned the value of hard work, the importance of dedication, and what it means to be part of a team.

"In short, they have learned how to be men of competence, conscience and compassion. Kevin has done this in the humble, generous, and selfless manner that he approaches all his roles on campus. Drama at Boston College High School is better because of Kevin's energy and enthusiasm and his presence in the theater will be missed," Ruff added.

"The entire BC High community," said President William J. Kemeza, "joins together today in gratitude for Kevin's tireless service to the school, its students and its mission."

Houghs Neck Man Hospitalized After Boat-Catamaran Accident

A 35-year-old Houghs Neck man remained in South Shore Hospital with leg injuries Tuesday after his boat and another were rammed by a 100-foot catamaran ferry in the channel between Peddock's and Nut Islands.

The man, Jeffrey Crispo; his wife, Nicole, 33; his brother, Steven, 43; and a friend, Dana Gagne, 35; all jumped into the water and were rescued by a crew from the Coast Guard Station at Point Allerton.

The three men were taken to South Shore Hospital in Weymouth where Gagne and the elder Crispo were released after treatment. Steven Crispo suffered a broken nose. Mrs. Crispo was not treated at the hospital.

The four were returning from a barbecue on Peddock's Island in a 25-foot motor boat and a 38-foot former lobster boat Saturday night when the lobster boat broke down in the channel, known as the West Gut.

They were attempting to restart the boat's engine when the high-speed ferry, the Nora Vittoria, with a captain and four crew members but no passengers, came through the Gut bound for home at Hewitt's Cove in Hingham.

The catamaran, which was returning after dropping off passengers from a whale watch, rammed the lobster boat, sinking it, and left the fiber-glass motor boat badly damaged but still afloat and able to be towed ashore.

Boston Harbor Cruises, proprietors of the Nora Vittoria, placed the captain, John Parker, on leave pending the outcome of an investigation. No one on the ferry, capable of handling 400 passengers, was injured.

New Generation Of Papiles Carrying On Family Luster

JOHN PAPILE

Another generation of the Papile family is still making the old folks, Lucia and Raffael, proud.

Their grandson, John, has just completed a six months task of installing a new electronic lottery system in the Caribbean island of Puerto Rico.

And now he's en route to Ohio to set up a lottery in that midwestern state.

John, 42, is the son of the late Leo Papile, the retired MDC police detective who plays a key role in the new book on Boston area crime, "Legends of Winter Hill."

His brother, also named Leo, is a righthand man as chief scout to Celtics General Manager Danny Ainge, whose club just won the Atlantic Division title in the NBA.

John Papile got his start with the Massachusetts State Lottery only to fall victim to Bay State politics when Joe Malone became state treasurer.

He worked for a while as a short order cook in the Wheel In Diner on Hancock Street to support his wife and their two children in a new home.

He met his wife, Dora, in Acapulco, Mexico, where he was visiting friends, Maria and Luis Tiant, who used to pitch for the Red Sox.

But John's talent for lottery management was too good to keep hidden.

A phone call from Jim Hosker, who set up the original state lottery in Massachusetts, lured him away to Kentucky, where his career really took off.

He was working for Scientific Games, which operates lotteries in 17 states, three countries in the Pacific, four Canadian provinces and six European nations.

His next stop was Austin, Texas, where he still maintains his home, then London, England, for two years to start their national lottery, then Peru and Arizona.

John Papile is only one of the many descendants of Lucia and Raffael Papile, immigrants from the town of Torre dei Passeri, Italy, to make it big in America.

The Papiles had 16 children, seven of whom served their country in World War II, and many grandchildren, who, like John, are still serving in more peaceful ways.

THE 2005 BABE RUTH 14-YEAR-OLD WORLD SERIES

Event Returns To City Of Presidents Aug. 19-27 At Adams Field

Higher Expectations For Quincy This Time

By CHRIS POISSON

They remember hanging out at Adams Field every night two years ago and watching the Babe Ruth World Series games in awe.

As 12-year-olds, they remember the talented players from across the nation looking like professional men, with their big bodies, powerful strokes, blazing speed and sound fundamentals.

Now, those same kids will get their chance to represent host Quincy when the 2005 Babe Ruth World Series for 14-year-olds returns to the City of Presidents tomorrow (Friday), with the locals opening up against Italy in the third game of the day at 8 p.m.

"It's going to be good baseball," said second baseman Scott Warwick. "The kids are going to be huge and they can hit the ball far. We got smoked two years ago so we have to win a game this year. At least one. I hope we beat Italy. Our confidence will be high if we win our first game."

Manager Dick Lombardi, who is also president of Quincy Babe Ruth, believes the Italian team will be even stronger this time around.

"From what I understand they picked a team six months ago and they've been practicing since," he said. "I don't expect them to be a walkover. I expect them to be a good, solid team."

The players and coaches have been gearing for the World Series since June, playing baseball six nights a week between practices, Quincy Babe Ruth house games and Suburban League games in the 15-year-old division.

"It's been really tiring because we've practiced every day," said co-captain Danny Richards. "Hopefully it will pay off in the end. We're just hoping to do the best we can. We're underdogs, for sure. Hopefully winning just one game will be good. We'll try to win two or three."

"They've worked hard and have learned a lot this summer," said assistant coach Stratton Tragellis, whose son, Alex, is co-captain of the team. "They're all great kids, no attitude problems. If they put their minds to it, they can play well."

"We've been practicing nearly every single day since June," said assistant coach Kevin Ouellette, whose brother, Greg, is on the team. "We've brought a hitting instructor down to help us. Some of the kids have been doing BP on their own and practicing without the coaches."

"I'm usually at practice early," Lombardi said. "When we first started practicing, there were only four or five kids before me. Now every one is here before me. The kids aren't complaining about going to practice. They're looking forward to it. It's going to be a great experience."

Quincy's strength rests with its defense, as it has great speed in the outfield and a solid core up the middle of the infield.

"When we get our defense going, we're unstoppable," Alex Tragellis said.

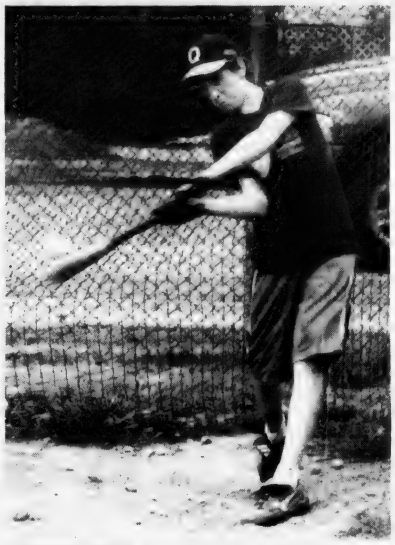
Matt Rodriguez will start behind the plate and boasts a bionic arm. "If I had my choice at catcher, there's probably only one kid I'd choose over him and he's 15," Lombardi said. "He's been terrific. I'd say he has thrown out 40 percent of the runners."

Pat Joyce and Kevin Magoon will share first base duties. "They both have good size, a good target for our infielders," Lombardi said.

At second base, Warwick and Kevin Mahoney have made their share of spectacular plays. "They're just outstanding," Lombardi said.

Tragellis will start at shortstop and will be backed up by Trevor Brown. Anthony Alibrandi will man third base with Kevin Chenette, also the backup catcher, coming off the bench.

"Alex is one of the captains and is a terrific leader," Lombardi said. "Kevin is one of the most improved players on the team. I put him at third base, a position he's never played before, and he's worked hard to become a decent third baseman."



In the outfield, Richards patrols center field with Danny Jackson in left and Tim Stille in right. Greg Ouellette and Sean Naughton will provide depth off the bench.

"The one thing we don't lack in the outfield is speed, which is good for us because we're playing at a big field," Lombardi said. "If they hit fly balls we should be able to run them down."

Offensively, Lombardi said the top of the order will produce most of the runs but will need others in the lineup to start swinging the bat. "We need some more hitting," he said. "If the top five or six can do what they're supposed to do, we'll be OK."

The top half of the order features Richards leading off, followed by Tragellis, Rodriguez, clean-up hitter

Alibrandi and Magoon, the only left-handed hitter on the team. Lombardi also expects contributions from Joyce, Magoon, Chenette and Warwick.

On the hill, Quincy has seven arms in its arsenal including starters Brown, Warwick, Tragellis, Alibrandi and Jackson and relievers Magoon and Joyce. Brown and Warwick are the top hurlers and Lombardi said he plans to use the duo against Italy.

"Scotty and Trevor are the top pitchers on the team," he said. "Unfortunately, Trevor has a strain in his elbow. I'm hoping they'll both be ready for the World Series. I'll use them in the first game to try to beat Italy."

Besides the talent level on the field, another obstacle Quincy needs to overcome is its nervousness from playing in front of huge crowds.

Lombardi told the team of an incident about the 2003 Quincy squad during its first World Series game.

"I told them what happened to the kid that pitched the first game against Connecticut," he said. "The first eight pitches were all balls. Bob Griffin, the coach, went out to talk to him. He said, 'I can't believe I'm playing in front of this many people.' He just kept looking around. He wasn't concentrating on what he was supposed to be doing.

"I'm hoping we can get them concentrated before they go out there and not worry about the crowd. Just play ball. I know that's going to be hard. I expect them to be nervous. If they're not nervous, they're not ready."

The 2005 World Series team will be ready when it steps onto the diamond tomorrow night against Italy. Whether it wins or loses, the players will always cherish their chance to participate in this renowned tournament.

"It would be great if they could win a game," Lombardi said. "They deserve the reward for all their hard work. But I told them to look and see how many people have played in the World Series. There might be 100,000 people in the country who can say they've played in a World Series. They're going to be one of them. Just take that for what it's worth. It's not about winning and losing. This is something they're going to remember for the rest of their lives."

Opening Ceremonies Friday Night

Dedicated Volunteers Help Bring World Series Back To Quincy

By CHRIS POISSON

When the successful Babe Ruth World Series concluded here two years ago, Quincy Babe Ruth President Dick Lombardi couldn't wait for the city to host the national tournament again.

He didn't have to wait too long as the 2005 Babe Ruth World Series for 14-year-olds has returned to the City of Presidents.

"I had a lot of people come up to me after the last one saying I had to get it back," said Lombardi, who is also doubling as manager of the host Quincy team. "I think I mentioned at the end of the championship game that I was going to try to get it back for 2005. I never thought it would happen. I was shocked.

"We pushed and pushed. I really didn't think we'd get it in 2005. I thought maybe 2006 or 2007. But the Babe Ruth officials were very happy with the way it went. They were happy with the crowds, thrilled with the volunteers. The response they got from the people there was good."

The World Series is scheduled to launch tomorrow (Friday) at Adams Field in Merrymount Park with the first game at noon and conclude Saturday, Aug. 27, with the championship game.

Opening ceremonies will take place at 6:30 p.m. A special tribute will be held for Ron Tellefsen, president and CEO of Babe Ruth League, Inc. for 25 years, who died in March.

Following the festivities, Quincy will take the field at 8 p.m. against international invitee Italy — one of the most highly anticipated games of the tourney.

Two pre-World Series events will take place today (Thursday). A home run derby will be held at noon at Merrymount Field and a banquet will be held at 7 p.m. at the Boston Marriott Quincy for 850 guests.

Lombardi is hoping the seventh annual event for the 14-year-old division will attract more hardball enthusiasts than the 58,000 in 2003.

"I'd like to think more people are going to be there this time because of the experience of last time," Lombardi said. "It's generating a lot of excitement. People are talking about it. Everywhere we go we hear something. There's a lot of activity at our headquarters at the Park Department. The phone never stops ringing."

Unlike two years ago when Adams Field underwent an extreme makeover — finishing an hour before the first pitch — only minor renovations have been made this time around. The Park Department has laid new sod on the sidelines, added new clay to the infield, built an entrance to the third base dugout, painted the pressbox and replaced the bases.

In addition to the Park Department's assistance, Lombardi has high praise for all the volunteers that have helped the World Series come to fruition.

"It's been incredible," Lombardi said. "This can't be done without the volunteers. Kathy Bowes and John Norton have worked in headquarters since it opened. They're relentless. Bob Griffin helped raised a lot of the money through sponsorships. Marie Sullivan has done a great job with the host families. This wouldn't happen without people like them. That's not counting all the ones that will be down there working the concessions, tickets, souvenir shops."

The tournament will feature 12 teams, all vying for

THE PRICE OF GAS

Gas prices are on many people's minds these days. Measured in real dollars, gas prices actually peaked in March of 1981 at more than $3 per gallon. Recent prices are still 30% below the all-time high. A typical American today, working at the average hourly wage of $17.50, works about seven minutes to purchase a gallon of gas at $2.10. In contrast, the average worker of the 1930s worked more than 20 minutes to purchase a gallon of gas; it took 12 minutes in the 1940s and 10 minutes in the 1950s. In fact, gas prices since the mid-1980s have not only been more affordable as a share of income than at any time, they have also been quite stable.

At today's cost of gas it pays to keep your car in tune and your wheels aligned. Rely on our ASE Certified professional service technicians and let us check it out. To help you do this, the service team at LEO & WALT'S SUNOCO is available at 258 Quincy Ave., E. Braintree (781-843-1550). Open: Mon.-Fri. 6am-9pm, Sat. 7am-9pm, Sun. 9am-5pm. WE are "A Place Where Your Car Can Live Longer." Sunoco and most major credit cards honored. We are your local source for propane for grills, motor homes, and converted vehicles.

HINT: In Mexico, the world's fourth-largest oil producer, the price of gas is $3.20 per gallon, which is about the same as in India, Brazil, and Singapore. In Europe, the price ranges from $5 to $7 per gallon.

Quincy Medical Center Expands Prostate Cancer Screening Clinic

Furthering efforts to bring vital cancer screenings to uninsured and underinsured South Shore residents, Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will host a two evening Prostate Cancer Screening Clinic, this fall.

The two-day screening is underwritten by the Marie A. Curry Fund, which supports cancer programs and services at QMC for uninsured and underinsured South Shore residents.

The American Cancer Society recommends annual prostate cancer screening for males beginning at age 50 and earlier, if at an increased risk.

Screening attendees will receive PSA (prostate-specific antigen) blood test and a digital rectal exam (DRE), performed by a Board Certified Urologist on staff at Quincy Medical Center.

The screening is free. Pre-registration required.

To schedule an appointment for the free Prostate Cancer Screening, call the toll-free, 24-hour Physician Referral Service at 1-877-479-CARE.

For A Life Of Good Health, Don't Smoke

Dana Reeve's diagnosis of lung cancer and this week's passing of Peter Jennings are reminders that people have questions about the disease, and many smokers are looking for ways to quit.

The American Cancer Society offers support and hope for people diagnosed with lung cancer and their families as well as resources to help smokers quit 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, including its own Quitline, which since its launch in May 2000 has provided services to more than 100,000 callers.

For more information, call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org .

According to the American Cancer Society's Cancer Facts and Figures 2005, it is estimated that 4,010 new cases of lung and bronchus cancer will be diagnosed in Massachusetts this year, and sadly, close to 3,800 will die.

Lung cancer does occur in people who have never smoked, even though cigarette smoking is by far the biggest risk factor for lung cancer in the U.S., causing an estimated 80 percent of lung cancers in women and 90 percent in men.

"The Commonwealth would prevent 34,250 children alive today from starting to smoke and save 10,960 of them from a premature, smoking-caused death if it funded a tobacco prevention and cessation program at minimum levels recommended by the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC)," said Anne Kelly Contini, senior vice president for the American Cancer Society in Massachusetts.

"While Massachusetts receives more than $700 million in tobacco-related revenue each year, less than one percent of that money is spent on programs that will help people quit smoking and keep kids from ever starting."

Once a national model for tobacco control, Massachusetts has stripped funding for tobacco prevention and cessation from $48 million in fiscal year 2002 to merely $4.25 million in the fiscal year 2006 budget. The CDC recommended minimum funding for tobacco prevention in Massachusetts is $35.2 million.

"The best way for the Commonwealth to help reduce the incidence of lung cancer illness and deaths to reinvest in existing, proven tobacco control programs. Progress against lung cancer will require further efforts to prevent cigarette smoking as well as advances in early detection and treatment. The good news is per capita consumption is now at the lowest level since World War II and that lung cancer death rates have fallen 17 percent in men from 1990 to 2002," said Michael J. Thun, MD, the Society's vice president of Epidemiology and Surveillance Research.

"With 46 million former smokers in the U.S. and the inevitability that some people who have never smoked will develop lung cancer, continued research into early detection and into ways of improving targeted therapy, which has shown promise in some select groups, remain very important."

In New England alone, there is more than $3 million invested in lung cancer research, and nationwide, the American Cancer Society has 73 grants in effect representing an investment of more than $40 million. Every day, almost 1200 people die in the United States as a result of tobacco use, and 8.6 million people in this country suffer from smoking related chronic conditions. These illnesses and these premature deaths can be prevented.

The single greatest commitment one can make to a life of health is not starting to smoke in the first place. If you are young, don't smoke. If you do, the chances are 1 in 2 that you will die of a disease related to smoking.

If you do smoke, stopping can have almost immediate beneficial effects on your health, and over time your risk of developing lung cancer does decrease.

For more information on how you can quit smoking, or if you'd like more information on lung cancer, call the American Cancer Society 24 hours, 7 days a week toll-free at 1-800-ACS-2345or visit www.cancer.org.

The American Cancer Society is the nationwide, community-based voluntary health organization dedicated to eliminating cancer as a major health problem by preventing cancer, saving lives, and diminishing suffering from cancer through research, education, advocacy and service.

For more information call 1-800-ACS-2345 or visit www.cancer.org.

Great-Looking Legs

Q. I need some advice on exercises to help tone my legs. I usually work out three times a week and do exercises for my legs, but I am not seeing much improvement. My inner thighs still touch, and I do not see much definition in my thighs and calves. Are there any special exercises I can do to improve the appearance of my legs?

A. The easy answer to your question is "yes." Yes, you can do exercises to help improve the strength and appearance of your legs. However, they must include exercises that involve your whole body and not just your legs. Tackling just one muscle group in a quest to see isolated results will not give you the results you want. Looking at your exercise program in addition to your lifestyle habits can help you answer your questions about improving the appearance of your legs.

It seems as though there should be an easy way to make physical changes to our body's appearance. Complete a few squats and ... ta-da, toned legs. Do a couple of sets of lunges and ... wow, the legs we've always wanted. Since this is not our reality, let's begin with the basics of developing a system that can help you reach your fitness goals.

First, set measurable fitness and lifestyle goals that can realistically be achieved. Setting a goal of having legs like a certain celebrity is not realistic, because factors such as genetics have a large say in how our bodies will look and respond to exercise. Instead, choose goals of improving strength, flexibility and function, which will translate into results you can see.

Once your goals are set, strive to develop a program that will address all of your goals. If your goal is improving leg strength and appearance, implement exercises that will strengthen your legs such as lunges, squats, plié squats, step-ups, and hamstring, glute, calf and abductor and adductor exercises. Strengthening all of these muscles through strength and cardiovascular training, in addition to consistently practicing proper nutrition, can begin to produce great results.

It is important not to neglect any of your muscles, even if you are satisfied with their appearance. If you are exercising three days a week, be sure your workouts include exercises for your entire body. Change and modify your program regularly to continue to test your body, and explore new exercises to give your body an added challenge.

Once you have achieved your goals and are satisfied with your results, you still must maintain your activity level to continue to see those results. A total body program that focuses on all of your muscle groups is the key to long-term success.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program. If you have a fitness or training question, e-mail Andrea at letters.kfws@hearstsc.com or write her in care of King Features Weekly Service, P.O. Box 536475, Orlando, FL 32853-6475.

DENTISTRY for the 21st Century

A DEPRESSING EFFECT ON PERIODONTAL TREATMENT

Periodontal (gum) diseases are serious infections that threaten the health of the teeth, as bacteria in plaque cause gum inflammation. Periodontal treatments is needed to prevent tooth loss and other problems. With this in mind, researchers point out that depressed patients have twice the odds of experiencing worse-than-expected outcomes from their treatment. This finding may be due to a depressed person's higher likelihood to continue smoking, which compromises gum health, and failure to comply with post-treatment recommendations. Just as important, researcher founds that depression impairs the immune system, which may slow the body's reaction to fight off infection. Whatever the reason, patients with symptoms of depression who are undergoing periodontal treatment might want to address this issue.

You may not even be aware that your have gum disease because often there is no pain. Periodontal disease will not go away by itself. Preventing and treating the disease in the early stages is the best way to keep your smile healthy. We would like to increase dental awareness and stress the importance of regular dental care. We believe that with preventive dental care, daily brushing and flossing, and a well-balanced diet, people can maintain their teeth and gums in good health well into their later years. Save on Long-Distance Moves

The cost of a long-distance move is a formula based on the miles to be traveled and the weight of the goods, plus the cost of packing and special services surcharges.

De-clutter your home before making the first call to a moving company. Consider whether to move or sell items of questionable value. Sell those items at a garage sale to put money in your pocket and keep them out of the moving van.

Get estimates from a minimum of three moving companies.

There are three types of estimates:

• Non-Binding — The movers will give their best estimate of the costs, but you could be required to pay up to 110 percent of that estimate if the shipment is overweight.

• Binding — Both you and the mover agree to the price, whether the shipment comes in over or under the estimated weight.

• Not-to-Exceed — This estimate guarantees that you'll pay the lower of either the binding estimate or the actual cost.

Ask the estimator for ideas on reducing expenses and avoiding surcharges. Is it cheaper to move or to replace older appliances, riding mowers and snowmobiles?

Ask if there is an additional discount (there should be) for allowing the company to temporarily store your belongings until they can be combined on a truck for a more cost-effective trip.

Handle surcharge items yourself: Disconnect the washer and block the tub, dismantle stereo components and take down ceiling fans.

Do your own packing. Used boxes, crumpled newspaper and tape can go a long way toward saving money. If you purchase boxes, hunt for the best deals. For books, compare the cost of having them moved versus mailing them to yourself book rate.

Be flexible in your moving date. If you can wait until things slow down in the middle of September, you could save up to 15 percent of your costs.

Insist on an inventory of the goods to be shipped. This will ensure that the condition of your belongings is noted before shipment, in the event you have a damage claim.

In summary: Do your homework in advance of a move to save the most money. For more information, call the American Moving and Storage Association at 1-703-683-7410 or go online to http://www.moving.org/.

To Century 21 Annex Realty Clients

Bilingual And Multilingual Agents Offer 'Global Perspective'

Century 21 Annex Realty, Inc., with offices in Quincy and Hanover, has a number of team members whose language skills provide clients with a "world-class" real estate transaction.

Brokers and owners Art Foley and Phyllis Rudnick have served clients throughout greater Boston and the South Shore for more than 25 years. They have seen the region's cultural landscape change over the years to reflect greater diversity – thus creating a growing need for professionals who can speak a number of languages.

Today, the firm employs more than 70 real estate agents, many of whom are equipped to meet the needs of clients from around the globe.

Quincy-based agent Andy Huang speaks three languages: English, Mandarin Chinese and Cantonese Chinese. A native of a small town in South China, Huang enjoys working with the burgeoning Asian community in Quincy and beyond.

"My clients are comfortable with me because I am familiar with their backgrounds and cultures," he said. Huang, who moved to the United States while in high school, learned English in school. He still celebrates his Chinese culture, and even speaks a dialect called Taishanese at home with his family in Quincy.

Gus Confalone, who is also based in the company's Quincy office, grew up in Abruzze, Italy, 150 miles outside of Rome. He moved to the United States in 1970 and learned English by attending night classes at Quincy College.

Since joining Century 21 Annex Realty in 1990, Confalone has won numerous industry awards and developed a large client base through satisfied customer referrals. "When you can speak with someone in their native language, it is much easier to explain the complexities of a real estate transaction," Confalone said. A large Italian population has called South Quincy home for many years.

Orlando Malave, a native of Puerto Rico, is fluent in Spanish and English. He first learned English while he was a student in San Juan and further enhanced his grammar skills while attending Purdue University in Indiana. Like many of his colleagues, he says that watching American television was helpful because it allowed him to hear real-world applications of the language.

Today, Malave lives in Quincy and keeps his Spanish skills sharp by staying in touch with his family.

Hanover-based real estate agent Bay Srisuwanporn was born in Northern Thailand and came to the United States when he was eight-years-old. His experience with Thai language and culture, coupled with his American upbringing, allow him to understand Eastern and Western styles of communicating and negotiating.

Srisuwanporn also learned English through his father, who worked as an English teacher. He still stays closely connected to his Thai roots, with help from the Internet and newspapers.

To learn more about Century 21 Annex Realty call the Quincy office at 617-472-4330 or the Hanover office at 781-829-4210.

REAL ESTATE

Quincy's Dick Flavin Speaker At Conway's Awards Ceremonies

Dick Flavin – known across New England as "a funny guy who has something to say" – brought his unique wit and inimitable style to Jack Conway Real Estate's recent mid-year awards ceremonies, delivering a message that humor is an important ingredient in the formula for success.

Flavin, a longtime Quincy resident, has made a serious study of humor as a strategy in business, in politics and in everyday life. He encouraged the several hundred real estate agents at each of two breakfast meetings to include a sense of humor as part of their business plan.

"Humor and laughter have a way of disarming complicated situations," Flavin told the audience, peppering his remarks with jokes and anecdotes. "You will find that when you are in a good mood, your customers will be in a good mood, and you can't help but create a positive environment for doing business."

Flavin is the author of TIP (According to Tip), a one-man play about former U.S. Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill, that will have its world premiere at the American Repertory Theatre's Zero Arrow Theater in Cambridge this September.

Flavin is also one of America's leading speakers and writers, having made thousands of appearances across America. His television commentaries have appeared on NBC, CNN and WBZ, and he is the winner of seven Emmy Awards for television writing and commentary.

Conway presented more than 70 awards for excellence in real estate listing and sales at the breakfasts, which were held at Lombardo's in Randolph on July 14 and the Radisson-Plymouth on July 15.

"We are so delighted to have Dick Flavin join us this morning," company Chairman Jack Conway said. "Dick's an old friend and he's the best in the business."

Flavin concluded his speech by encouraging the salespeople to "persevere" through changes in the real estate market and the local economy, wrapping the analogy into a fictional story about betting on a horse race. "So remember, when you choose to persevere, it will improve your odds," concluded Flavin, who received an enthusiastic standing ovation from the crowd.

Founded in 1956, Jack Conway & Co. is the largest independent real estate firm in Massachusetts, with more than 900 associates in 43 offices from Boston to Cape Cod. With more than $1.9 billion in sales last year, Conway was ranked 71st among the top real estate firms in the United States by National Relocation and Real Estate Magazine.

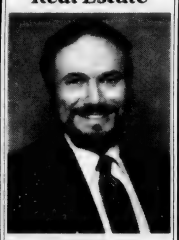
Ideas For The Home

(NAPS) — Shelves and hooks on the walls are great for hanging backpacks and coats, storing shoes or even arts and crafts.

For instance, Gladiator GarageWorks by Whirlpool Corporation has durable products designed specifically for the garage. They offer an entire wall system that comes with paneling, hooks, baskets and shelving as well as appliances to meet all storage needs.



Ants generate a major amount of the requests received by pest management professionals. Because ants are so adaptive, they can be very difficult to control. For more information on ants, visit www.orkin.com or call 1-800-800-ORKIN.

Tempting warm-weather cookouts and food-filled holidays are enough to attract dangerous pests into your home. Sanitation goes a long way in reducing the population of ants and flying, stinging nuisances, but nothing can take the place of a professional. For more information about pests and health, visit www.pestworld.org.

Most home buyers pride themselves on knowing how to spot a solid home or one that needs serious work. Aside from the obvious warning signs — such as damp spots on walls or missing roof shingles — many home buyers may remain unaware of serious yet hard-to-spot problems such as foundation damage. For tips on buying a new or used home, visit www.pillartopost.com.

Consider installing locks that use numbered combination pads to open the door, instead of keys. This can keep kids from getting locked out should they lose their keys. For instance, Kwikset's Powerbolt 1000 is a keyless entry system that can replace a door's existing hardware. It has a touchpad that is easy for young children to use with over 390,000 security code combinations.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Aug. 9, at approximately 12:50 p.m., Officers Paul Matthews and Tom Ford were dispatched to Warwick St. for a family disturbance call. The female caller stated that her ex-boyfriend had threatened to kill her earlier and was now sitting outside her residence in a white Volkswagen. As Officer Ford approached the car, he observed the driver attempt to either hide or retrieve something from the backseat, so he directed both males to face forward and put their hands on the dashboard.

SGT. DAN MINTON

As Officer Ford neared the car, the female caller came running out of the house screaming. "That's them in the white car." The driver then reached down toward a baseball hat. Officer Ford, now at the driver's door, noted that the door was partially open. For his safety, he ordered the driver to step out of the car. When the driver hesitated, Officer Ford opened the door and grabbed the driver by the arm and assisted him out.

As Officer Ford pat-frisked the driver, Officer Matthews arrived on scene and ordered the passenger out of the vehicle. Officers Brian Coen and Steve Cleary arrived and as Officer Coen spoke to the victim, Officer Cleary guarded the suspects.

Officer Ford received permission from the driver to search the car. He initially found a jack knife in the driver's side storage area. As he searched further, Officer Ford saw what appeared to be the handle of a gun under a white shirt in the back seat, the same area where the driver had been moving about. Officer Ford uncovered an INTRA TEC 22 semi automatic handgun. Both males were arrested on the gun charge and removed from the scene.

Officer Matthews interview the victim and learned that the passenger of the vehicle was an ex-boyfriend who came to the apartment earlier in the morning and threatened to kill her. She said that she locked herself in the bathroom until he left. When her ex-boyfriend returned two hours later, she feared for her life and called 911.

The driver, a 20-year-old male from Dorchester, was arrested and charged with "Possessing a Firearm without a Firearm ID." The passenger, the ex-boyfriend, was arrested and charged with "Possessing a Firearm without a Firearm ID" and "Threatening To Commit a Crime" (the threat to kill his girlfriend).

The quick response by the Quincy Police prevented the ex-boyfriend from carrying out his threat to kill. Family disturbances are the most dangerous and unpredictable of calls for police officers. Training was the key. The officer took charge of the situation and separated the suspect from the weapon, thereby eliminating a potentially dangerous and life threatening situation.

Nice work!

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

It is surprising how much people can do when they think they can. Self-confidence, providing of course that it does not become vanity, is one of the most helpful characteristics a person can possess.

Yes, an outstanding trait of a successful man is self-confidence. Whatever he may think of others, he believes in himself. He believes he can do anything he sets out to do. He has not only faith but courage. But such self-confidence is not conceit. It is always based upon solid things such as knowledge, skill, and the willingness to work. Self-confidence is not a gift of nature, but one of her awards that anyone can earn. .

It has been said that there are no limitations in what you can do except the limitations of your own mind as to what you cannot do.

Don't think you cannot. Think that you can. . .

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A previous misunderstanding continues to taint the atmosphere to some extent in the early part of the week. But cooler heads prevail, and the situation eases by week's end.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) While the artistic aspect of the Divine Bovine is well-served this week, that practical side is also getting the sort of recognition that could lead to a new and well-deserved opportunity.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) With home-related matters taking on more importance this week, now could be the time to make some long-deferred purchases. But shop carefully for the best quality at the best price.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Congratulations. While that family problem might still rankle, it should be easing thanks to your efforts to calm the waters. Also, a workplace situation seems to be moving in your favor.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) The Big Cat's energy levels should be rather high these days, and you might do well to tackle any tasks that still need doing. This will clear the way for those upcoming projects.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Someone's criticism might not be as negative as you perceive. Actually, it could be helpful. Discuss the matter with your critic, and you both could learn something valuable.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) A business matter could cause some friction among your colleagues. But once again, that logical mind of yours comes to the rescue. And the sooner it does, the better!

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) There might still be some heated temper flare-ups out there. But your sensible self should advise you to stay out of these situations until things cool down and calm is restored.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Changing your mind could be the right thing to do if you can't resolve your doubts. You might want to discuss the matter with someone whose advice you trust.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) The Sea Goat's merrier side dominates this week, and this means that, despite your usual busy schedule, you'll be able to squeeze in parties and all sorts of fabulous fun times.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) An educational opportunity could lead to something other than what you had planned. But keep an open mind, and before you decide to turn it down, check it out.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) The Piscean wit and wisdom helps you work through a situation that might have been accidentally or even deliberately obscured. What you unravel could prove to be very revealing.

BORN THIS WEEK: Loyalty is important to you. You demand it, but you also give it generously and lovingly.

United Way Donates $9,000 For Fitness, Recreation Programs

United Way of Massachusetts Bay announces it is investing more than $9,000 in fitness and recreational programs in Quincy.

Grants to Quincy organizations will support hurdles at the Quincy Track Club and dance equipment at the South Shore YMCA.

The grants mark the first-year investments of a partnership between UWMB, Good Sports Inc. and the Boston Youth Sports Initiative to distribute $1 million worth of sports and fitness equipment and apparel across the state.

To date, this partnership has approved equipment awards totaling more than $484,000 statewide to over 100 organizations.

"For many urban youth, the costs associated with participating in a recreational or organized sports program are prohibitive," said Milton J. Little Jr., president and CEO at United Way of Massachusetts Bay.

"Our work is focused on ensuring kids grow up healthy and strong. This team effort with local fitness programs aims to remove those hurdles and open the doors to a healthier lifestyle for our young people."

The grants are part of a $2.6 million initiative UWMB is leading to provide information and tools that will help young people make healthy choices that will help to reduce obesity rates and improve the physical well-being of children across the region.

The South Shore YMCA, 79 Coddington St., Quincy, is open to 12 men's basketball teams this fall beginning Sept. 23.

O'Donnell Elected Vice President Mass. Registers Of Deeds Association

Norfolk County Register of Deeds William P. O'Donnell has been elected vice president of the Massachusetts Registers and Assistant Registers of Deeds Association.

The association is made up of the elected and appointed administrators of the 21 regional deeds registries in Massachusetts.

"The Registers Association fulfills an important role in coordinating efforts to modernize Massachusetts' land records system," O'Donnell said. "I appreciate having this opportunity to work on these issues."

O'Donnell said new technologies have been introduced, including computerized document management and Internet research access.

WILLIAM O'DONNELL

"Current initiatives include the potential of integrating land records with municipal geographic information systems (GIS), and the possibility of electronic document recording. Our goal is to make these technologies work for both real estate professionals and the general public, while continuing our historic commitment to security, accuracy, and accessibility," O'Donnell added.

O'Donnell has served as Norfolk County's Register of Deeds since 2002. He has also served as an elected county commissioner.

A graduate of Boston College Law School, Georgetown University, and Xaverian Brothers High School, O'Donnell was admitted to the Massachusetts Bar in 1985, and currently serves as an officer of the Norfolk County Bar Association.

O'Donnell and his wife, Susan J. (Thornton) O'Donnell, live in Norwood with their three children.

Coyote Sightings On Increase Throughout City

(Con't From Page 1)

Bryant Ave. and another was found dead at the Furnace Brook Golf Course, according to Conboy.

"Coyotes are not afraid of humans but they tend to stay away from them," he said. "The entire city is vulnerable because they can travel many miles in one night."

Coyotes prey on small animals, such as squirrels and raccoons. They tend to hover near yards containing bird feeders because small animals eat bird food from the feeders, he said.

Coyotes usually teach their young to hunt at this time of year, he said.

Coyotes are part of the same family as foxes, dogs and wolves - the canids. They vary in size but generally are four to four-and-a-half feet in length and stand 18 to 25 inches tall. They can weigh 20 to 50 pounds.

Like all warm-blooded animals, coyotes may contract rabies. If anyone suspects an animal has rabies, contact Conboy at 617-376-1364.

Residents should take several steps to avoid attracting coyotes:

- Do not leave trash containers open;
- Do not leave food unattended outside;
- The use of guard animals discourage coyotes;
- Noise and shock devices distract coyotes;
- Smell and taste aversion substances discourage contact.

Gutro, McCauley Concerned

Quincy Legion Post May Be Taken For Concourse Project

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

The final portion of the Quincy Center Concourse project - the middle section traversing Hancock St. to McGrath Parkway - is expected to be the most tedious and controversial part of the plan because it may involve several land takings by the city.

Among the parcels that may be impacted are places like the Quincy Legion Post on Mechanic St.

According to initial plans, the final phase of the project calls for construction of a roadway that runs from the Paul D. Harold Bridge in the Parkingway across Hancock St. to McGrath Highway.

At a recent meeting on the concourse project, Phelan called the last phase "the most controversial" portion of the plan.

"The middle part will be the crux of the project and the most difficult part of it," Phelan said last week.

Related Story On Page 9

The exact path of the Hancock St. crossing is still being ironed out, but officials said they will have a more concrete plan in the fall.

Phelan said that portion of the project is still at least two years away from construction, and specific land takings and other issues are not set in stone at this point. Regardless, city officials have said this will require several land takings.

According to several Legionnaires who attended last week's meeting, the Quincy Legion Post parcel will most likely be affected by the concourse project.

"Every plan we've seen would impact the Legion Post, so we feel reasonably sure the city will take it," said George McCray, executive committee member of the Quincy Legion Post.

If the city decides to take the property by eminent domain, it has assured Legionnaires that it will make a concerted effort to find a suitable new home, said McCray.

"We have no intention of leaving the city," he said.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro said he intends to introduce a resolution at the Sept. 6 city council meeting urging the city to make a good faith effort to relocate the Legion Post in Quincy.

"I think the City of Quincy has a moral obliga

Completion Expected By Start Of School Year

Repairs Underway On Merrymount School Roof

Crews are repairing the leaky roof above the Media Center at the Merrymount School and work is expected to be completed in time for the start of the school year, according to Mayor William Phelan.

The $130,000 project is part of a capital improvement bond initiated by Phelan and approved by the city council last year. The bond will invest $2.5 million into the repair of city schools and other public buildings.

"Students and faculty will benefit from a better learning environment now that this chronic problem is fixed," said Phelan. "I am proud of the improvements that we are making city-wide and I appreciate the council's support of this important investment in the future of our city."

School buildings throughout Quincy have seen repairs including the roof at North Quincy High School, the gym floors at Atlantic Middle School and Broad Meadows, the roof at Broad Meadows, the HVAC at Marshall School and others. Improvements are also being made to the city's fire stations including the roofs at Quincy Point and North Quincy.

Mike Ryan, director of Buildings and Maintenance, said he was pleased with the progress .nade.

"We are addressing source problems by fixing our roofs first," he said. "The mayor's bonding initiative has allowed the city to move away from a 'band-aid' approach and make real, long-term fixes to the problems that plague our city schools and buildings. Things are going great thus far."

Gutro Wants Matter On Council Agenda

Asians Reported No Complaints During Nov. Election, Says Shea

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Asian voters in Quincy reported no complaints to the city's election office about voting problems during last November's election, according to City Clerk Joseph Shea.

Although no problems were reported, Shea said the office will recruit more Asian interpreters and make more Chinese-language materials available to voters in time for the Sept. 13 preliminary election.

"We are prepared to do more, but we didn't receive any complaints about the issue during the election," said Shea.

Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro recently sent a letter to Mayor William Phelan and Council President Frank McCauley requesting that the council address allegations that some Asian voters encountered impediments during the November election.

Gutro said the council should take up the issue prior to the preliminary election.

McCauley said he would discuss Gutro's request with Phelan this week.

Gutro's request follows the release of a survey by a national advocacy group detailing complaints by minority voters of difficulties at polling places during last November's election.

The Asian American Legal Defense and Education Fund highlighted several examples of voters who were turned away from the polls, denied access to translated materials, and insufficiently notified of their polling sites, according to letters the group sent to state and local election officials last March.

The New York-based group said voters at 11 polling stations in Boston, Quincy and Lowell faced "multiple barriers" similar to these experienced by some black and Latino voters in Florida in 2000.

According to the report, Asian voters in Quincy complained of a lack of translators at one polling station and of poll workers who failed to give provisional ballots to voters not on the rolls. Election workers are required to offer a provisional ballot if they are uncertain the voter is registered; the ballot is counted if the voter's registration is later verified.

There are 30 precincts and 25 polling locations in Quincy, according to the election office.

Shea said six Asian translators were available for last November's election. He plans on boosting that number for the upcoming elections.

"I believe we have a competent and committed group of election workers in the City of Quincy," said Gutro. "But whatever the allegations are they need to be taken seriously, and the city council deserves the opportunity to know they have been taken seriously."

Shea said he first learned about complaints in the spring when he was contacted by Secretary of State William Galvin's office. The advocacy group released a report detailing the problems to Galvin.

Gutro said it is incumbent upon the election office to share with the city council a copy of the Secretary of State's report along with any changes in policy that have been instituted since the allegations were noted.

Residents with questions are encouraged to contact the election office at 617-376-1141.

Quincy Guardsmen Leave For Retraining; Iraq Duty

Nine members of the 1st Battalion, 102nd Field Artillery, based at the Quincy Armory, departed Saturday for a brief retraining period and eventual deployment in Iraq.

National Guard headquarters in Milford declined to say where the training would take place but those attending a ceremony for them Friday felt it would be Texas.

"They will be trained at a military facility in the United States," said Lt. Col. Paul "Greg" Smith, spokesman for the Massachusetts National Guard in Milford.

"They will be there for a few weeks training as a security force to guard installations, convoys and civilians, basic soldiering."

Smith said the nine will be replacements for soldiers who will be leaving Iraq due to a medical conditions, injuries or hardships at home.

The 1st Battalion has deployed about 200 soldiers in Iraq, most of whom were sent there last year after retraining as security forces.

27-Year Veteran Succeeds O'Connell

Timothy Pettinelli City's New Fire Chief

Timothy Pettinelli is adding another chapter to the Pettinelli family's long history of serving the City of Quincy.

The 27-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department last week was appointed to serve as the city's new fire chief.

Mayor William Phelan appointed Pettinelli, 53, to succeed Paul O'Connell, who retired in June.

In a swearing-in ceremony in the city council chambers, Pettinelli took the oath after serving as acting chief for the past month.

City Clerk Joseph Shea administered the oath to Pettinelli while Phelan looked on.

The new chief held praise for his immediate predecessor.

"We have a well-trained and highly motivated department and I thank Chief O'Connell for leaving that with me," said Pettinelli. "I will do my best to make my family and the city proud of the work I do."

A 27-year veteran of the Quincy Fire Department, Pettinelli has risen through the ranks, serving as firefighter, lieutenant, captain and deputy chief.

"He's a professional and we are grateful he's decided to assume the responsibility of leading the Quincy Fire Department in the future," Phelan said of Pettinelli.

Pettinelli's ascension to chief comes at a very important time for the Quincy Fire Department as nearly one-third of firefighters have been hired within the past three years, said Phelan.

"We've seen an unbelievable amount of turnover in the past three years," he said.

The Quincy Fire Department is comprised of 214 employees, 141 firefighters, 64 officers and nine other employees. There are eight fire stations in Quincy, making it the largest department on the South Shore.

The Pettinelli family has a long history of serving the city. The chief's father, Jack Pettinelli, served on the Quincy Fire Department for 32 years. His uncle, Robert, served on the fire department for 32 years. His uncle, Guido, served on the Quincy Police Department for 32 years, many of them as the school safety officer.

Wednesday Night Voter Deadline For Sept. 13 Election

The Election Department at City Hall remained open until 8 p.m. Wednesday night to register new voters for the Sept. 13 preliminary election.

Unregistered voters wishing to vote in the preliminary election for school committee had those extra hours to register to be eligible to do so.

Mary And Frank

The community and The Quincy Sun have lost two good friends.

Mary Vallier died Aug. 9 at age 91 and Frank Kearns Aug. 13 at 92 just four days later.

MARY VALLIER

FRANK KEARNS

Both were honored as The Quincy Sun Citizen of the Year for outstanding community service. Frank was the 1991 recipient and Mary the 1993.

Both were blessed with long, active lives and Quincy was fortunate that each gave so many of their years so freely to the city they came to love.

Mary was born in Detroit and Frank in Somerville. Quincy became their hometown for 52 and 59 years, respectively.

Both gave of themselves with their heart and without fanfare.

Mary was one of the founders of DOVE (Domestic Violence Ended) in 1978 and helped establish a Quincy shelter for battered women and abused children.

"We try to give them a new life," she said.

She was still doing that into her 80's.

Mary was active in a number of organizations including the Quincy Council on Aging and the Quincy Human Relations Commission. She was one of the organizers of South Shore Mental Health for Alcohol Clinic.

And the little things she did were — well — they were Mary.

Helping to serve seniors at the Mayor's Thanksgiving Day Dinner. And at Christmas, serving dinner to the homeless at Father Bill's Place.

Sending cards to and baking cookies for shut-ins. And knitting afghans for babies born to families of students at the United First Parish Church School where she was honorary chairwoman of Religious Education.

Frank was a community activist and advocate for the city's elderly, homeless, lonely, needy and poor.

"I just like to help," he said.

He really started shifting into high gear after retiring from the U.S. Postal Service in 1977 at age 65. He was appointed to the Quincy Council on Aging by Mayor Arthur Tobin and after that was named to 15 community assistance groups and organizations.

Among them: Quincy Community Action, South Shore Elder Services, Quincy Fair Housing Board, Quincy Housing Authority Board of Commissioners, Inter Agency Council of the South Shore.

He also served as a Silver Hair legislator representing the Norfolk senatorial district including Quincy.

He was so involved in the community that friends called him "the other mayor of Quincy."

But, like Mary, it was the little things he quietly did for those who needed help that stood out. An encouraging word to those desperately needing one. Taking someone to the hospital for radiation treatment. Or seeing to it that a needy family had food on the table and fuel in the oil tank with the thermometer around zero.

That was Mary and Frank, doing what, for them, came naturally.

They will be missed — but surely remembered.

ROSEMARY WAHLBERG was about to take the trolley tour of the Adams National Historical Park the other day and was checking out the Visitors' Center when she spotted a familiar face.

WAHLBERG

"I noticed a man and his wife enter," she said. "They approached the desk and were asking about the times of the tours and such. I looked at the fellow and thought, 'He looks familiar. Is he a teacher at the high school?'"

No, he wasn't. He was Senator Paul Sarbanes of Maryland, a familiar face from CSPAN.

"I approached him and said, 'Welcome to Quincy, senator.' He smiled and asked, 'Where are you from?' I answered, 'I am from Quincy and taking this tour regularly is a required activity for the citizenry of this city.'

"For a moment he looked as if he bought my story, but then he smiled. The sharp Ranger recognized the senator and his wife and quickly had them receive a proper Ranger host for an individualized tour.

"We met again as the senator and his wife were ending the tour from the mansion. They both looked delighted with their day, all smiles, and they both shook my hand as they left saying what a wonderful visit they had.

"It sure made my day. The senator is one of my favorites from watching the Senate on CSPAN."

DON'T KNOW IF you caught it or not but the headline on last week's column had a glitch in it.

It read: "Those Five Open Ward Seats". Should have been: "Those Five Unopposed Ward Seats".

Three open school committee seats brought out 12 candidates — wonder how many five open ward council seats would attract?

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A postcard reproduction from the 1930s showing the Boston Gear Works factory in Norfolk Downs. The company expanded and added more buildings to this view before it sold the two-story building and several others adjacent to it in 1978. After a 20-year stint as the Shuster Research Laboratories the buildings are now being expanded and converted into condominiums. Fifty years ago there were over 40 industrial companies located in North Quincy. Today, there is only a handful. The demise of these companies and the conversions of their properties have helped transition Quincy from a blue-collar city to the attractive cosmopolitan one of today. The building at the top left, albeit modified, is still home to some of Boston Gear's headquarters staff. Founded in 1877, the company moved here from Boston one hundred years ago in 1905. All of its manufacturing operations are now in Charlotte, N.C. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Quincy College Needs More Parking For Students

Something should be done about parking areas for Quincy College and the Quincy Center Post Office. Quincy College uses the parking spaces surrounding the library and post office, especially for night classes since the parking restrictions are lifted at 6 p.m.

There is never parking spaces for people who simply need to be at the post office. The spaces in front of the library across from the post office are constantly full, and the spaces on the street beside the post office are also constantly full.

It should not be necessary to drive around the block for 20 minutes before being able to find a parking space in order to go to the post office. This is a problem no matter what time of day it is.

Quincy College should make parking more accessible for their students. The college has grown and expanded, but has not expanded its parking. Perhaps a parking sticker that is paid for once a year, which would allow the students to park in the garage behind the school, rather than making students pay a daily or monthly fee to use that garage, would be a good idea.

There should be parking made available for the night students who take classes above the businesses next to the post office so the students are not parking in the spaces which should be available for those who need to use the post office.

Quincy College's student body has grown and since the school is a commuter school there should be parking available for all of its students, including the evening class students. They should not have to park in the spaces which are for the businesses around the college.

Instead of building another set of office condominiums in the next available open space near the post office and library, perhaps a better use of the space would be a small garage or parking area for the college students and/or the patrons of the post office.

Fishing Program A Memorable Experience

Recently my granddaughter, Elia, had her first fishing experience. It was through a program called "Fishing 101" sponsored by the Quincy Beaches and Coastal Commission and the Harborview Residents Committee. Leo Kelly is the chairman of the commission and also Ward 1 councillor.

The beach was beautiful, down off Doane Street behind the fire station. The staff was pleasant, patient and helpful. Elia was casting like a pro in no time. She caught a couple of minnows in a net with real bait, had a snack and went home with a pole and goody bag. She had the best time. They should be commended for a truly memorable outing.

Hurricane Carol Batters Quincy $1 Million Damage

Aug. 25-31
51 Years Ago

Hurricane Carol, the most severe storm since 1938, battered Quincy for three hours Aug. 31 with winds of 93 mph and gusts up to 125 mph, causing damage estimated at $1 million.

City Manager William J. Deegan Jr. declared a state of emergency as all electric power was out in the city and live wires dangled perilously from poles.

No lives were lost in Quincy although watchers from the shore reported they saw several boats with people in them disappear, including three men and a girl in a dory off Houghs Neck.

Some 100 trees were felled in Quincy. Elm Street and Faxon Road were blocked by fallen trees, another fell on a house at 100 Sherman St., Wollaston, and three more were uprooted at 27 Quarry St., West Quincy.

Rear Commodore Edward Spiers ordered the Squantum Yacht Club evacuated when five four-ton floats broke their three-inch thick chains and were in position to batter the clubhouse.

The controversial Kiddieland, the children's amusement park that recently opened over the protest of neighbors on Wollaston Beach, was badly damaged, bent out of shape by the high winds.

Three days later candles were still flickering in one-quarter of Quincy homes and the Quincy Electric Co. said it might be a week before power is restored to some subscribers.

Meanwhile, the fifth hurricane of the season, called Edna, was reported developing as a 30 mph squall in the Leeward and Windward Islands of the Caribbean.

Mahoney Announces Committee, Website

School committee candidate Anne Mahoney announces the formation of her election committee and the launch of her website.

Her election committee will be headed by her father, Joseph H. Mulligan.

"I am excited to work with my father," said Mahoney. "Together, we represent two generations working toward a common goal for the kids of Quincy."

Mulligan was an educator in the Boston Public Schools from 1965 until his retirement in 1992. He was also a past president of the Plumbers Local 12 Union.

"Both of my parents have made it clear to me and my siblings the value of education," said Mahoney.

In addition to Mulligan's appointment, Mahoney has appointed Jeffrey Graeber, partner at the Quincy-based law firm, Graeber, Davis and Cantwell, to serve as treasurer.

Mahoney also announced the launch of her website, www.mahoneyschoolcommittee.com. The website has been live for three weeks and is proving to be a very useful tool in communicating to constituents, she said.

"The grassroots campaign is working and people are spreading the word," said Mahoney, who intends to set up a web log, or "blog" on her website. A blog is an online journal where the community can use the space as a forum for open discussion about Quincy Public Schools.

"It's simple to access the blog and join the online discussion," said Mahoney.

The blog will be accessible by clicking on "comments" at the bottom of each entry.

Final Design Ready In Fall

2nd Phase Of Concourse To Begin Next Spring

Construction will begin next spring on the $1.3 million second phase of the Quincy Center Concourse, city officials recently predicted.

When finished, McGrath Highway - to be renamed McGrath Parkway - will resemble a boulevard, with new traffic signals, a median strip, landscaping upgrades, aesthetic improvements and a more pedestrian-friendly thoroughfare, according to city officials.

The ambitious project will revamp McGrath Highway from Washington St. to Route 3A on Southern Artery.

At a public hearing held last week at the Thomas Crane Public Library, city officials said they expect to have a final design ready by the fall, in time to seek bids for construction to begin in the spring.

When completed, the concourse will create an east-west roadway connecting Burgin Parkway to Route 3A on Southern Artery. City officials believe the roadway will ease traffic throughout Quincy Center and serve as a linchpin for the city's redevelopment efforts.

Mayor William Phelan called it "a good step forward toward completing the entire road."

Ward 1 Councillor Leo Kelly, Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi and Ward 5 Councillor Doug Gutro attended the meeting, with Raymondi expressing concern about whether the concourse project will complement a long-delayed state project that is supposed to improve flood control in the area. The state project is worth millions of dollars but has not been funded.

O'Donnell assured Raymondi that the concourse project would be constructed with the flood control plan in mind, and the city would not have to rip up roads or sidewalks when the flood plan is ok'd.

Phelan prodded state elected officials to release funds for the project.

Boat Excise Taxes Topic Of Sept. 6 Committee Meeting

The city council's oversight committee is expected to examine the issue of boat excise taxes on Tuesday, Sept. 6 at 6:45 p.m. in the council chambers.

Specifically, the committee is expected to address a request by Ward 2 Councillor Dan Raymondi seeking information about boat excise taxes.

Raymondi wants to know how many boats are, or were, subject to boat excise taxes in fiscal years 2002-2005. Also, he has requested to know what was the amount of boat excise taxes collected in those same fiscal years.

And, Raymondi wants to know how much money was collected in excise taxes from 2002-2005, and how many boaters paid excise taxes in those years.

FATHER BILL MCCARTHY (left) enjoys the 11th Annual Father Bill's Place Food Fest and Auction, held recently at Waterworks in Marina Bay. Pictured with him are John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, and Councillor Joseph Finn, former executive director of Father Bill's. The event raised roughly $350,000 for the homeless shelter.

11th Annual Event Most Successful Yet

Food Fest, Auction Raises $350,000 For Fr. Bill's Place

It would be an understatement to say the 11th annual Father Bill's Place Food Fest and Auction was a success this year.

According to John Yazwinski, executive director of Father Bill's Place, the event raised approximately $350,000, making it the most successful fundraiser yet. About 1,000 people attended this year's event, he said.

"The food fest sets the tone for the upcoming year as we try to ensure that we help everyone who needs it," said Yazwinski. "The restaurants, donors and volunteers were just unbelievable - it was a great community effort."

GUEST AUCTIONEERS AT the event included Pete Brock, former New England Patriots lineman; Jim Wells, food fest chairman and member of Father Bill's Place board of directors; and Scott Wahle, WBZ-TV news anchor and honorary chairman of the event.

The food fest featured delicacies prepared by chefs from many of the finest restaurants on the South Shore. Local wine distributors were on hand with a selection of wines to sample and enjoy.

Scott Wahle, WBZ-TV morning newscaster and a South Shore native, once again was the honorary chairperson for the event.

Former New England Patriots football player and WBCN radio commentator Pete Brock was this year's celebrity auctioneer. Entertainment was provided by The I-Land Rokkerz, a steel band.

The auction featured items donated by many local businesses, including travel, sports memorabilia, entertainment packages and tickets to local sporting events.

All proceeds from the food fest and auction go directly to the guests at Father Bill's Place, a shelter for the homeless.

Yazwinski said the nonprofit needs to raise $1 million in private donations each year to provide services to its guests. The food fest and auction go a long way toward reaching that goal, he said.

Last year, the event raised roughly $280,000, said Yazwinski.

Still Traveling The World

Kilroy Photo Contest Deadline Is Sept. 10

For those who think Kilroy, the one who "was here," retired after World War II, it may come as a surprise to learn that he is still traveling the world, far from his birthplace at the Fore River Shipyard.

Only the other day, the phrase "Kilroy Was Here" was spotted at the Eiffel Tower in Paris and the Western Wall in Jerusalem, reminders of the 60th anniversary of the war's end and Quincy's part in the winning of it.

Photos of the slogan on location were submitted in a contest, co-sponsored by Discover Quincy, the USS Salem and The Quincy Sun, to find the old wartime phrase in famous and exotic places around the world.

Flyers containing the slogan are available online at www.whereiskilroy.com, ready to be taken along on pleasure or business trips and photographed in unusual places. The pictures may be submitted through Saturday, Sept. 10.

Prizes will be awarded for the Most Original Photo, the Most Exotic Locale and more. Several of the photos already submitted for the contest are posted online at www.whereiskilroy.com.

"We're thrilled that so many residents have embraced the Kilroy photo contest as a way to help revive interest in 'Kilroy Was Here,'" said Jennifer Logue, executive director of Discover Quincy.

"We hope Kilroy will help spotlight the role our city played in the Allied war effort — both through the many ships built at the Quincy shipyard and through the huge morale boost 'Kilroy Was Here' provided our troops when they needed it most."

James Kilroy was a wartime rivet inspector at the Fore River Shipyard who began scribbling the phrase on bulkheads to prove that he had been there. Warships often left the Yard for ports around the world with the mysterious words still visible.

They intrigued the troops so much that, confronted with the absurdity of it all, they too began scribbling the words in the most unlikely places, like the men's room at the Potsdam Conference and the Imperial Palace in Tokyo.

The Kilroy photo contest is only one in a series of Discovery Quincy events and promotions designed to raise awareness of Quincy's connection to "Kilroy Was Here.

Contest organizers are currently sponsoring a postcard campaign to encourage the US Navy to name a new ship the USS Kilroy Was Here and to urge the US Postal Service to issue a Kilroy stamp.

For more information on the photo contest or the postcard campaign, call Jennifer Logue at 617-657-0527 or Michael Condon at 617-479-7900 or visit www.discoverquincy.com.

Glen Buscher catches Kilroy casing the Tomsk Railroad Station.

Quincy Mosque Hosts Successful Open House

The Islamic Center of New England (ICNE) hosted a successful open house for the Quincy community last Saturday at its Quincy Mosque, 470 South St.

About 50 people attended the open house that started with a recitation of the Qur'an. The topics discussed included the historical significance of the Qur'an in the life of Muslims. An open Q & A session followed where frank but friendly questions explored issues that ranged from views on terrorism to Muslim-non-Muslim relations.

Visitors mingled and got to know some of their Muslim neighbors in a friendly atmosphere as lunch and refreshments were served in the social session. Some ICNE board members were present to greet the Mosque's visitors.

"I've come here a number of times before, and I've always felt this feeling of love here," said the Rev. David Godfrey of Quincy First Church of Christ Scientists.

Visitors also got the opportunity to observe the noon prayer as the Muslim members performed it in congregation. Many visitors left appreciating the opportunity to visit a mosque and to engage in this kind of dialogue.

"Thank you for opening your doors. I live in Quincy and appreciate knowing my neighbors," said one visitor.

The ICNE promised many more events to come, starting with a barbecue this Sunday. All are invited to attend.

Injured Boater Home; Coast Guard Opens Probe

Jeffrey Crispo, 35, of Houghs Neck is home from South Shore Hospital recovering from broken bones suffered when his boat was rammed by a catamaran ferry in the channel between Peddock's and Nut Islands.

Meanwhile, his motor boat and a former lobster boat that also sank in the mishap were taken from the waters of the channel and inspected as the Coast Guard opened an investigation into the accident.

The probe is expected to take months to find answers to the questions: Why didn't the crew of the catamaran see the boats? and What was the role of the weather in the Aug. 13 collision?

Jeffrey's wife, Nicole, 33, his brother, Steven, 43, and a friend, Dana Gagne, 35, returning from a barbecue, were stalled in the channel, known as West Gut, when the former lobster boat broke down.

They were attempting to fix it when the catamaran ferry roared through them. The four jumped into the water before their boats were struck and were rescued by the Coast Guard from Point Allerton in Hull.

Steven Crispo and Gagne were treated and released from South Shore Hospital but Jeffrey Crispo, the most seriously injured, remained for five days. Nicole Crispo was not injured.

The catamaran, the Nora Vittoria, which was returning from a whale-watch with no passengers but a crew of five at the time, was returned to service the next day. The captain passed a sobriety test, police said.

Stroke Risk Screening At Squantum Church Aug. 31

Residents of the Quincy area can be screened Aug. 31 to reduce their risk of having a stroke.

Life Line Screening will be at First Church of Squantum, 164 Bellevue Road. Appointments will begin at 9 a.m.

A stroke, also known as a "brain attack," is ranked as the third leading killer in the world, and the second among women. Through preventive screenings, the risk of having a stroke can be greatly reduced.

Screenings are fast, painless and low cost. They involve the use of ultrasound technology, and scan for potential health problems related to: blocked arteries which can lead to a stroke and aortic aneurysms which can lead to a ruptured aorta and hardening of the arteries in the legs, which are a strong predictor of heart disease.

Also offered for men and women is a bone density screening to assess their risk for osteoporosis.

Each screening requires 10 minutes or less to complete. A complete vascular screening package, including the Stroke/Carotid Artery, Abdominal Aortic Aneurysm and Ankle Brachial Index (hardening of the arteries) screenings is $109. A complete vascular package including the osteoporosis screening is $129.

Life Line Screening, based in Cleveland, Ohio, was established in 1993. Over 45 ultrasound teams are on staff to travel to local communities.

For more information regarding the screenings or to schedule an appointment, call 1-800-697-9721. Preregistration is required.

Biggest Crowd Ever At 18th August Moon Festival

A crowd estimated at more than 6,000 — the most folks ever — feasted and otherwise enjoyed the 18th annual August Moon Festival Sunday at President's Plaza.

"It was a super turnout," said John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., (QARI), the hosts for the events.

"Last year we had 5,000. There were more this year. I'd estimate there were more than 6,000. Their cars filled the parking lot and still there was not enough room.

"We had three shuttle buses running continuously from the Quincy and North Quincy MBTA stations. They were crowded all day.

"And the Quincy Police Department did a fabulous job responding to the traffic challenge."

The number of non-Asians who attended the festival was up, too, Brothers noted..

"There were more non-Asians there than in previous years," he said. "As the event grows, so do the number of non-Asians.

"I would say some 15 or 20 per cent of the crowd was non-Asian, sampling the delicacies and enjoying the entertainment.""

The day may not be that far off when the traditional moon cake of the August festival joins the pasta of Italy and the corned beef of Ireland as a staple of Quincy's holiday cuisine.

Moon cakes and gifts were offered by two of the grand sponsors, Expressway Toyota and Mohegan Sun/ Sunshine Travel, and Kam Man Marketplace gave food samples and gift coupons.

But by far the most popular offering, as the temperature reached for the 90-degree mark, were the stands that sold drinks and slushes.

Entertainment went on all day long from the opening Lion Dance by the Huang Qiang Gang Qing Group at 11:15 a.m. to the Fashion Show by the North Quincy High School Thomas Jefferson Forum and Asian Culture Group at 3:20 p.m.

Most popular of the newly added entertainment specialties was the Samurai Taiko Drumming Group, based in Quincy, practicing an art that has 1,500 years of history in Japan.

Presidents' Hill Stairwell Renovation Completed

The stairwell connecting Presidents' Hill to Burgin Parkway will be reopened later this week, Mayor William Phelan announces.

The public stairwell linking Presidents Lane to Burgin Parkway provides hundreds of residents access to the Quincy Center train station and downtown Quincy. The city rebuilt the crumbling stairs, installed new railings and additional lighting. The vegetation was cleared back from the stairs for additional safety.

Attractive landscaping is expected to be added this fall, the mayor said.

Total cost for the project was roughly $70,000.

Phelan said he was proud to see the project completed on time.

"Our downtown is closer to our neighborhoods than many people realize and we will continue to do what we can to encourage people to enjoy downtown Quincy," said Phelan.

Be Aware Of 'Toxic' Mortgage Terms

Predatory Loans Can Make Homebuyers Prey

(NAPS) - Purchasing a home is a complicated endeavor, but many homebuyers find the process of securing a mortgage to be especially daunting.

Predatory lending is hard to define, but generally subprime loans are considered predatory if they incorporate "abusive" terms that can strip equity in the property from the mortgagee through excessive interest rates, points or other fees unrelated to the lender's increased risk. But not all subprime loans are predatory.

Some homebuyers, due to their credit history or other factors, can qualify for only a subprime mortgage, which is a loan provided by a lender at an interest rate higher than "prime," the rate lenders charge buyers with more established credit histories. There are, however, "toxic" mortgage terms that subprime borrowers should avoid, such as: high prepayment fees that make it very costly, even impossible, to refinance to a less expensive loan and mandatory arbitration clauses that deny borrowers access to the courts to settle disputes.

This can all sound very scary, but homebuyers don't have to be alone in their quest for their new home. "We're taking a strong stance against the practice by some unconscionable lenders to trap consumers into toxic loans that benefit the lender and not the consumer," said All Mansell, president of National Association of REALTORS ® and CEO of Coldwell Banker Residential Brokerage in Salt Lake City. He recommends that homebuyers learn the consequences of some subprime loans that work against their best interests.

To help with that education process, and with the other tasks associated with a home purchase, buyers can consult an Accredited Buyer's Representative (ABR). Agents who have earned the ABR(R) designation have taken specialized training that addresses the many aspects of the home purchase process. Quincy To Observe World War II End

Quincy will observe the 60th anniversary of the end of World War II Friday, Sept. 2, at 9 a.m. aboard the USS Salem, berthed at the old Fore River Shipyard.

Veterans who plan to attend should contact Quincy Veterans Services at 617-376-1192, one of the sponsors along with the Quincy Veterans Council and the city.

'Voters Confused On Issue,' He Says

Keegan Requests Documents On High School Project

Candidate for school committee Joe Keegan is making a formal request to the City of Quincy regarding correspondence between the state School Building Authority (SBA) and the city that has taken place during the past three months.

Keegan is also requesting any architectural plans or blueprints from the city that they have received from Tishman Construction Corp. in regard to the high school project. Treasurer Timothy Cahill's office recently said the city has not submitted any detailed specifications for its preferred high school or for the plan SBA has approved.

The city recently dropped its request of Cahill's office for copies of his meeting schedule and those of his spokeswoman, Eileen O'Connor. This request came after SBA rejected the city's latest design for a new high school and shot down 90 percent funding for a Central Middle School project that city officials thought was a lock.

"During my recent door knocking campaign the number one issue amongst the voters has been confusion on the high school project," said Keegan. "This is a project that has been at somewhat of an impasse for too long and things need to get underway."

Keegan said many voters have expressed frustration over the lack of information that they have with regard to details of the project.

"I am making a request to the city to provide me with the details that we don't have yet such as, are there any blueprints prepared that we the voters have not seen? And what correspondence has the city had in the past three months regarding the high school project with SBA," he said.

Keegan said, "The voters have the right to know what our government is doing with regard to this project and they have made it clear to me that they do not know what is going on."

The candidate for school committee said he would like to see the project get underway as soon as possible in order to secure the 90 percent reimbursement rate for the high school project.

A Job Well Done

By LT. DAN MINTON

On Aug. 5, Officer Barry Defranco was dispatched to the Star Market on Granite St. on a report of a "purse snatching." Officer Defranco learned from the victim that she was pushing her shopping cart when the suspect came up from behind and took the bag from her. He then jumped on a bicycle and fled down an alley.

SGT. DAN MINTON

At this time, a citizen approached Officer Defranco and told him that he not only witnessed the crime, he followed the suspect to an address on Stevens Street. Officer Defranco approached the residence directed to by the witness. The male suspect then emerged from the front door, walked down the steps and was approached by Officer Defranco.

The suspect then jumped from the steps and fled across the yard, but Officer Defranco was able to tackle him. The suspect struggled to get free, swinging his elbows and then grabbed Officer Defranco's weapon and holster. The officer pushed the suspect's arms away from the weapon, then used his service baton on the suspect, striking him once.

At this time, Officers Bruce Trieu, Patrick Buonaugurio and Donald Allison pulled up and assisted Officer Defranco in restraining and handcuffing the suspect. Officer Trieu searched the suspect, finding money and the victim's checks, along with a bottle of Phenobarbital. The victim was transported to the arrest scene, where she identified him as the perpetrator. Officer Buonaugurio and the witness then retraced the suspect's escape route. Behind Star Market, near a storage trailer, they found the victim's "Coach" pocketbook, with its content strewn about. All of the victim's possessions were returned to her. The suspect's bicycle was also found.

There are numerous crime prevention messages in this case. First, the sight of an unprotected handbag creates an opportunity for the criminal. I recommend that people not bring a handbag to go shopping, simply because the shopper is often distracted and even though you may know that there is not much of value in the bag, the would-be-thief just sees a full bag with lots of potential. Just the hassle of replacing a driver's license, credit cards and other documents would be reason enough to leave the bag at home, carrying just the cards, check or money you need in a pocket. In this particular case, the victim had $1194 in her bag along with 67 checks. Why would anyone carry this much money at one time?

Another concern in this case was where the suspect was apprehended. The suspect did not live on Stevens Street! He randomly selected a home and asked to use the phone claiming he had "lost his dog." Unbelievably, he was allowed into a home. This resident was lucky not to have become the suspect's second victim. When someone unknown to you is at your door, do not open it. Inquire through the door what the person wants and if the answer is suspicious, or even questionable, contact the police. It only takes a few seconds to let someone in your home – no one else would know, and if you are over-powered, you are at significant risk.

The witness did exactly what safety requires. He heard the screams of the victim, made mental notes about the suspect, then followed him at a safe distance. He returned to the crime scene and led the police to the suspect. The quick response by the Quincy Police may have prevented a second crime from occurring.

The suspect, a 34-year-old male from Huntington Avenue in Boston, was charged with "unarmed robbery," "possession of Class D drugs," "assault" and "resisting arrest."

Nice work!

Are You Drinking Enough Water?

Q. I try to drink about eight glasses of water a day, as recommended. I work out three days a week indoors, but recently I began exercising outdoors. Should I drink more water because I am exercising in the heat outside, or would my normal eight glasses be enough to keep me from getting dehydrated?

A. Dehydration is a serious concern that translates to more than just being thirsty. Fluid loss in the body can be the catalyst for serious short- and long-term health conditions. Taking precautionary steps before you head outdoors to exercise can keep you from being forced to come indoors due to dehydration.

Water is necessary for the function of human life, and it is involved in the transportation and absorption of nutrients, the elimination of bodily waste, and is the basis of blood, digestive juices and all other body fluids. Without adequate hydration, the body is unable to carry out its normal functions.

There are several factors that can help you determine how much water and fluids are needed to remain hydrated. If you are currently drinking eight (eight-ounce) glasses a day, this can be a great start, but in order to know if that is enough there are a few other factors to remember.

Your current physical conditioning will play a role in maintaining proper hydration. The more conditioned you are, the better your body will be able to respond to changes to your exercise program. If you plan to participate in an activity that is more intense than your normal routine, make adjustments to maintain proper hydration prior to exercise.

Since you currently exercise indoors three days a week, monitoring your body's reaction to changes in the outdoor climate is important. For example, increased sweating due to high heat and humidity can cause your body to lose more fluids than usual, making it necessary to replace lost fluids frequently.

If you have an illness or are recovering from an illness, you may be more susceptible to becoming dehydrated. Fever, diarrhea and certain medications can cause the body to dehydrate. Be sure to begin replacing the fluids lost within your body during your illness. Try not to wait until you recover or feel thirsty to drink water, since thirst can be a sign that you're already dehydrated.

Warning signs that you are becoming dehydrated include headache, feeling lightheaded, fatigue, muscle weakness, dark-colored instead of clear or diluted urine, lack of sweating, excessive thirst and dry mouth. These symptoms can lead to serious conditions such as heat cramps, heat exhaustion and heat stroke.

The best way to stay hydrated is to drink fluids throughout the day — every day — and make modifications if there are changes to your overall health, exercise program or climate.

Always consult a physician before beginning an exercise program.

Finding Energy For A Longer, Healthier Life

(NAPS) — Between juggling work, family and other demands, many busy women find it hard to make healthy habits part of their daily routines.

Although 76 percent of respondents in a recent American Heart Association survey said physical activity is important, only 28 percent said they get the recommended amount of physical activity each week.

Joan Lunden, award-winning television journalist, author and busy mother of seven children, understands the challenge and has signed up for the Choose To Move program.

"As a journalist, I reported on health stories and certainly knew what I needed to do to be more fit and lower my risk of heart disease, but I wasn't incorporating it into my life," she said. "The more I learned about eating healthy and staying fit, the better my life became."

Choose To Move is a free 12-week program to help women increase physical activity and build healthy habits to lower their risk for heart disease and stroke. It's part of the American Heart Association's Go Red For Women movement to raise awareness of women's risk for cardiovascular disease and what they can do to prevent it.

"Women know that physical activity is a key component of a healthy lifestyle, but our survey findings indicate that they struggle to incorporate it into their daily lives," said Rita F. Redberg, M.D., M.Sc., F.A.H.A., F.A.C.C., professor of medicine in the cardiology division at the University of California San Francisco National Center of Excellence in Women's Health and an American Heart Association volunteer.

According to Lunden, Choose To Move offers simple ways to get women back on track:

• Be conscious about what you eat. Rather than eating a candy bar on the run, plan ahead by carrying a healthy snack (a handful of roasted almonds, fruit or homemade snack mix made with low-sodium seasonings).

• Get family members to go on a play date with you. It's great for family togetherness, while fitting in fitness.

• When you get home from the grocery store, chop your fresh produce right away and store in airtight containers in the fridge. It eliminates prep work for the rest of the week and you'll be much more likely to use them.

• Think about your childhood and what you enjoyed doing and bring that back into your life. Play a little.

Questions To Ask At Your Next Eye Doctor Visit

(NAPS) — The best and happiest moments in our lives are seen and remembered through our eyes. Sight allows us to witness historic events, learn by seeing in the classroom of life and observe things that make us wonder, smile or believe.

According to a recent survey by Bausch & Lomb, four out of five Americans value sight above all other senses. This finding suggests eye care should be an important consideration, yet two-thirds of the public are not asking their eye doctors the right questions to receive the best vision care for their eyes.

Neglecting your eye health can result in discomfort and eye irritation, and over time can even lead to more serious conditions such as inflammation, infection or ulcers on the cornea.

For the 30 million Americans who wear contact lenses, eye problems can be exacerbated by wearing the wrong type of lenses, or improper care and cleaning of those lenses. According to optometrist Cathy Tibbetts, good eye health begins with asking your eye doctor these five important questions:

What are the latest innovations in eye care and new products that can enhance my vision?

There are many contact lenses on the market that cater to different eye care and lifestyle needs. By letting your eye doctor know your needs, he or she will be better able to prescribe the most appropriate lenses, such as silicone hydrogel contacts or disposable daily-wear contacts.

Are there contact lenses that are more suitable for my hectic schedule?

If you are prone to working long days, travel frequently or have to get up several times during the night to tend to children, ask your eye doctor for lenses that are made from silicone hydrogel material, such as Bausch & Lomb's PureVision contact lenses, which provide exceptional vision, comfort, health and convenience.

How often should I replace my lenses?

Depending on the type of lenses you currently own, and whether you follow the recommended replacement schedule, you may want to consider a different type of lens, such as silicone hydrogel lens designed for monthly replacement, such as PureVision, to better suit a hectic schedule.

How do I improve my vision, especially in low-light/night conditions?

Many people have difficulty seeing at night and in low-light conditions. One of the reasons for this is spherical aberration, a natural anomaly that's inherent within the eyes of a majority of the general population due to the curvature of the eyeball itself. PureVision lenses are silicone hydrogel contact lenses that are designed to sharpen your eye's visual quality by helping to correct this spherical aberration.

How do I ease eyestrain or irritations after a long day?

Ask your eye doctor about ways to prevent eyestrain, such as taking regular breaks from looking at the computer screen or switching to silicone hydrogel lenses such as PureVision, which retain moisture and resist deposits for added comfort and health. In addition, PureVision's enhanced optics may further reduce eyestrain.

Although you should schedule regular eye checkup appointments every six months, doctors recommend you contact them immediately if you having problems with your vision.

MESSAGE IN A BOTTLE

Parents of newborns should be aware that allowing children to hold bottles filled with sweet liquids in their mouths for prolonged periods can cause tooth decay. "Baby bottle tooth decay" arises from having any liquid other than water pool in babies' mouths and bathe teeth in sugars upon which decay-causing bacteria feed. The condition stems from putting baby to bed with a bottle of formula, milk, juice, or soda. With this in mind, it's best to never put your baby to bed with a bottle. Give your child a bottle only during meals. Teach your child to drink from a cup as soon as possible. Use water and a child-sized toothbrush for daily cleaning when your baby has 7-8 teeth.

Though they only last a few years, baby teeth need just as much care and maintenance as adult teeth. We can provide you and your children with complete general dental services, from a professional cleaning (preventative) to full mouth reconstruction (repair), periodontal treatments, and cosmetic dentistry. Good preventive dental care can help avoid unnecessary pain, expense, and possible tooth loss. We're located at 44 Greenleaf Street, where we believe in the importance of regular professional dental health care. Call 617-479-6220 to schedule an appointment. THE 2005 BABE RUTH 14-YEAR-OLD WORLD SERIES

SPORTS

Quincy Wins Opener, Bows To Conn., Louisiana

By CHRIS POISSON

As Quincy headed off Adams Field Monday night after a disastrous fourth inning, manager Dick Lombardi huddled his team together near the first base dugout to try and offer encouragement.

Southwest champ Jefferson Parish (La.) had just sent 12 men to the plate — the first eight scoring — to break open a 4-0 game.

"What are you going to tell them," Lombardi said. "I said, 'Just try to get a few back and see if we can hang in there and get through the sixth and seventh innings.'"

The game never made it past the fifth frame as Jefferson Parish notched an easy 12-0 victory by slaughter rule to improve to 3-0 in the Babe Ruth World Series.

After putting forth great showings as the host team in its first two games, Quincy simply got steamrolled by a much better team.

Jefferson Parish has one of the premier baseball programs in the country, as its 13-, 14-, 15- and 16-year-olds are all participating in the World Series this year. The 15's already captured a title.

"There's nothing wrong with our team," Lombardi said. "That is a powerhouse team over there. This is a privilege for us to be playing. I don't have any qualms about what happened in this game here.

"It's just a terrific program. They have some terrific players. They have a good coach. Fundamentally they're so sound. I just wanted us to tip our caps to them. They were a better team."

Despite Monday's dismal performance, Quincy will have plenty of memorable snapshots from its World Series experience.

It will be remembered as the first Quincy team to win a World Series game with its 9-0 triumph over Team Italia in last Friday's opener. And it pushed New England region champ Stamford (Conn.) to the brink in Sunday's tough 4-2 loss.

"This is such an experience for them," Lombardi said. "This is the first team from Quincy Babe Ruth to win a World Series game. No one can ever take that away from these kids. No one.

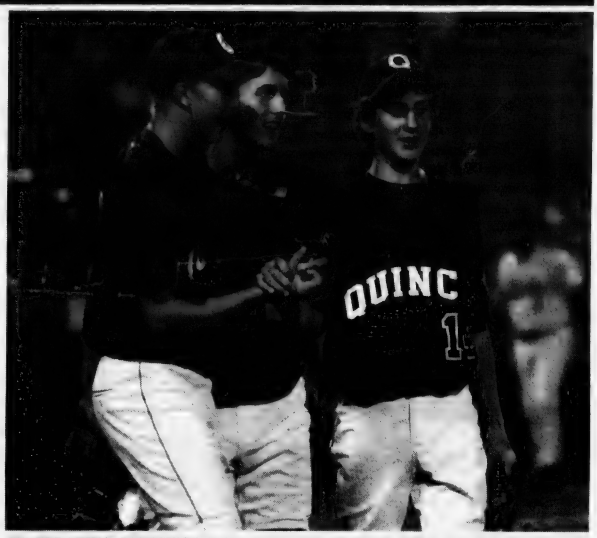
"We didn't come in here with any false illusions that we were going to win the World Series. We came in here and did what we wanted to do. We came into this looking to win one or two games. We won the one and we'd like to win two. We still have a shot (Wednesday vs. Waite Park, Minn., 8 p.m.)."

Jefferson Parish scored its runs on 13 hits and several Quincy errors. It pushed across two runs in the first inning off Quincy starter Alex Tragellis and added a pair of unearned runs in the second for a 4-0 lead.

Tragellis breezed through the third before Jefferson Parish exploded in the fourth to knock him out of the game.

"I talked to one of the umpires after they got those runs," Lombardi said. "I said, 'How can I be upset. I'm coaching in a World Series game. I'm enjoying this. The kids are enjoying this.' Two weeks from now, they're not going to remember the score. They're going to remember they had a great time here."

Patrick Joyce and Kevin Chenette pitched in relief, with Chenette retiring six of the final seven hitters. Tragellis and Tim Stille managed the only hits for Quincy against starter Nate Furey.



"They made a couple of errors to put us on," Lombardi said. "We just can't hit. We're not one of these teams where you're going to see eight or nine hits up on the board, which is part of our problem. But a lot of that you have to give credit to the pitcher. He did a great job."

"We didn't play well defensively," he added. "That's what really hurt us. It kept us out of the game. We probably gave them five or six runs. Take those away and they're still ahead by six or seven."

MANAGER DICK LOMBARDI shares a moment with pitcher Scott Warwick (14) after Quincy's 9-0 win over Team Italia last Friday night at Adams Field. Warwick tossed 4 2/3 innings of no-hit ball in relief of injured starter Trevor Brown.

Quincy Wins Opener, But Bows To Conn., Louisiana

ter Danny Richards lined a double to right-center and moved to second on Tragellis' sacrifice bunt. Catcher Matt Rodriguez followed with an RBI single to left-center, but stumbled rounding first base and was thrown out at second.

"We had to get off to a good start after our first game (a 7-1 loss to Nash County, N.C.)," said Stamford manager Butch Lamotta. "But actually they came out smacking the ball and we were lucky to get out of it with one run."

Quincy starter Anthony Alibrandi, who pitched an easy first frame, ran into trouble in the second. Gavin McCullough greeted him with a double to right and Jon Torres reached on a bunt single. An errant pickoff throw allowed McCullough to score before Brett Lamotta slapped an RBI single through the shortstop hole for a 2-1 lead.

Stamford starter Bobby Horn settled down after the first, silencing Quincy throughout the middle innings. He allowed two runs on four hits and two walks while striking out six in a complete-game effort. Alibrandi gave up two earned runs on six hits with no walks and a strikeout.

In the third inning, Quincy came through with two great defensive plays to negate a Stamford threat. With Sean Mullins at second, Tragellis fielded a line drive at shortstop and threw to heads-up second baseman Scott Warwick to double up Mullins. Rodriguez ended the inning by gunning down Anthony Pandone on a stolen base attempt.

Quincy failed to capitalize on a pair of Stamford infield errors in the fourth inning, stranding runners on the corners with one out.

Stamford tacked on two important insurance runs in the sixth. Mullins reached on an infield error, moved to second on a sacrifice bunt and scored when Pandone blasted an RBI triple to deep center field. McCullough knocked him home with a sacrifice fly to right for a 4-1 lead.

"To me, even with the overthrow and the other error, even though they led to two runs, I don't think that cost us the game," Lombardi said. "These kids have just played great defense. I've received so many compliments from the other coaches about the defensive part of our game."

With the team standing on the top step of the dugout, Quincy staged a rally in the final inning. After Kevin Magoon crushed a ball to right that almost sailed over the fielder's head for the second out, Warwick singled through the shortstop hole to keep the game alive. Danny Jackson launched an 0-2 pitch way over the center fielder's head for an RBI triple to make it 4-2. But Horn got the next batter to fly out to end the game.

"I've been waiting for Jackson to break out," Lombardi said. "He's been in a slump. That's the way he hit the ball in high school. That's the way he hit the ball at the beginning of our season. He just smothered that thing.

"The one thing about these kids is they don't quite. We had a game when we were down 6-1 and we scored six runs in the bottom of the seventh to win the game. They were confident they could come back. Even when they scored the two runs in the sixth, they thought they could come back. They have a resiliency to them."

"We watched them Friday night against Italy," Lamotta said. "They weren't what you considered a normal host team. I've seen other host teams and it's just a cakewalk against them. But after watching Quincy Friday night, they are a quality team."

Last Friday vs. Team Italia

Roughly 3,800 people took in Quincy's tourney opener and witnessed a gutsy relief performance by Warwick.

When starter Trevor Brown injured his pitching elbow in the third inning, Warwick had to make an emergency appearance with runners on first and second with one out and a 1-0 count on cleanup hitter Mattia Restante.

Warwick, who was scheduled to enter the game in the fourth inning, pumped three straight fastballs to record the strikeout and Rodriguez fired a laser from behind the plate to pick off a runner at second base to escape the inning.

"I've seen a lot of good catchers here and he's one of the top catchers here," Lombardi said. "He's not afraid to throw it anywhere. He has a real strong arm. He's 14-years-old and he throws like an 18-year-old."

Warwick cruised the rest of the way, allowing no hits and striking out four in his 4 2/3 innings of work.

"This is what you expect from him," Lombardi said. "He did a great job. He's a great competitor. He told me all day he was ready for tonight. And he was ready for tonight. I feel bad for Trevor. He's hurt and he's out. He's such a great kid."

"I usually start but it wasn't that bad because I warmed up before the game because I knew I was coming in," Warwick said. "When he got hurt, I didn't know. But I felt great. I just reared back and fired."

Quincy jumped out to a 2-0 in the first inning against left-hander Valerio Simone. Richards led off with a walk, advanced to second on Tragellis' sacrifice bunt, moved to third on Rodriguez' single and scored on a passed ball. Rodriguez scored on an infield error.

In the second, Quincy executed a sensational defensive play. With Daniele Conti standing at second, Filippo Deboni singled to center field. Richards fielded the ball cleanly, fired a strike to his cutoff man, first baseman Magoon, who nailed Conti at the plate to end the inning unscathed.

"That was a big play, Richards to Magoon to Rodriguez, throwing the kid out at home," Lombardi said. "That really got the fire lit up underneath them."

Quincy extended its lead to 4-0 in the third inning. Tragellis singled up the middle, moved to second on a passed ball, to third on a wild pitch and scored when Alibrandi reached on an infield error.

After Magoon singled, Warwick reached safely when his infield pop-up fell between the pitcher, catcher and first baseman. On the play, Alibrandi hustled from second base to slide safely across the plate.

Quincy had a chance to put more runs on the board. But the inning ended when third baseman Francesco Cozzolino snared a screaming line drive off Stille's bat with the bases loaded.

In the fourth, Quincy manufactured a run off relief pitcher Tommaso Cherubini. Richards reached on a fielder's choice, stole second, went to third on Tragellis' grounder and scored on Rodriguez' bloop single to right.

Quincy blew open the game with four runs in the sixth. Chenette crushed a pinch-hit double over the left fielder's head and Kevin Mahoney laid a perfect bunt that rolled down the third base line. The fielder's throw got away from the first baseman allowing Chenette to score.

Pinch-hitter Joyce walked and pinch-hitter Greg Ouellette singled. The left fielder's errant throw to third brought Mahoney home. Sean Naughton knocked in Joyce with a grounder to second. Ouellette later scored on an infield error.

"They made some mistakes and we took advantage of them," Lombardi said. "We don't hit a lot. But we got some timely hits today. The kids made them pitch. They got a lot of walks."

"We made five errors," said Team Italia manager William Holmberg. "We didn't play fundamentally sound. We made so many mental errors. We didn't hit with guys on base. We had a lot of opportunities the first three innings and we didn't capitalize on it.

"We're better than what we showed tonight and I hope we can show that before the end of the tournament. I thought we would have given Quincy a good game. We didn't. They deserved to win and my hat off to them. I know it was a big win for Dick."

Single-Elimination Play Underway, Championship Game Saturday

The single-elimination portion of the Babe Ruth World Series at Adams Field gets underway today (Thursday) and will conclude Saturday with the championship.

The 12 participating teams in the World Series are guaranteed to play at least four games in the pool play format. After pool play, the first-, second- and third-place teams in the American and National divisions advance to the single-elimination competition.

Pool play standings are determined as follows:

1) Won-loss record;

2) If still tied: Results of head-to-head competition;

3) If still tied: Fewest runs given up;

4) If still tied: Run differential with a maximum of 10 per game.

If, in the event of a three-way tie, it is broken before or upon completing the fourth criteria. If a two-way tie still remains, the two teams remaining tied will revert at that time back to the second criteria to break the two-way tie.

Plenty Of Thrills At Home Run Derby

By CHRIS POISSON

Five kids were able to slam the ball over the 300-foot-plus fence at Upper Merrymount Field during last Thursday's Babe Ruth World Series Home Run Derby contest.

But only one player did it twice.

Drew Bradshaw of Tri-Valley (Calif.) clobbered two homers and smashed two more off the fence to be crowned home run king.

He first drilled a ball roughly 315 feet off the fence in center field before connecting on consecutive dingers to left-center.

Also hitting long balls were Evan Deluca of Readington (N.J.), Jamee Shepherd of Youngstown (Ohio), Mason Katz of Jefferson Parish (La.) and Mattia Restante of Italy.

Quincy representatives were Kevin Chenette, who reached the center field fence, and Matt Rodriguez.

Others competing in the contest were:

- Jake Rand and Brodie Quinn, Pittsfield.
- Tom O'Donnell, Readington.
- Jason Bagoly, Youngstown.
- Adam Johnson and Nate Schmidt, Waite Park, Minn.
- Evan Schiavi, Jefferson Parish.
- Jeff Ames and Cody Schaffer, Hazel-Dell Metro, Wash.
- Nick Bartolone, Tri-Valley.
- Brian Goodwin and Xavier Macklin, Nash County, N.C.
- Valerio Simone, Italy.
- Tim Kelleher and Brian Williams, Norwood.
- Nick Cortese and Gavin McCullough, Stamford, Conn.

In the 2003 contest in Quincy, Jeff Daniels of Voorhees (N.J.) belted three homers to win the competition.

Babe Ruth 'A' Team Wins Jimmy Fund Tournament

The Quincy Babe Ruth 14-year-old "A" team won the recent fifth annual Jimmy Fund Baseball Tournament at Adams Field for the third straight year.

The team went undefeated, besting Milton in the championship game, 14-4. The bulk of the team is still intact under coaches Rick LeBel and Mark Vialpando.

The tournament is played on behalf of second baseman Pat White, a member of the Quincy A team since he was 8 years old. He has rhabdomyosarcoma, a form of tissue cancer. He played very well throughout the entire tourney.

The tournament raises donations for the Jimmy Fund/Pediatric Solid Tumor Program at Dana-Farber Cancer Institute.

SCOTT DEWARE

A THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

SOME THOUGHTS ON PROGRESS...

Did you know that our forefathers did without sugar until the 13th century, without coal fires until the 14th century, without buttered bread until the 15th century, without coffee and tea and soap until the 17th century, without pudding until the 18th century, without gas and matches and electricity until the 19th century, and without canned goods until the 20th century?

To continue with these thoughts... Let us visit a museum ... When we see the household utensils, farming implements, and clothing that our predecessors used, we wonder how on earth they got along. We wonder, until we remember these crude and clumsy things (to us) were once considered very modern... The people of that era considered them "the last word"...

Each generation starts to build where the previous one left off... We wonder that perhaps 500 years from now our cars, our planes, our spacecraft, and hundreds of other things we think are smart..."the last word," will be shown in museums to the amusement of our descendants...

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) A relaxed mood early in the week could give way to high-temperature disputes. The Aries Lamb should resist being pulled into heated quarrels that could really singe your wool.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Satisfy that practical obligation first, then you can feel free to indulge in your creative endeavors. Also, check for hidden or overlooked areas where repairs might be long overdue.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Home is still the Twins' major focus this week. But outside matters begin to take on added importance, especially those involving possible career moves. Stay alert for signs of change.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A travel plan might need to undergo some considerable adjustment because of unexpected changes. Keep an open mind and let the facts guide you on how you want to handle this.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Playing cat and mouse with a matter you don't really want to tackle wastes time, energy and, most important, an opportunity. Ask someone with experience to help you get started.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A shift in policy might not please you, but before you put up a "No Go" wall of resistance, examine the circumstances. You might be quite pleasantly surprised by what you find.

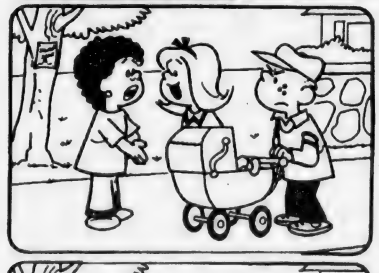
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Yesterday's critiques about your methods might have already evolved into today's praise for your achievements. Good for you. Now go on and continue to build on your credibility.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) An occasional temperamental flare-up might occur as you continue to help get things back to normal. Stay with it. You should soon get some idea of where to take things next.

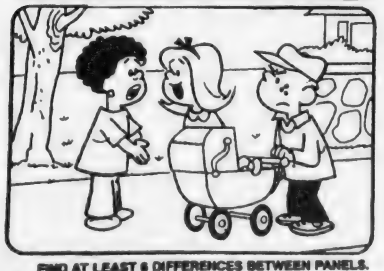
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) A negative reaction to what you believe was a well-deserved request might mean that you need to reconsider your position and make changes accordingly.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) There's always room for someone new at the Sea Goat's table. And the someone new this week could bring a message you've been waiting a long time to hear.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) A pile-on of personal matters this week might seem too overwhelming to deal with. But handling them on a one-by-one basis could have you out from under it by the weekend.



PISCES (February 19 to March 20) A friend might need your good advice regarding a matter. Be supportive. But unless you can be absolutely sure you have all the facts, be careful about any suggestions you might be asked to offer.



BORN THIS WEEK: Few things make you happier than bringing people together and helping to forge new friendships.

Origin Undetermined

Willard St. Apartment Fire Drives 84 To Street

Fire of undetermined origin badly damaged a section of the Rosecliff Apartments, 816 Willard St., West Quincy, early Tuesday, driving 70 adults and 14 children to the street in their night clothes.

One Quincy firefighter was reported hurt in the blaze. He was treated and released from Quincy Medical Center for a knee injury.

The three-alarm blaze shortly after midnight drew mutual aid from Boston and Braintree firefighters who helped confine the flames to a corner and upper floors of the four-story building across from Pine Hill Cemetery.

There was no estimated of damage.

Hugh Drummond, spokesman for the Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay, said the Red Cross issued more than $13,000 in immediate food and clothing assistance to those who lost their belongings in the fire.

"We take care of the basic needs — a place to stay, food, emergency medical supplies and clothes to wear," he said.

Those who found their apartments unlivable were put up at local motels by the management of the 55-unit apartment building. Some were allowed back in Tuesday afternoon to recover their property.

BLACKENED CORNER of Rosecliff Apartments on Willard Street shows heavy damage inflicted by early morning fire that drove 70 adults and 14 children to the street in their night clothes.

Early Deadline For Next Week's Sun

Because of the Labor Day holiday, there will be an early news and advertising deadline for next week's Quincy Sun.

News, church, organizations and youth sports releases, retail, political and classified advertising and legal notices should be in The Sun office, 1372 Hancock St., by noon tomorrow (Friday) to assure publication in the Sept. 8 issue.

Because next week's issue the last before the school committee preliminary election, we would appreciate candidates placing their ads earlier.

The Sun will be closed Monday, Sept. 5.

Thank you and have a nice, safe, holiday weekend.

Council To Vote On Community Preservation Act

Tax Hikes For Open Space?

By WILLIAM TRAYNOR

Would you pay higher property taxes if it meant preserving open space, restoring Quincy's historic sites or creating more affordable housing?

Environmental advocates and some city councillors want to give Quincy residents the chance to answer that question by placing the Community Preservation Act on the ballot in November.

The act, already adopted by roughly 100 other communities throughout the state, allows cities and towns to impose a property-tax increase of 1 percent for the preservation of open space and parks, as well as restore Quincy's historic properties and create more affordable housing for low-income families.

Supporters say the act would allow Quincy to tap into a $110 million state trust fund, which is partially funded by Quincy residents. But the ability to utilize the fund comes at a price: Property owners would have to pay a property tax increase based on the assessed value of their homes.

For example, a home assessed at $335,800 - the average for the city - would produce a $26 annual tax hike. A $500,000 home would incur a $43 tax increase each year, according to the act.

According to Steve Perdios of the Quincy Environmental Network, the group pushing the initiative, the tax increases are a small price to pay for preserving precious open space and creating more affordable housing.

"Basically, Quincy residents have been funding this trust fund to help places like Hingham pay for open space," said Perdios. "By adopting this act, we could take advantage of millions of dollars in state money to purchase land."

He said the city could raise roughly $1 million a year from the property taxes. According to the law, the state would match those funds from the trust fund.

The tax increase would amount to "pennies a day" for the average homeowner, he said.

Perdios attempted to place the act on the November ballot, but fell way short of gathering the 2,500 signatures needed. Instead, he is working with some councillors to push the issue. If a majority of councillors agree to place the act on the ballot, residents will have the chance to vote on it in November.

Already, some councillors are lining up in support of placing the initiative on the ballot.

"This is a win-win for Quincy," said Ward 4 Councillor Jay Davis, who intends to bring the issue before the council next week. "We are paying for this trust fund, so we should take advantage of it."

Sources say a majority of councillors favor placing the issue on the November ballot.

According to the act, fees for recording deeds, conveyances, mortgages and mortgage discharges go to the state trust fund. Several other fees are earmarked for the law.

Exemptions are available for certain residents, including seniors and home owners with low-income housing.

About 100 communities have adopted the act, including Braintree, Hingham, Randolph and Norwell. Weymouth will vote on it in November.

But not all councillors are behind the move - at least not this year.

"This is something people should vote on during the state elections (2006)," said Council President Frank McCauley. "We are going to have a low turnout this year in the local elections. Something as important as property taxes should be voted on when we have a high turnout."

And councillors will be paying attention to the pulse of voters, many of whom have seen their property taxes rise over the past four years.

"It's hard to minimize the impact of the tax increases, but on the other hand all these other communities are taking advantage of a pool of money that we are contributing to," said Ward 3 Councillor Kevin Coughlin.

Perdios said he is recruiting volunteers to undertake an information campaign.

"I think we can motivate people to vote on this issue," he said.

Renovations, Repairs Help Prep Schools For New Year

Students and staff will find many noticeable improvements in Quincy schools when they return next week, including an apparent end to the mold problem that has long-plagued the Marshall School.

"Our students and staff deserve to have sound, welcoming learning environments," said Mayor William Phelan. "Investing in our schools is investing in the future of our city."

Improvements include:

• Repairs to roofs at the Merrymount School, North Quincy High School, Atlantic Middle School, Snug Harbor School and Broad Meadows Middle School.

• Gym floors repaired at Atlantic and Broad Meadows Middle Schools.

• An internal makeover at Quincy High School with new paint throughout the building.

• New floors in three classrooms at the Squantum School.

• Renovations to the Della Chiesa Early Childhood Center to allow for classroom conversion to younger grades.

• A permanent fix to the HVAC system at the Marshall School which has been running all summer without reports of mold in the school.

"I want to thank Director of Building and Construction Mike Ryan for the work he has been doing during the past months to ready us for the upcoming school year," said Phelan.

The major repairs to the schools are being completed with funding from a bond initiated by Phelan and approved by the City Council last year.

The bond will invest $2.5 million in public facilities with more than $1.5 million going toward the renovation of school facilities.

For Hurricane Homeless: Send Money, Not Things

If you want to help those left homeless in Louisiana, Mississippi and Alabama by Hurricane Katrina don't send things, send money.

That's the local word from Jackie Gardner, executive director for the South Shore Region of the Red Cross of Massachusetts Bay.

And it is echoed by Christin McCombs, director of the Massachusetts Emergency Management Agency. which coordinates government and private resources during disasters.

"I know that people with good intentions like to donate used clothing and other items at times like this," said Gardner, "but we have no way of delivering them.

"And if we did, it would be so costly it would defeat the purpose. Our primary goal is to collect money for those who have lost everything."

"Ironically," said McCombs, "donated goods and volunteers that are not specifically needed in a disaster area can hurt more than help.

"Well intentioned but ill-conceived, shipment of goods and volunteers to an area impacted by a disaster can actually cause a 'secondary' disaster, in spite of the fact that donors really want to help.

"Unsolicited donations can create logistical nightmares for those already warehousing supplies that are needed and a needless expenditures to transport."

McCombs said financial contributions are preferred and they should be donated only through volunteer disaster organizations that have a known track record

Retirement Board Wins On Maher Pension Appeal

Former Chief Plumbing Inspector Ralph Maher has lost in Superior Court his appeal to have his $36,000 annual pension restored by the city.

The five-member Retirement Board voted unanimously in December, 2003, to rescind the pension after Maher was convicted of a crime.

He pleaded guilty in July, 2003, to breaking into the Personnel Office at City Hall in December, 2001, and making off with his own personnel records.

He was placed on probation and fined $893.

The Retirement Board decided that was a crime related to his job as plumbing inspector and, under the law, grounds for losing his pension.

Appeals to the District Court and now to the Superior Court brought rulings that the Retirement Board used proper standards in revoking the pension.

Catching Up On The Mail

Catching up on the mail and reader reaction to recent columns:

Margaret McCash of Wollaston didn't care for the Pet Peeves column and got right to the point in six words.

"Your remarks were out of line."

She singled out these two pet peeves:

The cowboy who roars through residential neighborhoods, tires screeching, ignoring parked cars and driveways a youngster might dart out from. You really wouldn't feel too badly to see him again a block or so away wrapped around a steel utility pole.

And his buddy who has a ball for himself speeding through puddles seeing how many pedestrians he can drown. You wouldn't mind seeing him later, too, with his car dead in a flooded street.

Margaret certainly is entitled to her opinion and criticism.

But if I had the choice I would rather see the cowboy wrapped around a steel utility pole than some innocent youngster under the wheels of his car.

And, as for his buddy, if his car went dead in a flooded street, maybe the next time he would slow down and when he came to puddles sparing pedestrians a soaking.

Jean Patten, formerly of North Quincy now living in Palm Beach Gardens in Florida, wrote, "Liked your Pet Peeves issue." And sent along a few of her own. A couple samples:

"The cell phone in one hand, ciggie in the other, tinted windows, SUV speeding along to beat you to the red light!

"Supermarkets that fail to carry lots of little jars/cans of food for the one or two person household."

Jean, who gets The Sun by mail, calls it, "A little bit of nostalgia each week."

In the column on the 60th anniversary of the dropping of the atomic bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we noted:

"There are those today who insist we shouldn't have done it.

"Those of us who were out there felt that under the circumstances of that time, the bombs were justified. And still do."

Morris "Duke" Goldberg, a 1943 North Quincy High School graduate now living in Newton, was one of those who was out there at the time.

"To those critics of today who argue that it was wrong — I have two questions for them:

"What if the Japanese got the bomb first. What would they have done?

"What if the Nazis had got the bomb first — what would they have done?"

And adds:

"On Aug. 6, 1945 (Hiroshima bombing), I was at Pearl Harbor on board the USS Panamint having just returned from 76 days at Okinawa. I was a radioman second class on the staff of Rear Admiral Lawrence Reifsnider, commander of Amphibious Group 4, Northern Attack Force. Ernie Pyle was on our ship and was killed by sniper fire."

Now that the granite ball has been moved from the Fore River traffic rotary, Frank Rogers of Squantum asks: "Is there an anchor coming — an anchor tribute to Quincy's shipbuilding history?"

ANCHORS IN WASHINGTON

He sends along a photo he recently took at the Main Street Fish Pier in Washington showing anchors in a circle to give you somewhat of an idea of what they might look like at the Fore River rotary.

But much larger anchors from Navy ships would be a more appropriate tribute to the great fighting ships built at the Fore River shipyard.

The 11-ton granite ball which was moved in March is being repaired and re-polished in Barre, Vt., and will be going back to City Hall where it originally was.

Plans are to place it on Constitution Common outside City Hall where the World War II statue now stands. The statue will be moved to Merrymount Park which is being renovated and re-landscaped.

At the time the ball was moved, Park-Forestry Executive Director Tom Koch said: "We hope to replace the ball at Fore River rotary with something nautical. Perhaps a large ship anchor and flags."

That sounds like the answer to your question, Frank.

A recent column expressed support for a Constitutional amendment to protect the American flag from burning and other abuse.

Former Quincy resident Joe Fasci, now living in Granbury, Texas, where he is active in civic and charitable causes, reports spotting this bumper sticker on a car with an elderly couple:

Burn Our Flag If You Must
But Please Wrap Yourself In It First

11th Sunflower Growth Contest To End Aug. 31

The 11th annual citywide "Grow Together" family contest to grow the tallest sunflower, sponsored by Beechwood on the Bay, will wind up Wednesday, Aug. 31.

Registration continued until the seeds, provided at no cost by Almquist Flowerland in hybrid seed packets, were all gone.

"We are delighted about the citywide participation again this year," said Sharron Beals, director of Beechwood on the Bay.

The family whose sunflower is the tallest on Aug. 31 will win a Family Fun Basket filled with games, books, toys and gift certificates donated by Beechwood and Quincy businessmen.

The winning family and their sunflower will also be pictured in The Quincy Sun. This year's contestants included children, grandparents and great-grandparents.

Participants are invited to call 617-471-5712 to register the height of their sunflowers.

VIEW OF THE MIDLAND, HOUGHS NECK, MASS

THIS 1911 HOUGHS NECK postcard is a view looking from today's Sea Street Auto Body shop down Bell Street towards Manet Beach. On the right, the Midland Hotel was on the corner of Center Road and Sea Street. Center Road is now Macy Street. The store on the left was one of many at the time whose sign was provided by Moxie, the most popular tonic of the day. Today, this entire intersection is quite different. The store site is now a parking lot. Two small houses have replaced the Midland. An A & P just out of sight on the right is now the site of the Houghs Neck Community Center. The fountain and the trolley tracks are also gone. The only thing left in this view is the fireplug. To contact Tom Galvin, e-mail tmgalvin@verizon.net.

Drinking And Driving Laws Need To Be Amended

I have been reading over the years the horrific stories of car accidents involving alcohol and all the pain and agony related to them. It's about time we all do something about it.

Drunken driving laws in this state are pitiful. I read the signs in Quincy that state "drunk drivers in Quincy will be jailed." Should we add an asterisk to that sign; *"Jail time is unlimited."

I was just a kid when then Judge Albert Kramer introduced and enforced these new laws and at the time it seemed like a good idea. It still is actually but it's the law that is written that has the unjustification. My heart goes out to the families who have lost loved ones, especially the more recent baby Melia tragedy.

Every single one of the incidents could have been avoided. I see people every day leaving bar rooms, restaurants and functions after drinking only to hop in their vehicles and roll the dice. We never do hear the stories about people hitting telephone poles, falling asleep in their cars in driveways and other pragmatic situations people get themselves into when drinking and driving. Then it goes beyond that.

People whose licenses are revoked due to repeat offenses of drunken driving are getting back behind the wheel to further gamble not only their lives but all the people around them. The laws need to be amended. They need direct and expedited punishment for the people they are about to inflict a lifetime of damage, too. I hear the warnings of The Massachusetts State Police, "You drink, you drive, you lose."

I think the message should include "You drink, you drive, you lose, and the loss you impose on yourself as well as others can and will be catastrophic beyond you wildest and intoxicated imagination."

A Wonderful Time At August Moon Festival

(A copy of the following letter, written to John Brothers, executive director of Quincy Asian Resources, Inc., was submitted to The Quincy Sun for publication.)

My granddaughter, Elia, and I attended the August Moon Festival for the first time this year. It was one of the hottest days we've had this long hot summer. The entertainment was superb. They all performed effortlessly and as if it were a comfortable day.

Elia had fun on the inflatable slide and cotton candy. She made a dragon hat, a Chinese lantern, a dragon and a spiral mobile.

The many volunteers were wonderful. They treated every one of the children as if they were the first to the last. They spent hours cutting, stapling, instructing and finishing up countless projects. I can't say which was our favorite part.

It was wonderful. Elia insisted we stay for the fashion show at the end. The NQHS group was well worth staying for, and with skits between there was no waiting for costume changes. We left on the last shuttle and the volunteers were well on their way to returning the parking lot to its former self.

It was amazing. We will definitely be coming again.

The Wollaston Beach Construction Work

As another summer of power walks draws closer to Labor Day, two things come to mind. How long are we to put up with this Wollaston Beach construction work? Zig-Zagging up and down the beach made walking quite interesting this summer.

I hope when it's all over, Wollaston Beach looks like Southie. I'll wait and see.

However, kudos to both the State and Quincy police departments for their presence this summer slowing down traffic and catching drivers running lights. Things were much safer this year.

Veterans Housing Units To Be Sold

Sept. 1-7
1963
42 Years Ago

In a letter to the Quincy Housing Authority, Mayor Della Chiesa ordered the sale of Westacres, the veterans' housing on West Street.

The mayor noted that under law, once the construction mortgage was paid off, the units had to be sold at fair market value. The housing was built in 1947 at a cost of $400,000.

QHA Executive Director Girard White reserved comment on the mayor's letter until the meeting of the housing board later in the week. He said, however, if the units are sold, preference would be given to veterans.

OPPOSITION TO MENTAL HEALTH CLINIC

Some 487 residents of Furnace Brook Parkway and Hospital Hill signed petitions opposing plans to construct a mental health clinic in their neighborhoods. The original site on Furnace Brook Parkway generated so much opposition that a Hospital Hill location was proposed. That site met equal opposition.

At a meeting of the city council this week, all councillors in attendance voiced their opposition to a clinic at either location. Speaking in support of the plan were Dr. Charles Djerf, Rep. Joseph Brett, School Committeeman Frank Anselmo and Dr. Nelson Saphir of Squantum.

QHS FOOTBALL LINEUP

Quincy High School football coach Hank Conroy outlined potential starters for the new season. He estimated that 90-100 players would try out for the tear when school opens this week.

Ralph Cedrone and Paul Grasso were given the best chance of replacing Larry Kelcourse and Steve Craig who graduated last year. Brad Melville would take tackle Dan Raymondi's spot, who's now at Holy Cross. At 265 pounds, Peter Kolson was slotted as the other tackle.

The back line would include veteran players Jim Rendle and Mike Jordan, with star juniors identified as Jim Petitti, Greg Craig and Paul Jenkins.

CURRY AWARDED PURPLE HEART

Marine Corporal Robert Curry, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Curry of Salem Street, was awarded the Purple Heart while serving in Vietnam.

The medal was given for wounds received in combat at La Chau Village complex, nine miles southwest of the Da Nang Airfield.

College Grad Grandmother Recalls Quincy War Victim

MARGARET WYNNE

Margaret "Peggy" Wynne, 56, grandmother of two, graduated from Suffolk University with a degree in journalism the other day and now she's almost ready to produce her first important literary effort.

She's writing a book or at least a major article about a former Quincy resident, a casualty of World War II, the victim of a war crime, she says, even though, using prepublication privilege, she declines to reveal his name.

"I hope someday they'll be able to do something for the fellow," she said, "like place a plaque for him in the city."

Wynne went back to college to polish her writing skills at the insistence of her daughter, Elizabeth, who graduated from college in 1999,

Elizabeth is now Elizabeth Hill, married and living in Weymouth with two small children, Kaila and Alexander Hill.

"I always liked to write," said Wynne. "I've been writing since I was 9. I've had a couple of poems published in books of poetry. But I never wrote seriously until I entered Quincy Junior College."

One of her professors there was Steve Wagner, a published author, who gave her newly discovered career another boost.

"He got mad at me," she said. "I was doing well. He said, 'Why haven't you done this before?'"

When she was through with Quincy Junior College, she enrolled in journalism at Suffolk, mostly because the school was on the MBTA's Red Line and easily reached from Quincy.

There she came under the influence of another published author, Bruce Butterfield, who assigned her to write a human interest story on a subject of her choosing.

"I saw one line in a newspaper about this Quincy man who was a World War II casualty," she said. "I thought it was interesting. I started researching him."

The interest turned into an obsession. She finished the assignment and kept right on researching and writing right through graduation. When will she be finished?

"Hopefuly, next month," said Peggy Wynne.

From Mass Energy

'Bio-Heat' Available As Cleaner Fuel Option

At a time when energy consumers are increasingly aware of the economic and environmental impacts of our dependence upon oil, a cleaner energy option is now available to heating oil consumers in Quincy.

Working with a grant received by the Massachusetts Division of Energy Resources from the US Department of Energy, the Massachusetts Energy Consumers Alliance (Mass Energy) enables oil heat consumers in certain communities around Boston to heat their homes with "Bio-Heat," a blend of 10% refined soybean oil and 90% low-sulfur heating oil. Mass Energy is a non-profit organization based in Boston.

The new product is better for the environment and public health, producing 75% less sulfur emissions, 12% less nitrogen oxide emissions, and 10% less carbon dioxide emissions than regular #2 heating oil. Those pollutants are causes of acid rain, smog, respiratory illness, and climate change.

Larry Chretian, executive director of Mass Energy, said: "The Bio-Heat program gives consumers an opportunity to choose a cleaner energy option that is at least partially produced in this country with resources that are better for heating systems and for the air we breathe."

Mass Energy is partnering with Mass BioFuel, a fuel delivery company based in Dedham.

QMC To Expand Marie Curry Walk Sept. 18

Quincy Medical Center (QMC) will expand the highly successful Marie Curry Walk to benefit women and men who are coping with a cancer diagnosis.

A new QMC Cancer Walk will be held Sunday, Sept. 18, at Pageant Field in Quincy, furthering the legacy of the Marie Curry Walk.

In seven years, Marie Curry Walk supporters have raised more than $1 million to provide screening mammography and breast cancer services at QMC for uninsured and underinsured South Shore women.

"Since 1998, this community has built a tremendous resource to ensure that South Shore women have access to vital breast cancer screening and detection," said Robert "Bob" Curry, founder of the Marie A. Curry Fund and chairman of the QMC Board of Trustees.

"It is now time to take our efforts to the next level to ensure that South Shore men, as well as women, have access to advanced, high quality detection and treatment for a full range of cancers."

BOB CURRY

HENRY BRADLEY

"The walk has meant so much to our family and friends over the past seven years," said Sean Curry. "Expanding the walk to benefit men that have been touched by cancer is outstanding. What a wonderful way to see our community come together."

The QMC Cancer Walk will continue to support the Marie A. Curry Fund, a permanent endowed fund, while also raising funds to benefit expanded cancer care services for both women and men.

Bob Curry will be joined by Henry "Hank" Bradley, director of Veterans Services for the City of Quincy, as honorary co-chairs for this year's QMC Cancer Walk.

Beechwood's Annual Cruise Most Successful Yet

Warm temperatures and a beaming Boston skyline hightlighted Beechwood on the Bay's annual "One of a Kind" cruise, which attracted a record 300 seagoers and funseekers.

More than 300 supporters boarded a three-deck Boston Harbor Cruiseliner at Marina Bay and toured Boston Harbor and the Harbor Islands. Proceeds from the benefit cruise will be directed to the city's multi-purpose Senior Center at Beechwood on the Bay, 440 East Squantum St.

"This year we celebrated our 10th cruise, and chose a new route that included a trip into Boston Harbor where the USS Constitution shot off a cannon saluter," said Sharron Beals, the center's executive director. "Then, for three hours we cruised around the islands."

Beals said this year's event was the center's most successful yet, and officials will be looking for more support next year.

So why is Mike Covais running for School Committee?

"It is my belief that nothing is more important in our free society than the education of the next generation of Americans."

Why NOW?

"Because here in Quincy, we are at an important crossroad. A new Quincy High and Central Middle School are to be built. Other schools need attention. I will use my real estate law background and experience for all of Quincy when the School Committee undertakes the actual construction of these projects."

Chabad South Of Boston To Reach Quincy Jews

Quincy will soon be home to a new Jewish outreach and community center called "Chabad South of Boston."

Chabad, an acronym for wisdom, understanding and knowledge, is a branch of Hassidic Judaism and an arm of the Chabad Lubavitch movement.

The movement follows the teachings of Rabbi Menachem Mendal Schneerson, known as the Lubavitcher Rebbe, a Chabad spiritual leader for 44 years.

His mission was to bring the Jewish spirit to as many people and places as possible. There are more than 2,400 Chabad centers worldwide, more than 20 in Massachusetts alone.

Chabad South of Boston has begun with a varied group of programs to attract people from the community, such as holiday events, monthly Friday night gatherings, hospital visitations and such.

All of them are aimed to help the Jewish community to identify proudly with its heritage.

The monthly Friday night service will be held this week on Sept. 2 at 7 p.m. at 111 Lancaster St., Quincy Point.

Chabad South of Boston is offering a Hebrew Reading Crash Course to all members of the Jewish community to prepare them for the High Holidays.

The course is designed to teach those with little or no basic knowledge of the Hebrew language how to read Hebrew in five easy lessons.

The course focuses on teaching the Hebrew alphabet and reading skills. In one five-hour session, participants learn enough Hebrew to follow along in a prayer book.

All students will receive a copy of a Hebrew primer which will enable them to practice reading at home. By the end of the course, students are noticeably more at ease reading the basic prayers in Hebrew.
